Mystery Sailor Sought As Keene's Son Denies Briefcase Was Father's

Seaman Must Have Tied Knots in Death Rope, Sheriff Asserts.

Doctor Discloses Wound Over Eye

D. C. Real Estate Man's Own Portfolio Found in His Office.

The briefcase which was tied around the wounded neck of the murdered Charles F. Keene last night became an essential clew toward solution of his murder.

Lieut. Charles F. Keene, jr., last night told The Post his father's briefcase is accounted for—that it is in the office space he occupied in the Union Trust Company building.

The son was at his mother's apartment in the Fairfax Hotel last night waiting for Maryland State Police Sergeant Marlin Brubaker, who was en route to Washington with the briefcase and the other articles found when the 63-year-old real estate man was pulled from Chesapeake Bay.

New Evidence.

Sergt. Brubaker, who is leading the investigation into the disappearance and murder of Keene on the Norfolk and Washington steamship District of Columbia May 14, left Crisfield at 6:30 o'clock last night, bound first to headquarters at Baltimore and thence to Washington.

The evidence pointed to a sailor as the killer. Fishermen at Crisfield said that only a seafaring man could have tied the knot in the rope which bound the briefcase to Keene's neck. It was what is known as a "dredge knot."

Two bits of evidence discovered yesterday pointed more definitely to the finding of a coroner's inquest on Smith Island in the lower bay—that Keene was murdered by a person or persons unknown to the investigating body.

This was the new evidence:

A statement by Dr. William F. Stout, who first examined the body when it was towed ashore, that there was a wound over Keene's eye.

Testimony by persons who viewed the body when it was first brought up on Smith Island that in addition to the weighted briefcase tied around the dead man's neck there was a marlin rope tied around his chest. Investigators believed that a heavy weight was tied to this, but it had been severed by something sharp on the bottom of the bay.

About the wound Dr. Stout said: "From the condition of the blood clotted in the wound, that blow over the eye was inflicted at least three-quarters of an hour before the man died."

Blasts Suicide Theory.

The evidence of this blow was another attack at the suicide theory and indicated, investigators said, Keene may have defended himself against some intruder in the narrow cabin on the night boat.

They pointed out that the course taken by the bullet, which coursed up through the neck and into the brain, almost vertically if Keene was standing up when he was shot, was also an indication Keene may have defended himself against a person armed with a pistol.

A man attacked by a gunman, police officers said, would either stand quietly and accede to demands, or grapple with him, or throw back his head in an effort to escape a shot.

If Keene did either of the two latter things, there would be a good chance a bullet striking him in the neck would take the course it did.

Sailor Tied Knots.

Capt. Edward McK. Johnson, of the Maryland State police, yesterday entered the case, joining Sergt. Brubaker at Crisfield as final clews were rounded up on Smith Island. He returned to Baltimore late in the afternoon.

Sheriff William H. Dryden, of Somerset County, last night told The Post that there is no doubt in his mind Keene was murdered. He said he saw nothing in the evidence even to hint the real estate man might have taken his own life.

Dryden is positive the person to seek in the case is a seafaring man, a person familiar with knots used around ships. The four knots in the cotton rope which fastened the briefcase were tied by a sailor, he asserted.

The sheriff said two medicine tablets which were among the ar-

Europe Today

Post Publisher and Editor Collaborate in Analyzing Momentous Events Abroad.

Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Post, and Felix Morley, its editor, sailed for Europe May 19. They do not expect to return to the United States until July.

As Mr. Morley explains in the following article, the two will collaborate in a series of dispatches examining various phases of the European situation of particular importance to the United States. These articles will appear at intervals, as received by The Post.

Mr. Meyer's deep knowledge of international, financial and economic problems needs no advertisement. Mr. Morley for many years has been a student of European political and labor trends, supplementing his studies in that field by a long visit to the Orient.

The Post believes that the two form a unique combination for a thorough and thought-provoking analysis of what is vital for America in the present European crisis. The Post takes pleasure in presenting this series to its readers.

S. S. Normandie—To those with any taste for traveling a trip to Europe is always pleasant. It is also, from the viewpoint of a Washington newspaper, important at this particular time.

Congress remains in session. The Supreme Court controversy is not yet finally settled. With all the interesting and vital problems which now face the United States, why should the publisher and the editor of The Post select the next few weeks as the psychological period in which to make a survey of western Europe?

These are the questions which Eugene Meyer and I have lately discussed at length. And the conclusions which seem inescapable provide a natural foreword for the series of articles which we plan, as occasion warrants, to send back to The Post.

These articles will be only incidentally concerned with current events as they transpire during our stay abroad. They will, rather, endeavor to examine the forces behind these events and to assess their importance for America in a way which should give the dispatches of resident correspondents more meaning in the ensuing months. And if portents mean anything these forthcoming months in Europe are destined to be of far greater significance to our own country than many of us yet realize.

Europe Still Mecca For Patrons of Art.

"The Decline of the West," of which Oswald Spengler wrote so convincingly some years ago, has proceeded so far that none can longer deny the trend. Its effects can be discerned even on this pa-

Reich Speeding 4 Submarines to Spanish Waters

Nazi Leaders Confer With Hitler Secretly Over Blockade Crisis.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 2.—While four German submarines sped toward Spanish waters, Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler discussed the German-Spanish crisis tonight before Nazi party leaders from all sections of Germany in a closed gathering.

In a two-hour speech, Der Fuehrer declared that not only Germany's armed strength but the strength of her leadership are prerequisites to the Reich's recovery of world prestige and power.

The submarines sent to Spain were to join the German fleet which remained in those waters despite Germany's withdrawal from the international nonintervention committee and its neutral patrol of the Iberian peninsula.

Incident Held Ended.

Government spokesmen reiterated that Monday's bombardment of Almeria, Spanish government port, by German warships had ended the incident involving the Spanish government's air bombing of the German pocket battleship Deutschland and the killing of 26 sailors.

But the Reich appeared determined to prevent a recurrence. The submarines and the fleet are free to act independently, now that the ships are not participating in the international patrol.

Naval authorities would not state the exact number of warships now off Spain, but available records indicate the force under Admiral Hermann von Fischel consists of the armored cruiser Admiral Scheer, a half dozen torpedo boats and an undetermined number of auxiliary ships.

The cruiser Leipzig sailed for Spain Monday, and the damaged Deutschland will remain in the area off the Isle of Mallorca at her commander's request—whom the naval office commended for his "excellent spirit."

The fleet was under orders to fire upon any menacing Spanish warship or airplane, at sight.

There was no apparent reaction

Presbyterians In U. S. Parley Renounce War

Amendment to Confession Will Allow Decisions by Individuals.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, June 2.—Commissioners of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America acted late today to renounce war as the 149th assembly of the church came to a close.

Despite considerable opposition they instructed a committee to draft an amendment to the confession of faith and catechisms which would renounce war "as a method of settling international disputes."

The confession now says that "Christians * * * may, under the New Testament, lawfully wage war."

While the amendment would express the church's opposition to war, communicants still would be permitted to determine whether it was right or wrong.

The committee will report back next year to the 150th assembly in Philadelphia, which may submit the proposal to the 276 presbyteries for ratification.

The assembly acted in the face of defeat of a proposed amendment which would have deleted sanction of war from the confession. The proposal lacked three votes of receiving approval by two-thirds of the presbyteries in the last year.

It adopted at the same time a pronouncement remembering "with pride the grand history of our church and those who felt it to be their Christian duty to defend our Nation," and reaffirming "our patriotic devotion to our country and our willingness to do our duty as our conscience shall direct."

One of the objectives of the renunciation of war is to permit Presbyterians to become conscientious objectors to military training.

The commissioners decided to take no action on a resolution from Dr. John A. MacCallum, of Philadelphia, which would have had the church give its moral support and clothing and medicine to the loyalist government in the Spanish revolution.

Transit Firm Asks Higher Capital Fares

Trolley, Bus Returns 'Meager,' Utility Says in Plea.

4 Rides for 35 Cents Basis of Plea for More Revenue.

A petition seeking a further increase in street car and bus fares was presented to the Public Utilities Commission yesterday by the Capital Transit Co.

The petition, if granted, would raise the token fare to four for 35 cents (an average of 8¾ cents). The present token fare is four for 30 cents (a 7½-cent average).

In presenting the petition, company officials, who said their returns have been "meager," cited an increase in wages of $228,000, and declared the coming year would see their taxes increased by some $150,000.

The text of the petition, signed by E. D. Merrill, president, follows:

"Since the filing on June 19, 1936, of the petition of the Capital Transit Co., for changes in rates of fare the company has found it necessary to again increase wages of employes effective April 1, 1937, which involves a further increase in operating expenses of approximately $228,000 per annum.

"In view of the meager return received by the company at the time of filing the original petition, and by reason of the foregoing increase in wage rates, the relief prayed for in the original petition is insufficient and will not afford this petitioner that which it should have if it is to properly and efficiently function and if it is to have the necessary revenues to meet partially the said wage increases.

"It therefore becomes imperative to amend the petition by substituting in the first prayer thereof a token rate of 8¾ cents for the token rate prayed therein for of 8 1-3 cents, and the petition is hereby so amended."

The original petition also asked continuance of the 10-cent cash fare and resumption of the $1.25 weekly pass. Permission to return to the $1.25 weekly pass has already been granted by the commission, and the company has been selling them since January 1.

A hearing on the petition as amended by yesterday's demand will be held by the commission June 14, at 10 a. m.

The utility's request to boost the price of tokens is the second it has made within the past year. In a demand bitterly opposed by the Federation of Citizens Associations, it first sought to have the token price raised from four for 30 cents to three for a quarter.

Slave Grandsons Return to Work Long Island Fields

Hicksville, N. Y., June 2 (U.P.).—Descendants of the colored slaves Johan Dixie carried South in 1800 to work in the cotton fields are coming back by the truckload to work on the plantations of Long Island, because the WPA has put all the farm hands to work building sidewalks and doing other odd jobs in the villages.

Farmers of the villages banded together today and decided they must go South to obtain laborers to harvest their truck crops this year.

So, from North Carolina, Virginia, Georgia, Florida and Alabama hundreds of colored men will be transported to the farms of the island to work from early dawn to dusk in the fields where their ancestors—Kru-men from Africa's windward coast—slaved for Johan Dixie until he hustled them off to South Carolina on a boat and sold them on the slave mart.

Wife's Suit Claims Spouse, Beaten at Bridge, Was Cruel

A husband who was resentful of his wife's superiority at cards was named defendant in a suit for limited divorce in District Court yesterday. The wife contended she was treated cruelly by her spouse after she and her sister had beaten the husband and a brother-in-law at cards.

The wife, Mrs. Gladys Virginia Steele, said that she and her sister had combined to beat her husband and the sister's husband in card games. Steel became infuriated and was cruel to her, she said, through Attorney Jean M. Boardman. The couple was married in 1936. They have no children.

Wallis Once Renounced Duke, London Hears on Wedding Day; Defiant Rural Vicar Officiating

Mrs. Warfield, Urged by Baldwin, Signed Renunciation.

Copyright, 1937.

London, June 2.—On the eve of the wedding of the Duke of Windsor to Wallis Warfield in the flower-bedecked Chateau de Cande at Monts, France, a few high officials of Great Britain were tonight sighing regretfully over the failure of the strategy of Premier Baldwin to prevent the marriage—which at one tense moment was but a hair-line from success.

For in a hysterical moment, following her flight from Fort Belvedere to France, the then Mrs. Simpson signed a renunciation of her love for Edward VIII at the insistence of Baldwin and his emissaries, and this document now rests in the carefully guarded archives of the British government.

The signing of this document by Mrs. Simpson, giving up the King and renouncing her hopes of being England's Queen, is one of the reasons Baldwin and the government have waged a relentless battle against any official recognition of the marriage and against the former King's efforts to have the American woman rated a member of the royal family.

Renunciation Substantiated.

There is no questioning of the authenticity of this information. It not only comes from an unimpeachable source, but there is strong corroborative evidence to substantiate it.

It is now known that Premier Baldwin engineered Mrs. Simpson's flight from Fort Belvedere to France in what was an eleventh hour effort to save Edward's throne. The premier felt, according to the information, there was no chance of success in swaying either the King or Mrs. Simpson so long as they were together.

The strategem almost worked for after the long motor trip across France, following the emotional scenes preceding her departure, Mrs. Simpson is said to have arrived at Cannes in a state bordering on nervous prostration.

She is then said to have informed Lord Brownlow, lord in waiting and lifelong friend of the King, who had accompanied her at Edward's request, that the affair "had become too complicated for endurance." Consequently she was ready to renounce Edward. A statement was prepared, at Baldwin's suggestion, and signed by Mrs. Simpson. A press release embodying her decision was prepared.

"Irrevocable" Decision.

The distraught woman is then said to have asked Lord Brownlow to reach Baldwin on the telephone so she might convey the news to him herself, before she told the King her decision was irrevocable.

But while the connection with the premier was being sought, Edward himself called "the woman I love," according to the story. Staggered by her intention and learning no final action had as yet been taken, the King employed all his persuasive powers and, exercising a woman's prerogative, Wallis changed her mind and canceled the Baldwin call. The press release never was issued.

But the copy of her agreement, bearing her signature, remains in the hands of the British government, carefully guarded.

And, although Baldwin lost in his effort to prevent the wedding, his hand was strengthened by the evidence of contemplated renunciation on the part of Wallis, and he is said to have used it skilfully in the fight to make her no more than the Duchess of Windsor—despite the "H. R. H." embroidered on the articles of her trousseau.

Miss Earhart Ends Hop to Venezuela

Miami, Fla., June 2 (AP).—An easy jump of 750 miles, the second leg of her world-girdling aerial adventure, put Amelia Earhart in South America today with no more water to cross until she starts the hazardous flight across the South Atlantic from Natal, Brazil, to Africa.

Pan-American Airways over whose route the aviatrix has flown since she left Miami yesterday, reported she landed at Caripito, a little oil town in Venezuela, at 10:18 a. m. (Eastern standard time), after a 4-hour flight from San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Miss Earhart probably will be content with the hop to Paramaribo for tomorrow's traveling and make a 1,200-mile cruise to Fortaleza, Brazil, the next day.

Blazing Freighter Asks Aid of Navy

Manila (Thursday), June 3 (AP).—A fire raging in her holds, the German freighter Oliva radioed an appeal to the United States Navy here today to rush a destroyer or airplanes to her side to remove two officers and three sailors reported badly burned.

The stricken vessel gave her position as 120 miles southwest of Manila. She carried no passengers.

House Group Approves Tax Inquiry Plan

Formal Adoption Today Forecast; Maverick Halts Stampede.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration's stampede to investigate tax avoidance by the wealthy was slowed down momentarily in the House yesterday by unexpected objections to "sudden" consideration, and insistence on House "prerogatives."

Called up for immediate passage, the tax investigation resolution approved by the Senate yesterday was routed through the House Rules Committee instead.

Two hours later the committee approved the resolution, with several modifying changes. It will be considered and probably adopted by the House today.

Temporary Delay.

An objection by Representative Maury Maverick, of Texas, liberal New Dealer, yesterday halted the House rush to approve the inquiry without previous committee consideration.

"We are constantly accused of being rubber stamps," said Maverick. "I do not admit that, but I do not believe that anything like this should be so suddenly considered. * * * I am tired of people coming up here and giving some mysterious reason why I should do something. I want to know the real reason."

Chairman John J. O'Connor, of the House Rules Committee, joined in the Maverick protest. He charged the resolution "surrendered" Congressional powers by permitting the investigating committee to "authorize an employe of the Treasury to go out and hold hearings and

Counsel Blames Ticket-Fixing On Higher-Ups

Winfield Defense Asserts Officials Approved Cancellations.

Tickets introduced into evidence as having been canceled by Policeman Welford E. Winfield, former traffic division officer, accused of alleged fixing practices, bore the names of Inspector B. A. Lamb and other of his superior officers, Attorney Charles Ford, representing the defendant, charged yesterday in a spirited session before the police trial board.

Winfield was accused of canceling tickets without proper authority "so to do."

The trial board was told by Ford that one of the tickets in question was "fixed" at the request of Inspector Lamb, former police supervisor of traffic. Another, he asserted, bore the name of Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward M. Welliver as the one who requested cancellation.

Other Officials Named.

Other police and District officials cited by Ford in his defense plea as having requested Winfield to cancel parking tickets included Capt. Milton D. Smith, commander of the Traffic Division; Lieut. Frank F. Varney, of the Traffic Division; Sergt. John Agnew, former chief of the traffic records office, and numerous members of the Government and Police Department.

Winfield, he said, until his recent transfer into another precinct, was "authorized to adjust ticket complaints at the traffic division."

Charges of "frame-up" and "high-handed" methods of obtaining evidence against Policeman Welford E. Winfield also were made as nearly a score of witnesses waited to testify.

The all-day hearing ended in disorder last night and Inspector Ed-

Religious Service Cheers 'World's Greatest Lovers.'

Picture story of the romance—Page 16.

The greatest love story of its generation moved to a climax today with the wedding of the Duke of Windsor, who put aside the throne of Great Britain, and the beautiful, dark-eyed Wallis Warfield, for whom he renounced his throne.

And almost at the time the strains of the wedding march were to peal forth, the dramatic intensity that has gripped their unparalleled romance since its inception was heightened by two last-minute developments, one of which at least was likely to have a complicated aftermath.

For on the eve of the wedding it was revealed in London that the British government had in its archives documents signed by Mrs. Warfield in which she renounced the King of England as her future husband and signified her intention to terminate her love affair.

Only a few hours earlier, a rural vicar, the Rev. R. Anderson Jardine, of St. Paul's Parish, Darlington, England, braved the ire of the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Anglican Church by coming to Monts, France, to marry the Duke and Mrs. Warfield. He explained his daring by saying: "I prefer to die rather than see my King married outside the church."

Vicar Defies Church.

By the Associated Press.

Monts, France, June 2.—A resolute English vicar, without the approval of the Anglican Church, tomorrow was to marry the man who was his King and the beautiful, dark-eyed woman for whom the King gave up his throne.

The religious ceremony was assured for the Duke of Windsor and Wallis Warfield by the unexpected appearance of the determined Rev. R. Anderson Jardine, vicar of St. Paul's Church, Darlington, England.

Known as the "poor man's parson" for his work among the slums of Liverpool, the Rev. R. A. Jardine proclaimed:

"I prefer to die rather than see my King married outside the church."

So at last the cup of happiness for the world's best known lovers seemed nearly full—their union was assured of religious blessing, said to have been desired by both the duke and his bride, and Edward's mother, Queen Mary.

The Anglican Church, frowning upon Mrs. Warfield's two divorces, refrained from giving official sanction.

But the graying, fiftyish, Rev. Mr. Jardine did not ask church approval for his decision to wed the couple.

"I did not consult any ecclesiastical authority," he said. "I consulted only my own conscience."

The religious ceremony was to be at noon, immediately after the civil service at 11:30 a. m.

The vicar was a member of the gay wedding party that gathered for dinner at the chateau tonight.

Tomorrow's bridegroom was in a lively humor and told his guests how he was the "sole inventor" of the "Wallis Cocktail" which was served them. Dinner was held up for the late arrival of Baron and Baroness Eugene de Rothschild, who were the Duke's hosts at Enzesfeld castle, in Austria.

Lights glowed in the castle until a late hour, as the wedding party went through a long menu, which included lobster, leg of lamb, roast duck, French pastry and vintage wines.

The wedding was to be in the ancient, moss-covered chateau where Edward and Mrs. Warfield have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bedaux, of New York.

The service was to be in the salon, with its dark oak paneled walls and great fireplace. The room once was a cell for monks who lived in solitude on bread and water in penance for infractions of their discipline.

The chateau organ was to begin the wedding march promptly on the half-hour before noon.

Black-Connery Wage, Hour Bill Held Valid By Jackson at Joint Committee's Hearing

By Sidney Olson.

The Black-Connery wages-hours bill, keystone of the New Deal's latest effort to establish fair labor standards in interstate commerce, is "airtight as to Constitutionality," according to Robert H. Jackson, Assistant Attorney General.

Jackson, first witness before the joint House-Senate committee hearings which opened yesterday, made this declaration during a long and exhaustive questioning by the committee members. He also endeavored to lay at rest fears expressed by several committeemen that the measure's enactment would destroy labor's powers of collective bargaining through centralizing wage-making authority in a Washington board; and declared his view that minimum-wage and maximum-hour standards to be set up would not "become frozen" by regulation.

Jackson, immaculate in a fresh white suit, was undisturbed during his testimony by the sudden appearance of a bluebird which swooped through one of the tall windows of the hearing-room and fluttered about the ceiling.

Committee members were uncertain whether the omen of the bluebird was good or bad. One audibly wondered whether the bird was Maeterlinck's or Gen. Hugh Johnson's "bluebird."

But the shadow of the long-defunct "Blue Eagle" appeared to hang over the committee throughout the session, as numerous questions were driven at Jackson in an effort to discover any relationship between this bill and the deceased NRA.

Jackson reminded the questioners, after Senator Rush Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, had asked him if the measure would not make mandatory the provisions that had been voluntary under the NRA, that the present bill contemplates no codes, and thus will not allow employers to set up standards for their industries as a whole.

He stated that in his view, further, there was no possibility that the act would limit wages in any way. He said:

"The whole purpose of the bill is to elevate the floor of wages in the country."

Considerable concern was also

Two Perish, Ten Prostrated As Mercury Soars to 89 Here

Two deaths, one by drowning, and ten prostrations were chalked up yesterday against a blistering sun that sent the mercury soaring to 89 at 3:45 p. m. from a low of 72 at 5 a. m.

The first victim was Martin L. Porter, 58, colored, a carpenter, of 1217 Mount Olivet road northeast. He was found dead in bed at daybreak. Coroner MacDonald said death was due to a heart condition, aggravated by the heat.

Indirectly attributed to the weather was the death by drowning of George Walker, 16, colored, Ninth and Arlington Ridge road, Virginia, who sank as he tried to swim from the shore of the Washington Airport basin to a motor boat anchored 40 yards away. He was pulled ashore by Norman Kenny, 15, colored,

Court Assails Ballot Frauds; Sentences Five

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, June 2.—Federal Judge Albert L. Reeves pounded his bench for emphasis today as he assailed county authorities for ignoring "a perfect catalogue of State crimes" now disclosed by the Government's purge of November election frauds.

"There is somebody, some influence, some system back of all this," he declared in his court.

He referred to testimony of wholesale vote thefts and ballot tampering, developed since the Government began its sweeping investigation last winter. Five defendants sentenced by the judge today brought to 45 the number of politicians and precinct workers who have been given sentences ranging from probation to five years in prison.

Admit Law Violations.

"Defense attorneys in the cases I have heard have admitted wholesale violations of State laws," the judge declared. "When I have instructed the juries I have set forth a perfect catalogue of State crimes.

"Yet the pathetic cry of an oppressed people has fallen on heedless and deaf ears. * * * Those who are elected to protect the people from oppression and prosecute violations have not acted. There has not been a move to prosecute. Not a word has been in protest.

Remarking the similarity of testimony in all the government trials, the judge said "indications were that there was an organized system to change and miscount ballots. * * * Any reasonable man would conclude there is somebody in the background.

"These defendants were instructed to do what they did. Somebody here, probably prominent, has induced these people to do these things."

Assails "Using" Italians.

Referring to voters' testimony they had been threatened by "ruffians" at the polls, the judge said, "here in Kansas City are those who desire political victory who use Italian immigrants for accomplishing their purposes at the polls. * * *

"I believe Premier Mussolini would be justified in making representations to the State Department at Washington in protest of those who are making criminals of Italians in Kansas City."

The judge ordered the heaviest sentence of the prolonged investigation—five years' imprisonment—for Robert Strohm, a Democratic precinct captain, today. Other sentences:

Thomas Audley, Democratic challenger, three years in prison; Gene Riley, Democratic judge, two years in a Federal reformatory; Mrs. Irene Ervin, Republican clerk, 60 days in jail. George Arnold, a Democratic judge who pleaded guilty and testified for the Government, was placed on two years' probation.

Politics and People

Gov. Earle 'Proves' He Is Logical Man to Address Southerners—and Maybe in 1940 . . .

By Franklyn Waltman

FOR the Democratic Presidential nomination, ladies and gentlemen, we give you: George Howard Earle, Southerner.

WALTMAN.

Although this is the season for national political conventions there are none this year and there will be none until 1940. But as surely as yesterday was a hot day in Washington, the Governor of Pennsylvania last night was put in nomination for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

The nomination, to be accurate, was projected for the most part by Gov. Earle and his press-agent in connection with his appearance as annual speaker and guest of honor at the dinner of the Southern Society in the Willard Hotel. It should be mentioned however, that Senator Robert R. Reynolds, when introducing the distinguished guest, apparently forgot himself for a moment and went off into the peroration of a nominating speech. But he pulled up before mentioning the Presidency and thus did not commit the North Carolina delegation in 1940.

Why the Governor of Pennsylvania, born in the Keystone State and a one-time Republican, should be invited to address the Southern Society of Washington has been a mystery—more perplexing than the Keene murder. But the Governor and his press-agent cleared up the mystery.

"This reception to the Governor of Pennsylvania by the Southern Society," asserted the press agent in a mimeographed six-page release identifying Mr. Earle, "is an evidence of the breaking up of the sectional lines which have for nearly a hundred years divided the North from the South, and in that way is an event of historical importance.

"This honor extended to the Governor of the Keystone State is also largely the result of widely publicized (a candid admission for a press agent) liberal philosophy and human sympathy which actuates his public policies in the interest of the welfare of the people of his Commonwealth.

"It is also greatly influenced by the fact that Governor Earle 'went South' in January, 1916, for his wife, who was Miss Huberta Potter, of Bowling Green, Ky., and whose uncle was the well-known Congressman Jim McKenzie, of that State and who became known as 'Quinine Jim' because of his activities in the Congress for the removal of the tariff on quinine so necessary in the South in the days of malarial fever."

After that fulsome explanation it should be plain to the most obtuse why Gov. Earle is the one and only appropriate speaker to address the Southern Society of Washington. The Governor, however, in his address and on his own behalf, projected even more cogent reasons.

"From my present home," he asserted, "it is only an hour's drive to the Mason-Dixon line. From my birthplace in Chester County it is even closer. Tradition alone makes that line significant. Whether I am north of it, in my home, or south of it, on my farm in Cambridge, Md., I find men and women occupied with similar problems, similar responsibilities."

Southerners learned from Gov. Earle last night things about their political influence they never knew before. Those who remembered how a part of the solid South followed Bishop James Cannon into the Republican Party in 1928 and also remembered that if the entire solid South, with Kentucky, Tennessee and Maryland thrown in, had voted for Mr. Hoover in 1932, President Roosevelt still would have won, were perplexed when Gov. Earle declared:

"The South is rich in great traditions, and not least of these is the tradition of Democracy. Through long years, and some of them dark years, the South never faltered in its devotion to the inspired ideals of Thomas Jefferson, and to the party which he founded.

"All America may well give thanks today for that devotion. Had it not been for the solid South in the bitter days of 1932, when the dark forces of fascism and communism were gathering for a final assault on our American liberties, who can say what course our Nation would have taken?

"Without the solid South, bulwark and Gibraltar of Democracy, Franklin Delano Roosevelt would not have been President of the United States. I need not tell you how that solid, united support of the South saved our Nation from destruction. All that is history. What I do want to point out is that the same united action, the same solidarity of the South, promises to be our salvation in the future."

Perhaps what Gov. Earle really meant was that had it not been for the votes of the South, President Roosevelt would not have been nominated at Chicago in 1932 and it may be that when he mentioned "our salvation" he was speaking rhetorically and really meant that a united, solid South at the 1940 convention might be the salvation of George Howard Earle, Southerner.

* * * *

The advantage which Gov. Earle possesses in this race for the Democratic Presidential nomination were subtly pointed out by his anonymous press agent. For instance, on page four of the mimeographed press-release, we learn that "Gov. Earle is descended from a long line of ancestors, going back to the pilgrim, John Howland, who came to America in the Mayflower in 1620." Aside from being a bid for the New England vote, this statement demonstrates how invulnerable this son of the South is against such fellows as Jesse Jones, Henry Wallace, Frank Murphy and John L. Lewis, who, like Topsy, just groved. Let them speak up and claim a long line of ancestors" or withdraw from this race.

And again Gov. Earle becomes irresistable when his press agent on page 5 of his release informs us that "he is devoted to his family and he and his wife are the proud parents of four splendid sons. No, sirree, no rascal can say that George Howard Earle, Southerner, beats his wife or doesn't love his children.

But away with scoffing and cynicism and listen to the words of that golden-voiced orator and indorser of cigarettes, Senator Reynolds, introducing our hero from Pennsylvania.

"Tonight we are fortunate in having with us a man who understands fully the conditions with which we are confronted," boomed the Senator. "He comes to speak to you with a heart that is warm for the South of which we are so proud, and as evidence of his appreciation of our own beloved Southland, when shortly he had reached the age of maturity he began to cast his eyes over the face of the universe in search of a mate for life, those eyes finally rested and feasted themselves upon a fair flower of the State of Kentucky, noted for its feminine beauty, and from that State he selected his desired life's mate, who accompanies him here tonight.

"And, my friends, he arrives at a time when the North, the South, the East and the West are united and when the true statesman owes allegiance to all."

Had not Senator Reynolds stopped at that moment to present George Howard Earle, Southerner, he would have nominated him for the Presidency.

Meanwhile, Senator Carter Glass received from Columbia University the tenth honorary degree of doctor of laws conferred on him—seven of them since the New Deal started. The Columbia citation in conclusion asserted that the life of Carter Glass "makes happy the old college of Alexander Hamilton as it repeats, thank God, the last words of John Adams: 'Thomas Jefferson still lives.'"

Dr. Butler Forecasts 3 Big Parties by 1944

New York, June 2 (AP).—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, predicting a three-party alignment in the United States by 1944, sailed today to attend meetings of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace at Geneva.

"By 1944 there will be two liberal parties and a radical party; semi-socialistic and semifascist." Dr. Butler, president of Columbia University, said upon boarding the French liner Normandie.

Airplane Drive, FordComplaint Occupy C. I. O.

Over 150 Cases Filed With NLRB on Layoffs of Auto Workers.

Plans for organization drives in leading airplane plants and word that charges had been filed against the Ford Motor Co. with the National Labor Relations board came yesterday from a conference between John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers. Present also was R. T. Frankensteen, Detroit director for the auto union.

Martin said more than 150 specific cases were included in charges against Ford at the Detroit and Somerville, Mass., offices of the labor board. They were said to be concerned chiefly with alleged discharges of workmen because of union activity, barred by the national labor relations act.

The company was understood to maintain that the layoffs were due to seasonal declines in production, though the union held that many old employes who had never been laid off before now were separated from their jobs.

Lewis told reporters the three at the conference had discussed organization problems, as well as the plans to unionize aircraft factories and to broaden their activities in the automobile field.

Demand Investigation.

"I am informed," he said, "that the sentiment of Ford workers is the same as that of workers in the Chrysler and General Motors plants, previously organized, and that the enrollment in the union is enthusiastic and gratifying."

The C. I. O. and the auto union, he added, are demanding an official investigation of the beating of union organizers at the Ford plant at Dearborn, Mich., last week, and he added he had advised the grand jury there had been ample evidence to sustain charges made against Ford men by the union.

Douglas, Boeing, Lockheed, Consolidated and Pratt-Whitney aircraft plants are to feel the C. I. O.-U. A. W. organization drive, Martin said, though details of the campaign were not revealed.

Lewis also took occasion during the day to declare that the Republic Steel Co. should be required to give up arms which its chairman, Tom Girdler, was quoted as having said the company possesses.

Assails "Super Gunman."

"We don't believe any super gunman like Tom Girdler should be allowed to influence policies affecting labor in the United States," Lewis said. "There is no more excuse for his plants to be armed than there is for the strikers to have caches of arms."

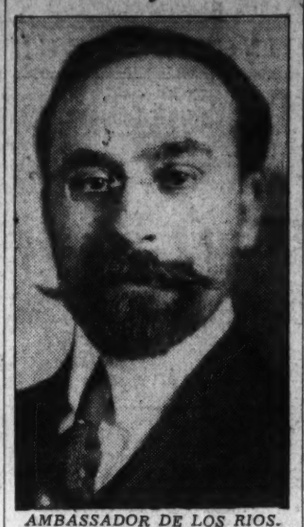
Meanwhile, in another labor development, the National Labor Relations Board revealed that it has petitioned the Circuit Court of Appeals at New York City to restrain Remington, Rand, Inc., from unfair labor practices.

On March 13, the board decided against the company in a case that grew out of the violent strike at plants of the concern last year. The company was ordered to re-employ large numbers of former workers and to refrain from pactices complained of. Advice that Remington, Rand is not complying with the order, coupled with current charges of unfair labor practices by the company, led to the board's filing the court petition.

Charles Fahy, general counsel, and Robert B. Watts, associate general counsel, filed the case for the board.

At the same time the board dismissed the case against the United Fruit Co. after finding that two fruit handlers, Richard Schuidt and Gus Carlson, were not refused employment because of union activity.

Envoy From Spain Summoned Home To Study Conflict



AMBASSADOR DE LOS RIOS.

Spain's Ambassador to the United States, Don Fernando de los Rios, has been summoned to Valencia for a governmental conference, the Spanish Embassy disclosed yesterday.

Denying the summons was in the nature of a recall, an embassy spokesman said the conference will be attended by all the republic's envoys. They will study conditions first-hand and acquaint their government with the extent of public sympathy abroad.

The Ambassador will leave some time this month. In his absence, Senor Enrique de la Casa, First Secretary, will be charge d'affaires.

Ambassador de los Rios was named Spanish Ambassador to the United States last September, after the resignation of Luis Calderon, who quit the great stone embassy at 2801 Sixteenth street northwest because he felt "unable to co-operate with certain tendencies within the new Spanish government."

The 60-year-old diplomat was appointed by the Leftist government, headed by Francisco Largo Caballero. The latter, a Socialist, recently resigned in a governmental crisis, and was not named to the present cabinet.

De los Rios is well known to the United States. His first visit was in 1919, when as technical adviser to the International Congress of Labor he visited the Capital. He also lectured on Spanish culture at Columbia University in 1928.

Long identified with the republican movement in Spain, Ambassador de los Rios played an important part in the historical events leading to the collapse of the Bourbon dynasty in 1931. Later, under Republican administrations, he served for a time as minister of justice and foreign affairs. To him is attributed the law decreeing freedom of worship, as well as the one providing for secularizing of the cemeteries and the proposed law on divorce.

At the outbreak of the present civil war last July, Ambassador de los Rios was representing his country at Geneva. He also was rector of the University of Madrid.

The Spanish envoy is perhaps better known in the academic field. Named numerary professor of Spanish political law by royal order in 1911, he completed courses and taught at leading European and Mexican universities. In April of 1934 he was called to King College of London University and in 1934 was named a member of the International Institute of Public Law.

Biddle Tenders Envoy Papers To Polish Chief

New Ambassador Conveys Roosevelt's Greetings at Warsaw.

By the Associated Press.

Warsaw, June 2.—Anthony Drexel Biddle, jr., new United States Ambassador to Poland, presented his credentials today to President Ignace Moscicki.

He conveyed President Roosevelt's personal greetings and wishes for Poland's well-being, emphasizing he would seek to strengthen relations between the United States and Poland.

President Moscicki praised President Roosevelt's efforts to improve general world relationships.

Biddle, who had been minister to Norway, replaced John Cudahy, of Granville, Wis., who became Ambassador to Poland in 1933 and recently was transferred to the post of Minister to the Irish Free State.

Ohio Governor 'Hopeful' After Steel Parley

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, June 2.—Gov. Martin L. Davey said tonight he was "hopeful" of an early settlement of the steel strike, after a conference today with officials of the Republic Steel Corporation and Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co.

The Governor met at the executive mansion in a closed conference with Tom Girdler, chairman of the Board of Republic Steel, and two other officials of Republic, and J. C. Argetsinger, vice president of Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co.

He said he hoped to confer Friday with representatives of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, which called the strike.

The Ohio Governor refused to comment on what took place in the conference, saying:

"If there is not too much said, I feel that progress can be made."

He said the conference followed a meeting yesterday with John Owens, regional organizer of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Steel Rioters Face Judge.

Chicago, June 2 (AP).—Sequels to Sunday's riot brought steel workers and sympathizers to felony court and a funeral home today.

Thirty-eight men and two women seized after the Memorial Day battle near the Republic Steel Corporation's South Chicago plant—some of them bandaged and limping—appeared before Judge Frank M. Padden on charges of conspiracy to commit an illegal act.

The women and John Nemeth, shot in the leg, were released without posting bond while bond for the other defendants was set at $500 each, pending a hearing June 23.

Approximately 300 persons, including relatives and union adherents, overtaxed the capacity of a private chapel in Indiana Harbor, Ind., during funeral rites for Kenneth Reed, employe of the Inland Steel Co. and one of the six men who lost their lives in the clash with police.

Eulogy Delivered.

Nicholas Fontecchio, a Committee for Industrial Organization leader, pronounced a brief eulogy before the body was removed to Reed's home town, Marion, Iowa.

A mass funeral was planned for the other five victims in South Chicago tomorrow.

Meanwhile, the week-old strike against three independent producers remained in a deadlock, with one authoritative source predicting a "long-drawn-out" stalemate.

22 in Hospitals.

Van A. Bittner, regional director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, declared the controversy could not be terminated until the steel companies signed a contract with his organization.

Twenty-two of the casualties remained in hospitals. Seven were reported in serious condition.

Republic, asserting its plants were operating at 40 per cent of capacity, cited the statements of its chairman that signing of a contract would lead to a "closed shop," and that he (Girdler) "hoped to God" he'd never meet Lewis.

Ford to Be Subpenaed.

Detroit, June 2 (AP).—A subpena summoning Edsel Ford, president and son of the founder of the Ford Motor Co., to a one-man grand jury inquiry into the beating of 18 union sympathizers a week ago, went unserved tonight.

Ford's attorneys moved to transfer the investigation from Common Pleas Judge Ralph W. Liddy, who summoned officials of suburban Dearborn, where Ford's giant Rouge plant is located.

Duncan C. McCrea, Wayne County prosecutor on whose petition Judge Liddy opened the inquiry, said process servers who went to Dearborn were unable to locate Edsel Ford or Harry H. Bennett, director of personnel for the Ford Co.

Roosevelt Mediation Sought.

Youngstown, Ohio, June 2 (AP).—The Steel Workers Organizing Committee demanded tonight, on the eve of a strategy conference here, that strike-bound producers fighting demands for bargaining contracts "carry their case" to President Roosevelt "or forever keep their peace."

Van A. Bittner, S. W. O. C. regional director, in a radio address at Hammond, Ind., declared:

"The S. W. O. C. challenges the Republic Steel Corporation, the Inland Steel Co. and the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. to carry their case to the Chief Executive of the United States * * * Let the steel companies accept this proposition or forever keep their peace."

Philip Murray, national S. W. O. C. chieftain, will meet key men from all sectors of the strike front at Youngstown tomorrow. Murray's lieutenants will attend from Chicago, Cleveland, Youngstown, Warren, Ohio; Canton, Ohio, and Buffalo, N. Y.

A. F. L. Drops N. Y. Locals.

New York, June 2 (AP).—The Central Trades and Labor Council tonight announced the suspension of 46 of its locals affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The latest move in the local struggle between the C. I. O. and the American Federation of Labor came as the result of an order issued by President William Green, of the federation, in Cincinnati Saturday.

Heart Balm Case Called 'Legalized Blackmail'

Los Angeles, June 2 (AP).—Judge Leslie Still dismissed today the $125,000 heart balm suit of Norine Crowder, 20, against Ceferino Garcia, Filipino boxer. The girl charged Garcia betrayed her and refused to marry her. Under cross-examination, she admitted the boxer paid her $10 weekly over a long period. Judge Still said the suit "verged on legalized blackmail."

Keene Death Probers in Conference

Mystery Sailor Who Tied Knots Is Sought As Keene's Son Denies Briefcase Was Father's

ticles found in the briefcase were located on Smith Island yesterday and were among the things being removed to headquarters at Baltimore by Brubaker. He said they were ordinary tablets used for relief of headaches or colds.

Family Attends Rites.

Lieut. Keene, who said he had not heard from Sergt. Brubaker or any policeman working on the case since he was notified Tuesday his father's body had been found, last night repeated his conviction his father was murdered.

Young Keene, whose resignation from the Navy becomes effective today, attended private services for his father yesterday at Joseph Gawler Sons, 1765 Pennsylvania avenue. Only the widow, the son and two cousins, Miss Elsie Needham and Thomas Keene, attended the rites at which the Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, chaplain of the Senate and rector of Epiphany Church, officiated.

Burial was in Whitfield Cemetery, Lanham, Md.

Had Only One Briefcase.

That the briefcase was not Keene's seemed substantiated last night. The son was positive his father had only one case and that it was at his former office. Previously, a distant cousin, Walter Blount, an attorney with the HOLC, had said that Keene carried only the traveling bag which was found in his stateroom when he embarked on the fatal trip to Norfolk.

The elder Keene had dropped in on Blount just before the boat sailed.

Keene's widow's reaffirmation of her belief her husband was murdered was among the local developments as Maryland authorities fought to dissipate the mystery surrounding the death.

Other developments were:

Charles M. Osborne, who shared an office with Keene in the Union Trust Building, identified from news photographs the pearl-handled pocket knife among the articles found in the brief case tied around the victim's neck.

Commenting on reports that the brief case hung to Keene's neck by a cotton rope, was tied by a complex knot familiar only to a seaman, an official of the Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co. stated that only plan hemp rope is used on the line's vessels and that few, if any, crew members are deep-sea sailors of the type that would know fancy knots.

Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, whose name was inscribed on a note found in one of Keene's pockets, told The Post he had never heard of the man, and a check of the files revealed no correspondence had ever passed between the two. "Mr. McDonald" was also jotted on a note. Wesley E. McDonald is Senator Reynolds' secretary, but he, too, was unable to place Keene.

Blount, the distant cousin and close friend of the real estate dealer, called the suicide theory "in direct conflict with Charley's whole life and nature."

Certain all along her husband was the victim of foul play, Mrs. Keene was emphatic yesterday in denouncing implications he committed suicide.

Associate Sure of Murder.

Osborne, interviewed in the downtown office which he shared with Keene, was sure his former associate did not kill himself. He recalled Keene was his usual self, neither despondent nor morose, when he sailed for Norfolk.

Relative to the three .32-caliber cartridges found in Keene's vest, Osborne remembered the victim once owned a pistol of that size.

"But I think he sold it some time ago," Osborne added.

Sergt. Brubaker, however, is not yet satisfied Keene did not kill himself. He concedes it is much easier to make it out as a case of murder, but he points to several things that suggest suicide.

Had .32 Pistol.

Here is the case for the suicide theory: In Keene's vest pocket were found three .32-caliber bullets. Keene, according to Brubaker, is known to have had a .32-caliber pistol at one time, and this cannot be found now. Brubaker says the bullet found in Keene's skull looks very much like a .32-caliber to him, but he says this is something to be decided by ballistics experts. One of the bullets found in Keene's vest pocket weighs 87 grains. The one found in the skull weighs 78½ grains.

Keene, on leaving Washington, said he was going to Norfolk to try to put through a real estate deal. According to Brubaker, nobody in Norfolk has come forward to say he expected to see Keene.

Keene is supposed to have told a friend a year ago that he saw "no reason to go on living."

If the elder Keene was murdered the murderer has given the police a veritable treasure of evidence.

It consists of a strange array of objects, tied to Keene's body, which kept it under water for two weeks.

Rope Important Clew.

To begin with, there was the leather briefcase. Inside this were an automobile jack, a tire iron, a mechanic's hammer, a nail file a fragment of a comb and various other articles.

The loaded briefcase was tied around Keene's neck by a cotton rope, and this may prove to be the best clew of all.

Could it have been the "red-faced man" who bought Keene a bottle of beer on the steamer the night of May 13?

If Keene committed suicide, he must first have loaded the brief case with the automobile jack and the other weighty articles. Then he must have seated himself on the sill of the window to his stateroom so that he would be sure to fall into the water once he shot himself.

But if that happened, how then account for the blood in his stateroom? There was a spot of blood the size of a quarter on the bedspread. There was blood on the wash basin. More important still, there was blood on the guard rail outside the stateroom, but about 10 feet aft.

Money Missing.

In the opinion of the physicians who examined the body, Keene must have died almost instantly once the bullet entered his brain. They do not think he could have walked across his stateroom and crawled out of the window.

There is the added and very important circumstance that Keene was carrying about $40. There apparently is no way to prove this. However, it is known he had at least $5 on him. On the Norfolk steamer he bought a bottle of coca cola and gave J. M. Eby, who was in charge of the stand, a $5 bill.

What happened to the change from this bill? In the stateroom the next morning the only money found was a nickel. No money was found on Keene's body. His wallet was missing and a trousers pocket was turned inside out.

Senate Girding To Earmark, Slash Relief Bill

Hopkins Appears Today Before Senate Group; Byrnes for Cut.

President Roosevelt's $1,500,000,000 relief bill, salvaged but laboring under a heavy burden of House amendments, yesterday headed into a new earmarking battle and a determined Senate effort to slash it $500,000,000.

Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, fresh from a hard-won House victory, again will defend his 1938 relief program at a meeting of a Senate Appropriations sub-committee summoned for 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, yesterday announced he will ask not only that the relief fund be reduced by one-third, but that communities bear 40 per cent of relief costs where they are able.

McCarran for Earmarking.

At the same time, Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, another members of the Appropriations Committee, disclosed he will seek the same $505,000,000 in relief earmarkings unsuccessfully attempted by three House blocs.

Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), Missouri, also came out for earmarkings, saying:

"I am opposed to lump sum appropriations."

Both McCarran and Clark also will support Byrnes' attempt to cut the relief fund $500,000,000.

It appeared yesterday a majority of the appropriations sub-committee on relief was in favor of the Byrnes slash, and a situation might develop paralleling House committee action.

A House sub-committee chopped $500,000,000 off the bill, but the full committee restored it.

Hopkins, who already has been active in the Senate, is understood to believe he can win the support of the full Senate committee, even if the sub-committee cuts his bill. This view is challenged by Senate advocates of the cut.

Would Share Burden.

Byrnes will stage his major fight to require local communities able to do so to put up at least 40 per cent of their share of relief funds.

"If this is done," said the South Carolinian, "it makes little difference how much actually is appropriated for relief. If the States and political subdivisions have to pay part of the costs, the money just won't be asked for or spent. Probably 1938 relief expenditures could be held to $750,000,000."

It was Byrnes who originally proposed the cut in relief funds, far in advance of the House battle, and in the interim he has mustered strong Senate support.

Hopkins faces close questioning this afternoon by the sub-committee. One Senator said he wanted to ask him why he told the House committee relief was virtually a permanent Federal problem, in the face of the President's indicated desire to get the Government out of the relief business as rapidly as possible.

In the House, Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, introduced a series of resolutions bearing on the relief and unemployment problem.

Asks Jobless Study.

In one Maverick asked a House investigation of unemployment and the administration of relief. A somewhat similar resolution, looking to formulation of an established relief policy, has been reported favorably by the Senate Labor Committee.

The Maverick resolution sought to determine administrative costs and the extent, if any, to which relief is granted or denied, and to which political affiliations govern WPA appointments.

The Texan also asked appointment of a national unemployment relief commission for the future and establishment of a regular House committee to handle relief, social security, public health and welfare measures.

Hamilton Asserts Democratic Party Is Disintegrating

New York, June 2 (AP).—John D. M. Hamilton, Republican National Committee chairman, sailed for Europe on the Normandie today with the parting charge that the Democratic Party and not the Republican group was disintegrating.

He was told that Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, also a passenger, had said that the two great political parties were breaking up.

"The disintegration is on the other side, not the Republican," Hamilton responded sharply.

He then went on to defend his party when a reporter suggested "liberalization."

"I never discuss the words 'liberal,' 'progressive,' 'conservative' or similar terms to which people give lip-service. I like to look a man in his political eye-teeth and see what he has done."

Heart Ailment Fatal To Harvey T. Woodruff

Chicago, June 2 (AP).—Harvey T. Woodruff, nationally known sports writer and columnist, died today after a month's illness. Death was attributed to a heart ailment.

Woodruff was sports editor of the Chicago Tribune for 13 years, retiring in 1921 to conduct his column, "In The Wake of the News." He was 62 year old.

Movie Craftsmen Repudiate Treaty

Hollywood, Calif., June 2 (AP).—The movie crafts' strike took on aspects of a bitter inter-union struggle today, with the strikers repudiating a peace treaty announced last night, and maintaining picket lines around ten major studios.

Union leaders said none of the 1,100 who walked out last April 30 returned to work today.

An agreement was concluded between the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and the International Brotherhood of Painters. It stipulated that studio painters, members of the Federated Motion Picture Crafts, should be absorbed by the I. A. T. S. E., and return to work under terms of a pact between the producers and that organization.

But after an all-night session, the painters voted, 640 to 276, to continue the strike, saying the controversy hinges on a struggle for jurisdiction between the two union groups.

Their vote was described as illegal today by Joseph Clarke, international president of the painters' union.

S. A. R. Opposes Increase in Court

Buffalo, N. Y., June 2 (AP).—The forty-eighth Congress of the Sons of the American Revolution adopted a resolution today opposing President Roosevelt's Supreme Court proposal.

Convicts Hypnotized, Grilled in Robbery

Columbus, Ohio, June 2 (AP).—Two Ohio Penitentiary convicts were hypnotized and questioned concerning a store pay-roll robbery today, but opinion still was divided on the value of the results.

One at a time, Richard Evans, 32, and John Cardin, 38, were laid out in the parole board hearing room. They declared their innocence.

Divorce Sought To Speed Prince To Magyar Crown

Budapest, June 2 (AP).—An ancient royal court today smoothed the way for the Hapsburg Archduke Albrecht to press his claims to the vacant Hungarian throne without the encumbrance of a commoner wife.

The court, revived from prewar practices by Regent Nicholas Horthy, granted the archduke a civil divorce from his wealthy wife, Irene Lelbach, whom he married secretly in England in 1930.

Monarchist adherents of the archduke asserted dissolution of the marriage made access to the empty throne easier without a nonroyal wife. Regent Horthy has acted as head of the Hungarian state since 1920.

Called "Europe's most difficult divorce case," Albrecht and his wife had sought legal separation for several years, but ordinary courts were considered without jurisdiction because of the archduke's exalted status.

French Convicts Sheltered.

Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, June 2 (AP).—Eight escaped convicts from the French penal colony at Cayenne, French Guiana, found a temporary refuge in Port-of-Spain today after spending four and a half days in an open boat with almost no food.

Basque Head's Kin Escape to England

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, June 2 (U.P.).—The wife and daughter of President Jose Antonio Aguirre, of the Basque Republic, have fled to England aboard a Spanish yacht to escape kidnaping, it was reported tonight.

They sought refuge at Biarritz, where they received scores of threatening letters. Fearing that raiders might cross the Pyrenees by smugglers' paths, they were reported to have been ordered by the president to leave the country.

Mrs. Boocock New Farm, Garden Head

Mrs. Alexander J. Barron, of Pittsburgh, Pa., was elected a vice president; Miss Jane Haines, of Cheltenham, Pa., treasurer, and Miss Emma L. Martin, of Princton, N. J., recording secretary.

More Acreage Near Elkton, Va. Acquired by RA

Special Dispatch to The Post

Harrisonburg, Va., June 2.—The Federal Resettlement Administration, whose estimates of costs have been sharply criticized by Senator Harry F. Byrd in its effort to provide small homes and farms for families to be moved from the Shenandoah National Park area, has acquired 327 additional acres in the area of Elkton, in East Rockingham, 25 miles east of Harrisonburg, it was revealed here today.

The 327 acres cost the Government $20,941, or an average of approximately $64 an acre. The payment checks were signed by W. T. French, a special attorney of the Department of Justice.

The farms purchased were those of Charles H. J. Blose, 161 acres for $9,000; the Ben Coffman farm, owned by the Bank of Elkton, 100 acres for $9,631, and the 61-acre farm of Mrs. C. L. Buracker for $2,310.

There will be nine separate tracts, embracing 1,146 acres, within a radius of 4 miles south of Elkton when the Government acquires all the land for the four sections of the Elkton unit, L. Fernand Zirkel, of Luray, RA project manager, stated. The sections will not be connected, he said, because the persons owning the intervening tracts would not accept the price offered by the Government.

These 1,146 acres will be subdivided into "complete" farms of approximately 31 acres each. The Government will erect dwellings, containing 2, 3 and 4 bedrooms, according to the size of the family to occupy them. There also will be a barn, poultry house, smokehouse, hoghouse and a sanitary toilet (outdoors).

Zirkel's understanding is that the farms will be leased from 1 to 5 years with the privilege of purchase and that the lease and sale price will be established by local appraisal, regardless of what the property cost.

Zirkel said the land in East Rockingham, along the Shenandoah River, and Naked and Wolf creeks, cost more than in other sections because little of it is for sale.

Civil Service Age Bans Are Assailed

The Senate Civil Service Committee yesterday was asked to remove the arbitrary age limits, beyond which applicants are denied civil service examinations.

Several witnesses indorsed the bill sponsored by Senator Moore (Democrat), of New Jersey, to eliminate the provisions of the civil service law relative to maximum ages.

E. Claude Babcock, president of the United States Civil Service Employes, and officials of the New Jersey Civil Service Commission, testified in favor of the proposal. New Jersey has a similar law, it was said.

Leave Is Curtailed For U. S. Employes

Leave privileges for temporary Government employes were seriously curtailed yesterday in a ruling by Acting Comptroller General Elliott. Elliott's decision stated that annual leave for such workers must include Sundays and holidays, and a full day will be charged for leave taken Saturday.

Temporary workers, of whom there are 7,000 in Washington and 100,000 in the field, were defined as those who are appointed for a definite period not exceeding six months. They now receive an annual leave allowance of 2½ days a month. In the decision, announced through Secretary Wallace, permanent "emergency" workers are not affected; they receive 26 days leave per year, are not charged for Sundays and holidays, and are charged only four hours for Saturday leave.

American Architecture—What Is It?

Sibilla Skidelsky, art editor of The Washington Post, stands in defense of American architecture and explains its purpose and beauty in a series of four articles starting Sunday, to continue weekly exclusively in The Sunday Post.

MLLE. SKIDELSKY.

The articles, written for the layman, uses the Cranbrook Academy of Art and its adjoining buildings near Detroit, Mich., as a basis of study.

Mlle. Skidelsky's first article Sunday points out that American architecture is a "struggle against dead formulas and empty traditions to create in buildings and homes an expression of present-day life, interpreting it in terms of beauty."

The articles that follow will discuss the principals of architecture found at Cranbrook; personalities identified with the academy's staff who are famous in their fields of art, student work and aims of the academy.

Mlle. Skidelsky brings to the series her wealth of training and observations in her extensive travels here and abroad. She is a prominent lecturer and authorityy on art. Her training was received in the most part under Mme. Berrier at the College Montmorency and later she was graduated from the Sarbonne.

Gov. Nice Appoints J. C. Boyd As State Parole Commissioner

Former Head of Survey Board Succeeds Tilghman.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., June 2.—J. Cookman Boyd, former head of the State survey commission and the man who nominated Gov. Harry W. Nice for the Vice Presidency last year, was appointed parole commissioner today.

Gov. Nice, in announcing the appointment, said he made it because of Boyd's "mature and seasoned judgment." W. David Tilghman, jr., the former parole commissioner, resigned yesterday when he was elected chairman of the Republican State central committee.

Nice also announced that he had appointed Tilghman small loan commissioner of the State. This new office was left vacant by the recent death of J. Wilson Ryon, of Prince Georges County.

The appointment of Boyd was interpreted by some observers as an attempt to unite Republicans in the State more closely. They linked this attempt to reports that Gov. Nice would be a candidate for the United States Senate next year.

Boyd has been of one faction and William P. Lawson, former chairman of the State central committee, was of another. Lawson was appointed police commissioner of Baltimore City, resigning his leadership of the State Republicans. The Lawson appointment will bind his faction to Nice—the Boyd appointment, some sources said, will keep the Boyd group in line.

Boyd nominated Nice for the gubernatorial nomination in 1919, when Nice lost the general election by only 165 votes. He also nominated him in the Republican State convention of 1934, and Nice was elected. Boyd was chosen to nominate him for the Vice Presidency at the Republican National Convention, but the delegates interrupted his speech with boos and jeers and Nice withdrew his own name.

Last year Nice signed a bill abolishing the survey commission, headed by Boyd, and applied the funds of the commission to finishing the remodeling of the executive mansion.

Congressmen See Delivery of Mail By Plane in Flight

A system of picking up and delivering mail from an airplane in flight was demonstrated before about 20 Congressmen yesterday at College Park Airport.

The Congressional group, headed by James M. Mead (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the House Committee on Post Office and Post Roads, watched a six-place Stinson plane swoop down low over the field, pick up a 53-pound bag of mail, and at the same time drop a carton of four bottles of wine. The wine which was not effected by the delivery, went to four of the Congressmen.

The system, developed by Dr. Lytle S. Adams, of Irwin, Pa., is used by the Tri-State Aviation Corp. It consists of a bag of mail attached to a loop of rope suspehded between two poles. A grapple on the end of a 75-foot cable hung from the plane grabs the loop as the plane passes over. Ten feet below the cable an automatic cutter, attached to a ten-foot strand of copper wire, severs the wire at the moment of contact with the loop of rope.

Pacific Peace Pact Wins Consideration

London, June 2 (AP).—The non-aggression pact for nations bordering on the Pacific Ocean, proposed by Premier Joseph A. Lyons of Australia, received "optimistic consideration" from the imperial conference today.

The conference opened what officials said was an explanatory discussion of the Lyons proposal, placed before the empire gathering at its opening May 15.

The proposed Anglo-American trade agreement, another subject under consideration by the imperial conference, also was under official discussion. An emergency meeting of the "the Empire Industries Association Parliamentary Committee" was called for June 8 to consider what concessions the British dominions are willing to make to facilitate negotiation of such agreement.

McDonald Favors FHA Consolidation

By the Associated Press.

Federal Housing Administrator Stewart McDonald approved yesterday "in principle" a proposal by Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, to consolidate the Government's housing activities.

McDonald testified before a select Senate Committee on the Byrd bill to consolidate the work of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and the Federal Housing Administration under one agency to be designated the "Federal Home Credit Administration."

Byrd estimated the proposal would save an estimated $24,500,000 annually.

McDonald told the committee he and the FHA approved the broad principles of the consolidation as recommended in a report to the committee by the Brookings Institution, private research organization, and as carried out in the Byrd bill. He added, however, he had not had time to analyze the details of the plan.

Insurance Executive Criticizes Tax Drive

New York, June 2 (AP).—Criticism of President Roosevelt's recent arraignment of big income tax evaders was voiced tonight by Thomas I. Parkinson, president of the Equitable Life Insurance Society, in an address before the American Management Association.

Speaking at the banquet session of the association's convention, theme of which is "the future of private enterprise," Parkinson appealed for reasonable and definite standards in the Government regulation of business.

Army Officer's Son, Copperhead Victim Staging Recovery

David Bolte, 12-year-old son of Maj. Charles L. Bolte, on duty at the Army War College, was recovering at Walter Reed Hospital last night from the effects of having been bitten on the right hand Tuesday by a copperhead snake at Gambriell State Park, near Frederick, Md.

Observing the reptile's tail beneath a stone, the child picked it up. The fangs of the serpent sank into him.

Maj. Bolte applied a tourniquet and rushed his son to Frederick City Hospital, where serum was administered. Then he was taken to Walter Reed, where physicians reported him out of danger last night.

Recluse, 97, Six Dogs Found Dead in Home

Churchtown, Pa., June 2 (U.P.).—The body of 97-year-old Mrs. Lydia B. Tiffany was found in her old Colonial home near here today. Medical examiners said she had been dead at least a month. In another part of the house police found the bodies of six dogs which apparently starved to death. Six other dogs, weak from hunger, greeted officers feebly.

Injunction Denied N. C. Power Firm

Greenville, S. C., June 2 (AP).—A Federal court denied today the Duke Power Co., of Charlotte, N. C., an injunction to restrain the Public Works Administration from financing a proposed $3,000,000 power project on the Saluda River in Greenwood County, S. C.

Judge J. Lyles Glenn said in an opinion, "We find as a fact * * * that the evidence does not show that the construction of this plant at the Buzzard Roost location on the Saluda River will bring about such a substantial control and regulation of the plant's rates as to in fact and substance supplant State regulation thereof by Federal regulation."

U. S. Inquiry Is Begun On Bread Price War

By the Associated Press.

The Justice Department said yesterday it was investigating a complaint by George F. Florey, a Chicago baker, that competitors in Salt Lake City and other Western cities were conspiring to fix bread prices in violation of the Robinson-Patman act.

Florey told officials at the anti-trust division his competitors were engaged in a price-cutting war and selling bread for prices ranging down to 3 cents a loaf in some cities, although bread costs from 11 to 13 cents a loaf farther East.

Jefferson Davis Birthday Rites Set for Tonight

Rep. Mahan to Speak at Memorial Service at Arlington.

Representative Heyward Mahan, jr. of South Carolina, will be the guest speaker at the memorial exercises and Jefferson Davis birthday celebration to be held tonight in the Clarendon Baptist Church by Arlington Chapter, No. 149, United Daughters of the Confederacy.

The exercises will open with invocation by the Rev. Perry L. Mitchell, pastor of the Clarendon Baptist Church, followed by the singing of "The Long, Long Trail."

The address of welcome will be delivered by the president, Mrs. Roy Ewers. State Senator John W. Rust, of Fairfax County, will introduce the guest speaker.

The program will include a solo by Miss Virginia Langston, a reading by Cecil Taylor, and the singing of "My Old Kentucky Home."

Benediction will be offered by the Rev. G. G. Oliver, pastor of the Clarendon Methodist Church.

Carroll County's Settlers Lauded

Westminster, Md., June 2 (AP).—Judge F. Neal Parke hailed the early settlers of Carroll County today as men industrious, thrifty and far-seeing in matters of government.

Judge Parke, chief speaker at the celebration of the county's 100th birthday anniversary, appeared on a program with Gov. Harry W. Nice and other State officials.

"In their private affairs," he said, "our fathers were industrious . . . idleness was shunned as a weakness and condemned as an evil. Integrity in word and act was the measure of their obligations. What was had by labor and industr was held by care and providence."

Juge Parke spoke a few minutes before a gigantic pageant, portraying the history of the county, was displayed in the Western Maryland College athletic field.

On the tip of 3 million tongues

Today—more than 3 million men, women and children will dip their spoons into Breyers Ice Cream. And not by accident. They prefer Breyers—and will pass other ice cream stores to get it.

Ask them why—and nine times out of ten they'll say: "Breyers tastes better."

This better taste has made Breyers the choice of more people than any other ice cream in America. It comes from the finest ingredients—plus a "knack" of blending and balancing them that is distinctly and exclusively Breyers.

Made better—Breyers naturally tastes better. Enjoy some tonight.

Jackson Backs Black-Connery Wage, Hour Bill

expressed in the long discussions over the possibility of a new Mason-Dixon line, in regard to the belief that a dollar differential in wages will be established between the heavily industrialized North and the more agrarian South, thus possibly encouraging Northern industries to move South in search of lower labor costs.

Jackson attempted to quell such fears with an expression of his belief that the act's very flexibility will operate to bring wages up in all localities to high standards, as rapidly as possible after the board has been organized and is operating.

The one constitutional obstacle which Jackson noted as possibly obstructive to Supreme Court approval of the measure was the child-labor provision of the bill.

The young New Yorker dealt at length with this hurdle. He said:

"The power of Congress to enact the bill is clear under the decisions, both old and recent, except for the denial by the Supreme Court in the child labor case of the most simple and clear of all these theories.

Previous Act Invalidated.

"In 1918 by a five-to-four vote the Supreme Court, in Hammar vs. Dagenhart, held invalid an act of Congress prohibiting interstate transportation of goods manufactured in violation of certain child labor standards.

". . . This decision was promulgated by a bare majority of members. They were Chief Justice White and Justices Van Devanter, Pitney, McReynolds and Day, who wrote the prevailing opinion. A ringing dissent was written by Justice Holmes and supported by Justices McKenna, Brandeis and Clark, who could not be regarded as a minority in prestige.

"Legal scholarship received the decision with indignation and derision which time has not softened."

He declared that "we should give our courts a chance to remove this blemish from our judicial history. We owe it to our times to challenge the perversion of our Constitution injected into our law by the child labor decision."

Sees Old Dominion Defeated.

Later, in response to a question from Chairman William P. Connery, jr., of Massachusetts, head of the House Labor Committee, Jackson asserted that if the Supreme Court at the recent term had had to rule on the Hammer-Dagenhart case on the same day last term in which they held the Wagner-Connery Labor Relations act constitutional, they would inevitably have overruled the old child labor opinion.

"That's my guess," he smiled.

"We may reasonably entertain the hope that Hammar vs. Dagenhart will be laid to a tardy and unmourned repose beside the lifeless remains of Adkins vs. Children's Hospital (the minimum wage decision which the court overruled in approving the Wagner act.)"

In discussing the States' rights aspects of the sweeping bill, Jackson reminded the committee that "Mr. Justice Holmes in his dissent in the child labor case demolished the whole argument that States' rights are impaired by such legislation as this."

Quotes Justice Holmes.

He then quoted a portion of the late Justice's opinion in which Holmes asserted "But when they (the States) seek to send their products across the State line they are no longer within their rights. If there were no Constitution and no Congress their power to cross the line would depend upon their neighbors. Under the Constitution such commerce belongs not to the States but to Congress to regulate. . . . Instead of being encountered by a prohibitive tariff at her boundaries the State encounters the public policy of the United States which it is for Congress to express."

In answering arguments of "constitutional controversialists" that the act violates the due process clause and unlawfully delegates congressional power, Jackson said that in his view it "is hard to see how employers who wish to maintain decent labor standards can feel aggrieved at this bill . . . He is so far from being injured by this bill that it may be his chief protection against undermining of his market by methods which his own standards forbid."

He attacked the view that the bill is any way "arbitrary," and in passing to the "delegation of power" argument, said that "there is nothing whatever in the Constitution that forbids Congress to make a delegation of its power. The prohibition is purely judge-made, not Constitution-made."

"Product of Ruined Lives."

He then concluded, referring to recent liberal Supreme Court decisions:

"During this flash of liberalism that illuminates a judicial record, otherwise pretty black for labor, we may reasonably hope that after being balked a score of years, Congress will now be sustained in adding to the list of interstate contraband what Mr. Justice Holmes so aptly called 'the product of ruined lives,' and in establishing commerce among the States on the basis of industrial justice to disadvantaged men."

Witnesses before the committee tomorrow, Chairman Hugo Black, of Alabama, head of the Senate Education and Labor Committee, announced to be Robert Johnson, president of Johnson & Johnson, druggists' supplies, and John G. Paine, member of the National Industrial Co-ordinating Committee.

Do the American people favor national regulation of wages and hours in industry? See the answer as found by Dr. George H. Gallup's American Institute of Public Opinion in next Sunday's Washington Post.

Hearings Started on Wage and Hour Bill

Harris & Ewing.

Westchester Firm Sale Deal Closed

Sale of the stock of the Westchester Development Corporation, owning and operating the Westchester, one of the largest apartment buildings in the city, at 3900 Cathedral avenue northwest, to Amsinck Sonne & Co., heading an international syndicate, which will continue to operate it, was announced yesterday. Morris Cafritz, Gustave Ring and Harvey Warwick own the stock. The figure involved was around $4,000,000.

The property includes 28 acres of land and 3 buildings erected in 1930 for the corporation by the Cafritz Construction Co., and containing 550 housekeeping apartments ranging from one room, kitchen and bath to eight rooms, kitchen and bath. Warwick was the architect of the building.

Justice Orders J.W. Tomlinson Placed in Jail

Lawyer Committed Pending Hearing of Appeal in Robbery Case.

J. William Tomlinson, attorney, yesterday was ordered committed to the District Jail by Justice F. Dickinson Letts, in District Court, before whom the lawyer was tried last week on charges of robbery.

Tomlinson had been permitted to remain on bond by Justice Joseph W. Cox, who in the absense of Justice Letts, heard the verdict of the jury. At that time Justice Cox announced he was only permitting Tomlinson to be on bond pending decision by Justice Letts, who was familiar with the case.

Tomlinson and Philip John Pratt, the latter colored, were convicted of robbing Sam Siratonis, 3003 Fourteenth street northwest, of $785 last August. A third man, Charles Henry Bass, also colored, pleaded guily and testified for the Government.

The trio is charged with robbing the tailor.

Tomlinson faces another robbery charge. His attorneys, James A. O'Shea, John H. Burnett, and Alfred Goldstein announced late yesterday they would press their request for an early hearing on the appeal in the Siratonis case.

Radio Singer Facing $100,000 Damage Suit

Damages of $100,000 were sought against Dolph W. Atherton, radio singer, by Miss Hallie Mitchell, 28-year-old Government employe, who claimed she had been struck by Atherton's car at Dupont Circle last October.

The complaint recited that the plaintiff was hurled 120 feet when the car struck her while she was crossing the circle. She has been in the hospital ever since, Attorney T. O. Nichols stated in the suit, and is permanently injured.

Rail Syndicate Plan to Divert Cargo Charged

Sought Favors of Traffic Managers, Senate Group Hears.

By the Associated Press.

A Senate committee heard testimony yesterday that members of a syndicate organized to gain control of the Chicago Great Western Railroad in 1928 had invited industrial traffic managers to invest with them in hopes they would divert freight traffic to the road.

Investigators of the rail finance committee introduced into the record an unsigned letter stating that some of the purchasers desired that their names be kept secret for fear their "positions would be in serious jeopardy if it became known that they were in an affair of this kind."

Richard O'Hara, of Chicago, one of the syndicate organizers, told the committee he believed the letter was written by A. P. G. Findlay, of Detroit, a purchaser of $25,000 of stock in Bremo Corporation.

Bremo was described by Telford Taylor, a committee investigator, as a holding company formed to hold the securities purchased by the syndicate.

Taylor asked O'Hara if he did not consider it "grossly improper" for traffic managers to invest in the corporation and then route traffic over the Great Western.

'Inference' Denied.

"They had a right to invest in any way they pleased to make money legally," O'Hara replied.

"It's pretty plain from the letter that there was a definite risk of traffic employes losing their jobs," Taylor said.

Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, acting chairman of the committee which is inquiring into railway financing observed that the evidence indicated the "traffic managers were supposed to work for their own benefit against their employers."

John W. O'Leary, of Chicago, an associate in the syndicate, told Truman his "inference" was not correct.

Taylor also placed in evidence a letter from Edward J. Fleming, of Chicago, described as a syndicate member. Fleming inclosed a check for $4,040 covering 40 shares of preferred stock to be issued in the name of Gordon O'Day, Detroit.

"For your information," the letter said, "Mr. O'Day is financing in his name the people connected with Hupp, Oakland, and Fisher body. They cannot get in their own names."

Companies Mentioned.

Fleming's letter was addressed to Charles Aaron, counsel for the syndicate.

The letter which O'Hara attributed to Findlay also stated the writer had got in touch with "many others" in Detroit, Flint and Lansing, but "many of these fellows are tied up in a falling market and they just can't afford to go into this deal financially, but they will go the limit in a friendly way to help us by routing a very substantial tonnage as desired."

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, on a tour of inspection of Greenbelt, looks at the work of Leonora Thomas on the frieze around the new school.

Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday afternoon made her fourth trip in ten days to her new enthusiasm—the Greenbelt project of the Resettlement Administration. Her guests on this occasion were about 35 of the women reporters who attend her press conferences. She took the half-hour trip to the project, located near Berwyn Heights, Md., in her blue roadster, accompanied by attractive Roberta Jonay, the dancer who was a recent White House guest.

The First Lady, who had the advantage of knowing the lay of the land pretty well, led the procession. As it wound through the green valley which surrounds the nearly-completed synthetic town, the reporters were forced to choose between getting left behind or puffing up and down along the rocky paths at a dog-trot.

The first stop made was at the cemetery, which has already been marked off by the foresighted administration. Wallace Richards, executive officer in charge of the project, explained that the first and only occupant so far is one George Crum, one of the transients employed to clear the land. Richards added a few comments on the amount of red tape he encountered before receiving permission for the burial. Mrs. Roosevelt was as amused as the rest when he said that even the President's signature would have been necessary had he not been out of town at the time.

Nearby is a plaque set up by the D. A. R. to the memory of two Revolutionary War soldiers whose bodies were discovered by workmen. A 3-foot fence separates the plaque from the path. Before Richards could point out an opening in the fence, Mrs. Roosevelt executed a neat vault over the obstacle.

As the group toured the schoolhouse, the nucleus of the town's recreational center, Mrs. Roosevelt was insistent none of the details of its construction be omitted. "Tell them what you told me about the auditorium and the wall finish," she would remind Richards.

And Richards dutifully described how the seats in the auditorium, which are wheeled, can be trundled into a space under the stage when a gymnasium is wanted. The tiled walls of the corridors are treated with tung oil, which is impervious to such minor acts of vandalism as students may commit with their pens.

In the town proper, one completed housing unit was open for inspection. Here Mrs. Roosevelt took complete charge of proceedings. She did not want her guests to miss any angle of the planning and decoration of the dwellings, which are designed for families of various sizes and will rent for between $25 and $40.

Roy Braden, who is to be town manager, accompanied the visitors on their tour. Others who went along were J. S. Lansill, director of all the "Greenbelt" projects; Miss Helen Hoffman, in charge of furnishing the houses, and Adrian Dornbush, head of special skills under the Resettlement Administration.

Returning to Washington, Mrs. Roosevelt, in her weekly radio broadcast last night, expressed opposition to oaths taken by some college students not to fight in any war and predicted that although the United States "might" remain at peace if a major war broke out, the American standard of living undoubtedly would suffer.

She was heard in an informal talk on the subject "Peace" with a George Washington University student, John P. Southmayd, whose father has been blind since the World War.

east; Douglas Sanders, colored, 35, 1913 T street northwest; Richard Sisson, 38, of 228 V street northeast, and Mrs. Mary Meredith, 39, of 1673 Columbia road northwest. Morris collapsed while installing a refrigerator in a drug store at 1738 connecticut avenue, Mrs. Meredith as she was walking on F street.

Blanche I. Couch, 34, of 109 C street northeast, was prostrated while working in the National Pants Co. plant, 408 First street southeast. She was taken to Providence Hospital for treatment.

Treated at Casualty Hospital was Alfred Stahback, 37, of 928 K street, who became ill at Bladensburg road and Morse street northeast, where he was working.

William Cook, colored, 46, of the 200 block of C street southwest, collapsed while at work in a junk yard near his home. He was taken to Casualty Hospital.

Sampel Washington, 65, of the 1400 block of East Capitol street, was overcome near his home and taken to Gallinger Hospital.

James Fryl, colored, 54, of the 800 block of Second street southwest, was overcome while he was at work in the Benning Power Plant. He was taken to Casualty Hospital.

The murky heat buckled a yard of sidewalk in the 1200 block on Goodhope road southeast.

The first of the predicted thundershowers broke at 11:01 o'clock last night, and rain still was falling at midnight. Lightning lashed the suburbs of the city, and the mercury eased from 74 to 72 degrees.

The only possible relief from the 30 hours of a heat wave offered by the Weather Bureau was "the possibility of thunder showers tonight." It will be "generally fair" throughout today. The high humidity of 48 per cent at noon yesterday was offset somewhat by mild northwest breezes, the bureau authorities said.

British Columbia Reelects Liberals

Vancouver, British Columbia, June 2 (AP).—Voters of British Columbia indorsed the liberal administration of Premier T. D. Pattullo today and gave him a clear mandate to administer affairs of the province until 1942.

The liberals, standing on the record of their past four years administration and pleading justification for increased provincial debt on the grounds of progress, returned 31 candidates to the 48-seat legislature in yesterday's election.

TOP-NOTCH PLACE to spend the summer

IF you're looking for the pleasantest place in the world to spend your summer—just put yourself behind the wheel of this sparkling new Buick and you're there!

You sit in a seat that seems tailored to your frame. Your hand's on a wheel that feels more at home than your mashie. Your toe's on a treadle that unleashes the surging power of the ablest engine of its size in the world.

Yes, that's Buick's engine, that valve-in-head straight-eight out front, and it melts mountains down to mole-hill size any time you say!

And you've brakes to halt you quick and easy—lullaby springs to cradle you softly over bad spots—all in a mannerly, buoyant, beautifully poised thoroughbred of a car that takes as much as you can give and never whimpers—the bellwether car of the year!

You've seen 'em on the road, these sensational Buicks—and maybe the big, sleek, rich look of them has made you think they're a little beyond your means.

Then you've another think coming—for the price on the Buick SPECIAL is not only the lowest in all Buick history but lower even than on some sixes.

So before you buy any car because the price seems low, get the actual figures on a Buick and see how much more it gives you for every dollar. The place for you this summer is in the leader's seat—get your order in now and be sure of a wonderful time.

latial French liner, now driving up the English Channel with the covered blue ribbon of the Atlantic flying proudly from her masthead. Almost any conversation, with any passenger, will come around to some aspect of the subject.

Last night we dined with two distinguished Americans whose presence on board assists in clarifying the picture. One of them is president of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, a student and connoisseur of those mellow aspects of European culture which provide so much of the beauty in Western civilization. The other is president of a great corporation, the products of which contribute to the comfort and convenience of many American homes.

For the collector and art patron Europe is still a Mecca, though one with a future more dubious than ever before. For the industrialist the continent has become primarily a business problem of increasing complexity and anxiety. In Barcelona an important subsidiary of his company has been seized by the workmen and, its local reserves exhausted, has closed down without prospect of reopening. The German subsidiary, though profitable, is prevented by exchange regulations from making remittances to the parent corporation.

Leaders in America Rush to Scene of Decay.

This is only a minor instance of the fact that in large areas of Europe both industry and culture, both the vitality and the beauty of Western civilization, are in decline. American leaders in many fields are this summer hastening to the scene of decay to learn more of what it all portends. A newspaper which is unaware of the undercurrents in such a development is also unaware of what is news.

But is it a news story of significance to America as a whole? Is it not possible for the United States, relatively so self-contained, sheltered behind a strong Navy and a mandatory neutrality law, to live its own life without consideration of the perplexing trends in Europe?

If so, any examination into the details and implications of those trends is for us largely superfluous. And reports from the scene, no matter how readable or well informed, will properly be a matter of passing concern or even indifference.

Actually it is impossible to argue that the subject is academic for any American. All who have devoted any thought to it know that we are intimately affected, in many ways, by the course which European civilization follows.

The degree to which the volume of world trade can be restored will determine whether a million or more Americans are re-employable, the alternative being their indefinite continuation as a charge upon the taxpayers. On the outcome of the present European struggle between democracy and dictatorship will depend the future vitality of the former system in the New World. And laws cannot ban the influence of those intangible ideas which sweep across frontiers and oceans to determine lines of political development in a closely integrated world.

China Is Example Of Once Great Nation.

China is the classic example of a once great nation which consciously sought to detach itself from world currents, to keep its people insulated behind farflung walls and to fulfill its destiny in total disregard of that of other nations. The results for China were disastrous. There is no reason to suppose that a similar attitude could prove beneficial for the United States.

There is, moreover, nothing in the American psychology comparable with the Chinese attitude of acquiescence. While many of us would approve isolation, if it could be achieved without perceptible sacrifice of our living standards, many more desire intensely the material benefits which only an expanding economy can bring. And we know, in our hearts, that there is a direct contradiction between an expanding economy and a narrowly nationalistic political philosophy.

Our people want to maintain, and increase, the comforts which have come to spell American civilization to a large majority of them. They want a more abundant life based on something more secure than mounting Treasury deficits. It follows that the leadership of the country cannot afford to be wholly introverted. A real concern over events in Europe is neither a matter of idle curiosity nor of meddling in that which is not our business. On the contrary, our fundamental national interests are involved.

The course of development in the Old World cannot indefinitely pursue its present gradually declining curve. That is not possible in highly industrialized and densely populated nations. The curve will either soon turn sharply down toward chaos, or up toward a continental reconstruction of worldwide benefit. And it is a ridiculous oversimplification of the present crisis to envisage it in terms of 1914, in anticipations of another disciplined war between peoples sharply divided along nationalistic lines.

As the barbarous struggle in Spain reveals, it is not so much the clash between unified nations as the underlying antagonisms of incompatible social and economic philosophies which is now the important line of cleavage. Exiles from Germany and Italy are among the most ardent defenders of the Spanish republic. And Madrid is menaced far more by the dictators of those two nations than by the Spaniards which have rebelled against their duly elected government.

Purely national rivalries are becoming insignificant by contrast with the three-cornered clash between the Communist, Democratic and Fascist philosophies of government. Everywhere this struggle is being waged, continuously with propaganda and intermittently with arms. No neutrality legislation can keep its seeds from finding lodgment in American soil, wherever the fertility is receptive.

Police Of America May Be Happy Medium.

There is, of course, a happy medium between gratuitous entanglement in European problems and an ostrich-like endeavor to exorcize their influence by ignoring them.

The happy medium is perhaps to be found in an American policy which would independently cooperate with those elements in Europe which seek to maintain ideals essentially similar to our own. That is one obvious subject for investigation.

Certainly if democracy should go under in western Europe, the first line of defense for American institutions would be undermined.

And it is not exaggerated to say that maintenance of this first line of defense is no longer an assured matter. Important Frenchmen on this steamer, returning home after only a couple of months in America, hesitate to express any positive opinion on the future in their country. Events, they say, have lately been moving too quickly to assess their importance from afar.

For the reasons here outlined Mr. Meyer and I are combining our powers of analysis to make what may be called a tour of inspection of the first line of defense of American democracy. It will take us, together or separately, to a number of capitals and will involve contacts with spokesmen of many divergent shades of opinion.

The reports which we shall send back to The Post will have as their one objective a sincere endeavor to comprehend the meaning of the European crisis for America. They will treat only of such subjects as Americans cannot afford to ignore, regardless of the importance and interest of our domestic concerns.

Reserve of $9,000,000 Foreseen for Va. Jobless

Richmond, Va., June 2 (AP).—Maj. Frank P. Evans, chairman of the Virginia Unemployment Compensation Commission, said today the commission expects to have a reserve fund of approximately $9,000,000 by December 31 out of which jobless aid benefits will be paid next year.

Nearly half of this amount already has been collected by the commission in assessments on pay rolls of Virginia employers for 1936 and the first quarter of 1937.

Ticket-Fixing Defense Blames Higher-Ups for Cancellations

ward J. Kelly, chairman of the board, continued Winfield's trial until Monday.

Ford contended charges against Winfield were "trumped up" at a meeting of his "enemies" in Takoma Park, Md., several months ago.

Waving a clinched fist in the air and shouting at Miss Jessie Ball, a Government witness, Ford declared:

"This whole thing is a frame-up to defame the character of a good and efficient officer."

Heated words began to flow when Miss Ball, at Ford's insistence, drew from her purse a typewritten statement she reputedly made to Tunis Collier, local contractor, who recently figured in several "ticket" episodes with Seventh Precinct police. Miss Ball said she was a nurse for Winfield's wife and had occasion to see numerous traffic tickets and "legal papers" around the Winfield home.

No sooner had she produced the statement, howeve , when Welliver, statement, however, when Welliver, Ford and the board of "high-handed methods" of obtaining evidence.

Demands all Facts.

At this point, inspetcor Kelly rose and said the board "resented any inference that high-handed methods were being employed."

"We want to know all the facts," said Inspector Kelly. "I want to know if this woman was tricked into something—if she was tricked into signing this purported statement."

Miss Ball testified that she told Collier—at a meeting in the home of Mrs. Winfield's sister in Takoma Park—of several things she saw and heard while living at the Winfield home. Winfield and his wife—before her recent death—were estranged.

Everything she related, Miss Ball declared, was written down by Collier and she later signed the statement. The statement she produced before the board, however, was typewritten, unsigned and dated in the District to Columbia several weeks later.

"Many" Violation Notices.

Winfield, Miss Ball said, kept "many" traffic violation notices and "legal papers" in a small box in the living room of his home. She said he often left the house, explaining to his wife that he had to "see someone about a ticket."

In addition, Miss Ball told the board, Winfield frequently received traffic tickets through the mail and on several occasions, unidentified persons had called at his home to leave envelopes containing violation notices.

At one point, Miss Ball grabbed the typewritten statement from Ford's hand. The attorney held on to one end of it, shouting:

"Don't you tear that up—it's been confiscated."

Inspector Kelly demanded that Miss Ball surrender the paper to him and the procedings continued.

Winfield was accused of canceling tickets "without the proper authority so to do."

In one instance yesterday, a traffic warrant, dated in 1934 and allegedly found in Winfield's home, was submitted to Policeman H. W. Carmichael, who reportedly made the original arrest. Carmichael, however, said he never received the warrant and didn't know of its existence.

Policeman N. M. Baker, to whom one of the questioned ticket books was assigned, testified that several commanding officers of the traffic division had requested him to bring his book to them. What disposition was made of several tickets in his book Baker was unable to recall.

Goiters Grow From Fungus, Is New Theory

Surgeon Reports Finding Identical Spores in Humans, Water.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 2.—A theory that dence that at least one type of goiters on human necks grow like mushrooms was announced at the first convention of the United States Chapter of the International College of Surgeons.

Dr. Andre Crotti, of Columbus, Ohio, reported discovery of evigoiter—and perhaps all types—is caused by a fungus growth.

The Ohio surgeon said that after a quarter century of research he could demonstrate that endemic goiter, the kind heretofore believed to be due to a lack of iodine in the diet, was caused by spores, the tiny organisms that build mushrooms and mold on bread.

To prove his theory, Dr. Crotti said he had:

1. Found a specific fungus in goiters removed from humans.
2. Found the same fungus in the water supply of areas where goiter was common.
3. Produced goiter in dogs by feeding them cultures of this fungus.
4. Found the same fungus in cabbage.
5. Produced goiter in rabbits by feeding them cultures of this fungus.
6. Fed iodine to the rabbits and demonstrated that it did not prevent growth of the goiter.

Dr. Crotti said his experiments, which began in 1910, showed the goiter-producing fungus was "transmitted by drinking water and vegetables."

TAKE WEIGHT OFF TIRED FEET
Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Banding and Rolling Exercises.
If your feet and ankles feel tired and aches all over—because you are carrying too much fat—do something about it. Try the treatment that has helped millions to reduce excess weight.
There's a reason why so many people find dieting slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right.
All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" acts in a furnace.
Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks—and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out in this way.
Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same method used by doctors. So don't waste your time or money striving to reduce with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get a box of Marmola today from your druggist. (ADV.)

An Opportunity Wasted.

The so-called earmarking rebellion of the House collapsed ignominiously when members were put to the test of roll call votes on each proposed amendment to the Administration's relief bill. In its chastened mood the House even restored the $2,000 which it had petulantly clipped off the salary of Mr. Hopkins.

Under unified direction, with an intelligent plan of action, the House rebels might have effected really substantial and feasible reductions in relief outlays. They chose instead to form selfish coalitions, each one trying to grab some of the relief money for a specific purpose, such as flood control, roads and public works. The smell of pork that hung about these legislative forays was so perceptible that it was difficult to believe the raiders were simply reasserting their right to control public expenditures.

In any case, they went about their work of amending the relief bill in an utterly slipshod, impracticable way and have met with a deserved defeat. With one exception, about all the House has gained through the face-saving compromise engineered by Representative Rayburn is a vague White House promise to consider its wishes, when possible, in allocating relief money.

There is still opportunity for the Senate to launch a really effective attack upon the Administration's program. It should insist upon an investigation of relief problems, with a view to outlining a permanent plan, as Senator Hatch proposes. The move in the Senate to cut $500,000,000 from the present bill is as bungling as the House attempt to earmark an equally large sum. The only important difference is that the Senators who favor indiscriminate pruning cannot be charged with an attempted raid on relief funds. They can, however, be fairly criticized for launching an economy drive without first reforming the relief system which makes extravagance inevitable.

It is probably too late to hope that the relief measure now before Congress will be scrapped and replaced by one that would assure real economies without entailing undue hardship for the unemployed. But the Senate could take a step toward genuine reform by authorizing a study of the whole relief problem with the object of abandoning WPA policies next year. In the interest of economy and efficiency such an investigation is greatly needed and is, in fact, long overdue.

Chamberlain Retreats.

If a readiness to admit failure and accept defeat is a mark of high statesmanship, as many will argue, then Neville Chamberlain belongs on the sunlit heights.

As chancellor of the exchequer, Chamberlain was this year placed in the difficult position of keeping the budget balanced while making provision for Britain's enormous rearmament program which, over a period of five years, is to cost $7,500,000,000.

His budget speech was, therefore, a most unhappy affair. Income taxpayers were told the sad news that the levy upon them was to be raised still another notch. But the unpopularity of this provision was as nothing compared to the hostile reception given the plan—worked out by Chamberlain alone, without the knowledge of the cabinet—of imposing a special tax on excess profits.

Theoretically there was much to recommend this plan. It is certain that many firms will grow rich on rearmament orders. Why not, then, Chamberlain argued, see to it that some of these huge profits are forced into the treasury? Not only would this help to keep the budget balanced, but it would also spike the criticism of workers that the rearmament program benefited only the rich.

Almost immediately there was a great outcry of protest from British industry. Although the tide of recovery is now moving strong, there was a long period of ebb in business profits. Why penalize industry when it has a chance to replenish its reserves? From every section of the business community these protests poured into the exchequer.

Chamberlain, who has a reputation for dogged pertinacity to sustain, at first paid no attention to these clamors. Later, however, when a very large section of his own party joined the critics of the national defense levy, the chancellor retreated a little. He agreed to certain modifications of the tax. But, with the opposition showing no readiness to accept any compromise, he has surrendered, horse, foot and dragoons. The national defense levy is out so far as he is concerned. And while it will be replaced by another tax, this will be less burdensome on business and industry.

"Looking back upon my own record," said Mr. Chamberlain by way of explanation, "I do not think I have ever been inclined to show a pigheaded obstinacy."

Whatever effect this surrender may have on Chamberlain's prestige his action is as admirable as it is rare.

The Court's Record.

On very few occasions in our history has the Supreme Court operated under greater difficulties than those which beset it during the term that has just been completed. In the dark days of reconstruction following the Civil War Congress hamstrung the court to prevent the overthrow of unconstitutional measures. Undue pressure has been applied to that tribunal from other agencies of the Government in several instances. But never before had the court operated under an open threat to increase its membership by six justices to secure rulings favorable to the President.

The actual effect of this attempted intimidation cannot be ascertained. Everyone who has followed the decisions of the court knows that it has adopted a more flexible attitude. But that attitude was clearly manifested in the decision upholding the New York unemployment insurance act before the President sent his message on the judiciary to Capitol Hill. When the court later overruled its conclusions of 1923 as to the validity of State minimum wage laws for women it merely went back to a still earlier opinion. And indications are that the New York minimum wage law would never have been invalidated if the case in its favor had been based upon this previous decision.

In the opinions upholding the Wagner labor relations act the court certainly extended its concept of the "commerce clause" beyond the views it expressed in striking down the Guffey coal act. Likewise, in the decisions on the social security act there seems to be a disposition to allow Congress a wider latitude in dealing with national economic problems. Where the language of the Constitution is only distantly related to the issue in question the majority has properly given the legislative act the benefit of every doubt.

But it remains to be seen how far this line of interpretation will be carried. The court has not said that the commerce clause gives an open sesame to the exercise of Federal power over manufacturing and business. Its view of the power to tax for the general welfare has not deviated from the traditional interpretation of this controversial clause. Those who assume that the court has forsaken principle for expediency may be surprised when and if it is called upon to test other statutes not so close to the borderline of constitutionality.

In any event, the court has conducted itself with dignity and restraint under severe pressure. It has passed through a most critical period in its history without giving way to the jitters or neglecting its routine business. Only a superhuman institution would have remained entirely unaffected by the storm that has been brewing about its head. And the most ardent defenders of the court make no such claims for it.

The one certain conviction which emerges from this turbulent chapter in our judicial history is that the Supreme Court should never again be subjected to such an outrageous attack. No tribunal could be expected to function normally under a threat of subjugation by the Executive. Before the court reassembles, perhaps with more than one new justice, the bill to make it simply a third horse in the New Deal team should be so emphatically killed that no President will ever attempt a similar foray.

American University's Appeal.

Candide, the American University points out in opening a campaign to raise $250,000 in Washington, roamed the world of the eighteenth century, finally to return home with the simple advice, "Let us cultivate our garden." By this, the university means to remind the city that, for all its national and international glamour, there are still everyday aspects of the Capital which should not be neglected. One of these is the education of its youth.

Half of the American University's undergraduate body is made up of boys and girls from Washington, while the institution's Graduate School and School of Public Affairs serve many permanent local residents. Money is needed to improve the facilities available for these 1,600 students. Particularly at the College of Liberal Arts on outer Massachusetts avenue, where advance applications indicate a better than 20 per cent increase in enrollment next fall, larger living and teaching quarters are wanted.

Plainly, $250,000 will not go far toward providing these facilities. This sum, however, represents only Washington's quota—$2,000,000 will be the goal for the country as a whole. Persons attracted by the appeal can give with certainty that their gifts will be competently administered. During the last four trying years, for example, the university has invariably balanced its budget while making material reductions in its indebtedness.

More to the point, perhaps, donors will have assurance that their generosity will usher in the second 40 years of the university's existence under circumstances far more favorable than those prevailing at its inception. They will be offering to the youth of the Nation generally, and to Washingtonians in particular, training in the arts and sciences which compares favorably with that of similar institutions throughout the country.

Mixing Business And Charity.

The votes, in both the Senate and House, to override President Roosevelt's veto of the war-risk insurance bill, are a sorry exhibition of legislative muddling. As outlined in the President's veto message, the case against the bill was clear and emphatic. But large majorities in both houses rode roughshod over this logic, apparently mindful only of the indorsement given the bill by veterans' organizations.

Two chief arguments were made in reply to the White House message. First, to sustain the veto would force 23,000 veterans, some of them disabled and in straitened circumstances, to drop their policies or reduce the amount of their insurance. Second, the bill could be forced through without any additional cost to the Treasury.

By extending the life of the temporary policies, however, Congress has conferred a special privilege on about 15 per cent of the veterans originally granted this insurance. The 85 per cent who cooperated with the Government, by converting their policies at necessarily higher rates, have been penalized. The 15 per cent who refused to cooperate have been rewarded. Even though some of the latter group are disabled and in need, it is impossible to justify a policy so utterly at variance with sound business principles.

The United States has dealt generously with its veterans. That policy, however, is incidental to the present issue. It was not a relief bill which Congress passed, but only a discriminatory measure tending to break down the Government's own insurance system. A small group of veterans who may or may not be in need of special aid have been permitted to impose an unnatural burden upon the majority participating in a Federal business undertaking. And that policy is excused on the ground that the cost falls upon veterans who have bought Government insurance rather than on the Treasury.

It is precisely this confusion of business and charity, this admixture of politics with a self-sustaining Government enterprise, which arouses so much skepticism as to the ability of Congress to regulate the economic life of the Nation successfully. In this case relatively minor interests were at stake. Yet Congress ignored the sound advice of the President and the Veterans Administration, and joined in a stampede for what seemed to be the popular course.

That emotional reaction should have a restraining influence upon those who are inclined to think that the country's economic problems can be solved by dumping them into the lap of Congress or some body responsible to it.

The Duke Takes A Wife.

Ever since Cinderella put her best foot forward and got her man, the world has been interested in marriages of king and commoner. The wedding which takes place today at the Chateau Cande, Monts, France, has followed the lines of a typical fairy story, but with an O. Henry ending. The denouement is that the former king and his lady will not be welcomed home to his castle, and they have only a fighting chance to live happily ever after.

The gentleman from Buckingham and the lady from Baltimore will undoubtedly have to work twice as hard as the average couple to make their marriage a success. While they have all that can be desired in the way of material goods, they are starting out with handicaps that would make a Babbitt's matrimonial trials look like child's play. Edward has given up his throne; forsaken his family and homeland; bucked his church, and is marrying in spite of the fact that he must be pretty set in his bachelor ways.

Wallis is trying it a third time after having failed to find happiness with two former husbands. No doubt she will be eternally conscious of what the Duke has given up for her, and always laboring under the responsibility of making him feel that she was worth it. Moreover, she must know that the world, however romance-minded, is just waiting for a chance to say, "I told you so."

Maybe this is why so much interest is centered on the Chateau Cande today—because of the realization of just how much these two are willing to risk in order to be together. After all, marriage, like life, is the more interesting because it is an adventure. So cheer up, Mr. and Mrs. Windsor, the first 20 years are the hardest!

"The average young woman's foot is a size larger than her mother's," reports a shoe manufacturer. It isn't known what caused this change, but the theory that walking back from auto rides was a contributing factor has been discarded.

Just as many had contended, much of the old-age pension funds will be squandered, it is indicated. A 109-year-old Florida woman upon receipt of her first pension check blew herself to a corn-cob pipe.

It has been revealed that the name "Gypsy Rose Lee" is a pseudonym. So, after all, it seems, our No. 1 strip-teaser has been hiding something from her public.

Veteran Insurance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The clear exposition of George W. Shields on veteran insurance legislation leads to some parallel thoughts from this sector—on insurance and adjusted compensation claims still outstanding.

President Roosevelt has shown the way by vetoing the term insurance racket, in which course he should be automatically upheld. But some other features remain muddled.

Money was loaned to railroads at 5 per cent when need faced them, but the RFC reduced the rate to 4 per cent on all fronts when the Government's borrowing rate dropped. But only the short end of the New Deal has been accorded converted insurance holders, whose chief crime is that they have never tried to cadge Government aid, or thought of making relief their profession to bridge them over until eligible for old-age pensions, in the manner of modern abundance.

Banks, local and elsewhere, might become progressive enough to forget the old days of grab; loan out some of their frozen assets at 5 per cent to recompense 6 per cent insurance loans, Government and otherwise. Perhaps some genius of the A. B. A. would condescend to explain in terms "written down" to the layman's understanding, why this idea hasn't occurred or what's wrong with it.

As to bonus bonds—those whose sole objective was a rush to the closest booze bazaar or down payment on a heap of rolling junk, broke the barrier midnight June 15, 1936. Conversion of claims into $50 bonds, then into cash, now looms as a costly idiotic wad of tape, like unto hopping a merry-go-round for the trip because it happens to intervene in the shortest line between two points.

The rough spots should be ironed out in committee. The saving would be not inconsiderable. Cut out the intermediate comedy of issuing $50 bonds. Those desiring to collect 3 per cent interest simply leave their money with the Government till ready to collect. Automatic application of bonus credits to insurance loans should also be provided, minus needless red tape.

A Catholic's View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As one who was raised a Catholic and who believes the church can and ought to be a power and influence for good in the world and at every opportunity should boldly champion the cause of justice, liberty and brotherhood of man as taught by our Savior, I want it known that I admire the speech made by the Rev. Michael O'Flanagan, delivered Tuesday in the municipal auditorium hall of St. Louis. He supported the present legally constituted government of the republic of Spain which the rebel forces, under Gen. Francisco Franco, now seek to destroy. According to Gen. Franco's own words, they would set up a government patterned after that of Fascist Italy—this being further substantiated by the fact that Franco has the active support of Mussolini, the Spanish royalists and all the former entrenched predatory interests.

The church which has its seat on the banks of the Tiber, in the Eternal City, is in need of more Father O'Flanagans in its governing body—the College of Cardinals—which in its present composition shows that the Italian representation and influence is out of all proportion to the financial contributions of other countries and the total Catholic population of the world.

'Ferocity' In Russia.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with interest your editorial of May 24, "The Russian Paradox," in which you imply that the recent Soviet executions were wholly unjustified. You first suggest that there was grave doubt as to the guilt of those executed, and then go on to say that even if they were guilty, as charged, of plotting to overthrow the Bolshevist government, the very existence of such plots proves that all is not serene in the land of the hammer and sickle.

As to the question of whether those executed were in fact guilty, I have not heard of a single correspondent who has attended or investigated first-hand the recent Soviet trials without reaching the conclusion that they were bona fide. Harold Denny, of the New York Times, said in a dispatch from Moscow only last Sunday that "from extreme skepticism regarding last summer's trial this writer has gradually come to credit much, if not all, of the findings of both that trial and last winter's."

As to your charge that all is not serene in the Soviet Union, it might be observed that serenity has never followed close upon heels of revolution. History does not depict France as a land of peace and quiet in the years immediately following 1789, nor did our Ship of State sail any too smoothly when we first cast off into the heavy seas of democracy. Furthermore, it would be strange indeed if an experiment so radical as that of the Russians did not arouse bitter opposition, both at home and abroad, during its early stages. With Germany on one side and Japan on the other, it is not hard to believe that espionage and sabotage in the Soviet Union are all too common.

When you refer to the "ferocity" with which the Reds have been punishing their enemies, it should not be forgotten that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. When the Spanish "Popular Front" government first came to power the left wing of that group viewed with alarm the activities of a comparatively small group of army officers, industrialists and priests. The Communists even went so far as to demand the execution of a certain trouble-maker named Francisco Franco. For this, the Spanish Reds were likewise accused by their less radical colleagues of "ferocity."

Those who survive the carnage in Spain today, however, will not be likely to use the word "ferocity" in connection with anything so tame as the orderly extermination of a handful of Fascists. J. M. M. Jr.

Senator Thomas' Proposal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When a valuable practical suggestion like that of Senator Thomas is made, it should reap the praise it merits. The suggestion referred to is the one he makes to prod loose the accumulated idle from Washington and secure their transfer to industrial labor centers (when needed) by paying their fare. True, many who have learned to accept favors gracefully (if not gratefully) will go for the ride and ornament the city again in spite of the effort, but some results will accure.

The Federal Building ballyhoo and the see-America's-transient-bureaus-by-freight craze of the early depression brought swarms of ragged sightseers to augment relief. We hope the Senator's program doesn't overlook the numerous cotton pickers, dislodged by our braintrusters' curtailment program, who have sampled the joys of relief and thrills of city life. Becoming habituated to what to them means the more abundant life, they won't be easy to pry loose. Curtailment of jail extension programs is one result that might confidently follow such reform.

I know of several industrial communities away from the larger centers where it has been necessary to advertise in out-of-town papers for skilled and common labor because of the impossibility of prying the relief-habituated out of their routine. DAN K. MILLER.

Mount Rainier, Md., June 1.

Reaction To The Shelling of Almeria.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The butchering of 800 children in Guernica, air-raids on Bilbao, shelling of Almeria and murdering of dozens of its inhabitants on the one hand—oppression of liberty, brutality against the own population, war against the church, jailing of priests on the other hand—that is the real face of Nazism and Germany of today.

The shelling of an open city without any announcement is an open act of war, and our Government should not hesitate to apply to Germany the provisions of the neutrality act of 1937, banning shipments of arms, munitions and war material to Germany. How can a government better demonstrate considering itself in a state of war than by bombarding an open city of another country? Unfortunately our government has shown up to date a pro-Nazi and pro-Fascist attitude not understandable to a great part of our population.

Germany and Italy would not dare to menace the peace of the world if they were not sure that the United States would continue furnishing war material for their armaments. Italy shipped her soldiers to Ethiopia with American fuel; Germany's bombs are made from American copper and iron; her airplanes which rained death and terror on Guernica use American gas and oil. Now she wants helium gas for her most formidable air machines, the dirigibles, which spread death and terror during the war. Videant consules, before it is too late!

And the American people may act too. How? What Germany needs most to push forward her mad rearmament and to continue her criminal adventure in Spain is foreign exchange. Since we have no money restrictions, our travelers bring hundreds of thousands of dollars every year to Germany and Italy. As equivalent they are going to be shadowed by the secret police of those countries; they cannot open their mouth without getting into trouble. They are shown the glittering surface of nazidom and fascism, parades, new buildings, propaganda, but they are not allowed to look behind the curtains, where they can see the misery and sufferings of those deprived of their rights and liberty. Helping to preserve the peace of the world should be worth abandoning a trip to countries which daily endanger it. Do not use their boats, do not buy their merchandise! Spend your money in our own country! Economic disadvantages only can bring their rulers to their senses. Morality and ethics are unknown to them. L. S. COX.

Rockville, Md., June 1.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your anti-Fascist editorial, "Does Germany Want War?" of June 1, was not only excellent, but it was really American. The author of it was, no doubt, imbued with the principles of our grandiose origin, the democracy-loving spirit of 1776.

It is really shocking to see so many Americans so indifferent in the face of all the cruelty being committed by Fascists to women and children in our Spanish sister republic.

What has happened to our manhood that it can so cold-bloodedly watch the blasting of devout Catholics, their limbs, heads, hearts hurled through the air, each time a heavy Fascist bomb finds its mark? Why are we so unmoved at the unheard of atrocities being perpetrated against the people fighting for the same principles that we fought in 1776?

What kind of Congress have we which enacted the cowardly arms embargo against the legitimate democracy of Spain, and refuses to enact one against the fascist butchers and interventionists?

How long, oh! Lord, how long will this ghastly slaughter of our innocent brethren continue?

REV. ERNEST M. FRENCH.

Washington, June 1.

The Post Impressionist

Prose Frame.

THE cool creative days of spring have given way to the first hot, soul-absorbing days of summer and your poetic frenzy has subsided from its corybantic enthusiasm to an occasional aspic quiver. The mail contains a letter concerning two poems you wrote so many months before, while the world was still poised between the darkness of winter and the light of spring.

"We are happy to announce that your poems, 'The Flying Floorwalker' and 'I Wonder How the Devils Swear,' though they did not win a prize in our contest, were deemed worthy because of their merit to be included in our new anthology of contemporary American poetry. We are trying to make this one of the best books of the year and are taking great care in our selection of material. We want it a book that you will be proud of, one that will do justice to your efforts.

"We are allowing those whose poems are included the privilege of subscribing for a minimum of three copies, at $3 a copy. The regular book store price will be $5. To take advantage of this offer, your order and check must be received before the book goes to press on May 28."

And this is the answer to your hopes. Your dream castles crumple softly. Your poems are too frail to launch themselves without a mercenary shove from behind. Instead of bringing home the bacon they strip your own larder.

Despondently, you make a few small-minded, unpoetic calculations. If poems are accepted from 500 poets and 400 bite, 400 times $9 each makes $3,600. And some will order more than three copies. Publishing must be a profitable business.

You read the letter again, lingering over the first paragraph. It has a certain lilting beauty that sets it apart as a masterpiece of prose composition. You recall the hours spent in composing the poems—the intense study of Roget's Thesaurus for synonyms of "devil." You think of the publisher, then run over the list memorized through constant reference, "demon, fiend, devil, imp, ogre, sprite . . ."

There was the mental struggle whether to use "Furies" or "Demons." How did the lines run . . .

I wonder how the Devils swear!
What the words that make them care!
What the nasty epithet
That the scornful Furies fret. . . .

It was the old question to be alliterative or not to be. The alliteration you knew to be a trick that has no place in poetry. But yours was a trick poem. Eventually you used "Furies" because if you chose the other word, there would be the question whether to spell it "Demons" or "Daemons."

* * *

The hypnotic first paragraph catches your eye again. You won't fall for an old dodge like this. If your poetry isn't strong enough to stand by itself, it is better that it fall. But even while you say this you are trying to figure some way of raising $9. It would be idiotic to borrow money for such a purpose. But you'll have the books, and you would have to buy one anyway for your mother. And you should get one for your sister. And secretly you know you want one for yourself.

Your mind seethes, and you start a parody on your own poem:

I wonder how the poets swear,
What the words to ease their care.

Perhaps the parody will be better than the original. But you can't stand many assessments of $9.

For the first time you realize that you have decided to order the books. You can't determine when you made the decision. At one moment you were set against the purchase and the next you considered the money as spent already. Also you are inwardly afraid that if you don't send the money, your poems might be rejected even at this last moment.

You brood, railing weakly at yourself for vanity and extravagance. Suddenly an idea. Perhaps you can make the story of the poems pay for the poems. So you sit down and try to record your impressions, to create a prose frame for a picture of verse.

STANLEY DISNEY

The Difference.

I do not know if the following anecdote was born in Italy or Germany; it circulates in both, passed from mouth to mouth, but only between people who know each other well, and in great secrecy.

"Daddy," asks a small boy, "What is the difference between socialism, communism and fascism?"

"It's like this, son: We have four cows in our cowhouse. Socialism will take two away from us, for the community."

"Then we have two left."

"Communism takes all four, and pays you a wage for the work you do."

"Where do the cows go?"

"They go to make up a bigger herd. Well, fascism leaves you all your cows, but it does all the milking."

Labor Dictatorship.

FROM MOST ACCOUNTS it seems that John L. Lewis is a fighting altruist whose beetling brows mask the compassion in his eyes, and for the sake of argument that may be conceded. It doesn't impair the fact that he is, on his record, something of a dictator, nor the further fact that with the growth of his power he has escaped a corresponding responsibility.

He may believe in democracy, but if so he gives a curious expression to that belief, because he has shown little patience with minorities, and apparently sees no great wrong in beating the ears off working people who don't believe as he does and refuse to do as he orders.

Otherwise we might have heard some remonstrance from him against those peaceful pickets who go to the line carrying ball bats, wagon spokes and gearshift levers with which to argue the constitutional right of other Americans to work for a living. That is a rather important constitutional right, and one for which Mr. Lewis himself has contended with some vigor for many years, and it is no more lightly to be arrogated by a labor leader and a mob than by a soulless corporation and a force of subsidized deputy sheriffs.

• • • •

STILL CONCEDING that Mr. Lewis is an altruist, with a heart full of pity for all that faction of the oppressed who accept his leadership, though for them only, the law is careless and dangerous in failing to take precautions against reckless conduct on his part or by some successor come to equal power who might have less noble motives.

Mere professions of altruism and the light in an individual's eyes are not sufficient guarantee against the damage that can be wrought by a man with so much might, and, anyway, if labor is to receive protection under the laws, labor should be compelled to assume responsibility for its acts and for the fulfillment of formal contracts.

As matters stand, a contract with a labor union is worth no more than the word of the leaders who sign it, and labor leaders, on the average, are no better than the employes with whom they have dealings.

In some cases, where practical labor leaders have maintained their contracts by calling off or even breaking outlaw strikes called in violation of signed agreements, they have been denounced as stooges for the employers. In this situation those who resent fulfillment of the contracts take a stand much the same as that of Mussolini and Hitler, who simply tear up an agreement whenever it interferes with their purposes and invite the world to sue them.

It is not uncommon in labor troubles for one or more unions to violate or sabotage signed contracts to compel an employer to sign another with an allied union, although what earthly good any contract can be under such conditions nobody has yet discovered.

• • • •

THE FACT IS that the labor leader very often is a dictator maintaining his power by union politics at the expense of democratic procedure, a peculiarity which places the rank and file in the position of the Italian or German citizens who just rock along submitting to discipline. If they dissent they may be denounced as traitors to labor, and if they get too fresh they may be slugged and lose their right to work at all.

I do not contend that this condition is general, although it is by no means rare, but the fact that it is inherent in the present arrangement cannot be denied or justified on any grounds but those of something called loyalty. Again, the great dictators used the same argument. Loyalty is what they say it is.

Union finances are big business involving enormous totals in legitimate dues and assessments as well as tributes levied by the leaders on American citizens, for permission to work at their occupations. These accounts now are matters of public interest, but though employers must open their books to the Government and may be punished for certain activities revealed by their accounts, the labor leader may follow a policy of "Treat 'em rough and tell 'em nothing" and is immune to rebuke for anything short of personal murder, if that.

A contract is no contract unless it is binding on both sides, and it can't be binding on labor until labor, like every other party to an agreement, stands to lose something for violation.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

John Bull And The Wedding.

Well, the British government certainly went out of its way to make the wedding of the Duke of Windsor a great success.

• • • •

What might have been just a fairly quiet wedding of an ex-king and a Baltimore girl was made the most talked-about ceremony of the century by the attitude of Great Britain.

• • • •

The Duke and Duchess couldn't have done better if they had hired a press agent.

• • • •

Everybody was willing and anxious to let Edward and his bride marry, settle down and be forgotten except Great Britain, which did better by the pair than Dexter Fellows ever did for that other circus.

• • • •

You can get an idea how slow-thinking John Bull is from the fact he still thinks love is something that can be taken care of by edicts and great seals. The sun never sets on British stupidity.

• • • •

When the world first heard rumors of the romance between King Edward and Mrs. Simpson it was a little inclined to disapprove, but the British government proceeded to adopt an attitude that switched opinion overnight.

• • • •

By the time the government got through issuing statements it had the whole world cheering for the marriage.

• • • •

Imagine a country as big and as experienced as England not knowing that the most unpopular man at any function is the fellow who throws rocks at a wedding!

• • • •

Had England permitted a wedding on the grand scale, with members of the nobility fighting their way to the punch bowls, the moving-picture rights wouldn't have been worth half so much.

• • • •

The whole affair would have looked like another coronation reel.

• • • •

But nobody will be able to look at the pictures of John Bull sawing a wedding in half without giving a louder cheer for Eddie and Wally than ever.

• • • •

It seems Wally will not be known as Her Royal Highness and in all official ceremonies will have to walk at the tail end of the section reserved for duchesses.

• • • •

But England is fooling itself once again. For that's where all the photographers and correspondents will be.

Pinkus Pratt Looks At His Taxes

Petunia Man Queries Congressman On $100 Levy.

By Louis M. Jiggitts,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Petunia R. F. D. No. 1.
April 10, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I read an article in the paper the other day that has worried me. This article said that the average fellows were spending a hundred dollars a year in taxes we didn't know about, and this is besides all the other taxes I pay direct.

I am writing to know what you can do about it.

Your old friend,
PINKUS PRATT.

Washington, D. C.
April 13, 1937.

Mr. Pinkus Pratt,
R. F. D., Petunia.
My dear Mr. Pratt:

Your interesting letter arrived during the absence of the Congressman, but I am sure that he will regret to learn that you have erroneously paid $100.00 in taxes. I am certain that he will be glad to assist you in making a claim for a refund, and I am sending a blank form for you to complete.

Assuring you that the Congressman is always delighted to be of service to his constituents, I am

Your's sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Petunia R. F. D. No. 1
April 15, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

The blank your secretary sent me arrived, but I can't fill it out because I don't know what taxes I paid and besides it would probably take a lawyer to get the money, and if I had to pay the lawyer what would be the use of getting it? And besides I've learned t once you have paid taxes you might as well forget it.

What I am interested in is saving the hundred dollars next year so I can come to see you and the cherry blossoms. What are you going to do about it? Wouldn't taxes be lowered if you got the Government to economize?

Your old friend,
PINKUS PRATT.

P. S. I saw in the papers the other day that a Senator kissed a movie actress, but Congressman Bankhead didn't put his arms around two pretty girls. Why?

Washington, D. C.
April 17, 1937.

Mr. Pinkus Pratt,
R. F. D. Petunia.
My dear Mr. Pratt:

Your letter arrived during the Congressman's absence. The Congressman had his doodle analyzed this morning and he has gone home this afternoon with a headache. But in his absence I am glad to inform you that he is giving considerable thought to the important matter of economy.

Your's sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P. S. I suppose he liked it. As Congressman Fulpan remarked at the time, "Senators are human after all, even if they don't act that way sometimes when they block a Congressman's postmaster choice."

Petunia R. F. D. No. 1.
April 19, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

There seems to be a great deal of talk about economy up there, but I don't see where you have done anything yet. Please let me know just what you have decided to do.

What in the world is a doodle?

Your old friend, PINKUS PRAT

Mr. Pinkus Pratt,
R. F. D., Petunia.
Dear Friend Pinkus:

I was very pleased to receive your letter. It is always refreshing to get a letter from a faithful constituent. And I am glad to inform you that economy is still uppermost in my mind. You can rest assured that I will take adequate measures to effect a safe and sound saving in government expenses.

Whenever I can be of further assistance to you, please do not hesitate to call on me. Your friend.

CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia, R. F. D. No. 1.
April 29, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I am glad you are giving thought to economy. I feel sure that this means something, in spite of Hezekiah Hawks.

Hezekiah was passing by yesterday on his way to Petunia from Detour and I told him that I was writing to you about economy and taxes. He said I was wasting my time, as you couldn't do anything in the first place, and wouldn't do anything if you could in the second place.

What's the matter with you and Hezekiah? He's pretty powerful over in Detour, you know.

Let me know as soon as possible what you are doing about economy.

Your old friend,
PINKUS PRATT.

Washington, D. C.
May 1, 1937.

Mr. Pinkus Pratt,
R. F. D. Petunia.
Dear Friend Pinkus:

Your letter about Hezekiah Hawks' remarks has worried me somewhat. Friend Hawks is evidently upset about not securing the postmastership at Detour. I had no idea that he wanted it until after I had recommended Zeke Zeegler, and then it was, of course, too late. If you see him again I would appreciate your telling him that I would certainly have recommended him if I had known in time.

I hope you will explain this satisfactorily to Friend Hawks.

Your friends,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia, R. F. D. No. 1.
May 4, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I did what you asked me to do, but I don't think I got the results you wanted. I went right over to Detour when I got your letter and told Hezekiah what you said. All he said was "Baloney." But he went and told Zeke Zeegler what I said and Zeke Zeegler came to me and asked if it was true. When I said yes, he got mad too.

If I was you I wouldn't call Hezekiah a friend. He ain't any friend of yours. Not any more anyhow. What else do you want me to do for you?

Your old friend,
PINKUS PRATT.

Washington, D. C.
May 6, 1937.

Mr. Pinkus Pratt,
R. F. D. Petunia.
Dear Friend Pinkus:

I appreciate your favor very much but perhaps under the circumstances it is best to take no further steps just at present.

Thanking you again for your faithful efforts in my behalf, I am

Your friend,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia, R. F. D. No. 1.
May 13, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I don't blame you for having a headache. I guess I'd have one, too, every time I thought of Detour if I was you.

I noticed in the paper that they are still talking a lot about economy, but I saw the other day where the Senate cut 60 million out of one thing and the House added 300 million to another. I don't see how they can balance the budget that way.

Please let me know what you are doing so I'll know whether I'll save the hundred dollars for next year.

Your old friend,
PINKUS PRATT.

Washington, D. C.
May 15, 1937.

Mr. Pinkus Pratt,
R. F. D., Petunia.
Dear Friend Pinkus:

I have determined that the time has arrived to economize, and I am glad to let you know of this definite decision.

I had thought of the possibility of cutting 15 per cent off all appropriations, but on reflection I realized that such indiscriminate cutting might seriously cripple many useful governmental agencies.

Then I thought it might be wise to cut the relief appropriation but I realize that this would not be feasible with so many unemployed.

And I also thought that we might abolish a few bureaus, but, upon second thought, I realized that this would be impossible.

You can see that I have been giving very close consideration to the matter and I feel very hopeful that I can shortly evolve a plan to cut Government expenses and please every one.

Assuring you that it is always a pleasure to express myself openly and frankly to my constituents on all important matters, I am

Your friend,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia R. F. D. No. 1.
May 17, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I can see that you have been thinking but it looks like every time you get an idea you turn around and oppose yourself. But I guess you have a good reason for opposing your ideas.

I have an idea too. Since it looks like all of you think there ought to be economy, why don't you get some of the Congressmen together with a few Senators and do something.

Your old friend,
PINKUS PRATT.

P. S. How many unemployed are there now?

Washington, D. C.
May 19, 1937.

Mr. Pinkus Pratt,
R. F. D. Petunia,
My Dear Mr. Pratt:

The Congressman has retired to a private office to give thought to economy, but I am glad to answer your question. You want to know why the Congressman can't get Senator Robinson and Senator Vandenburg together with Congressman Rayburn and Congressman Snell and the others you mentioned and agree on economy. I regret to inform you that, while I am sure the Congressman considers your idea a most excellent one, it would not be feasible at present as the Congressman's time is so fully occupied that it would be impossible for him to call these distinguished gentlemen into a private conference. But I feel certain that he will file your fine suggestion for future reference.

In fact, Congressman Fulpan seldom sees some of the distinguished people you named, although he did mention seeing Congressman Snell in the well of the House the other day.

Assuring you that it has been a pleasure to answer your inquiry and regretting that your spendid idea cannot be fully developed, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P. S. Nobody knows for certain. Some say eleven million, some six million and some four million. Congressman Fulpan hasn't decided definitely yet.

Petunia R. F. D. No. 1.
May 22, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

What in the world was Congressman Snell doing in the well? I didn't even know you had a well. Looks like with all the money you are spending on the air conditioning I've been reading about you could at least have running water in the house.

And what does your secretary mean about your retiring to a private office? I didn't know you ever hid from your constituents.

Your old friend,
PINKUS PRATT.

P. S. Why don't you take a census? How do you know how to appropriate money for relief if you don't know how many need it?

Washington, D. C.
May 25, 1937.

Mr. Pinkus Pratt,
R. F. D. Petunia.
Dear Friend Pinkus:

Your letter disturbs me again. I hope you haven't the impression that I would ever dodge a constituent. One of the greatest pleasures in my strenuous life here is to have friends from my district call on me. I am afraid that my able secretary has been a little indiscreet in writing of this office, and I hope that you will not mention it. It is true that some of us leaders have to retire occasionally to give thought to important matters, but we do not, of course, permit this to interfere with the one great pleasure that we have here of seeing our constituents whenever they are in Washington.

I retired to the office, as my able secretary mentioned, to give thought to the matter in which you are interested. I want you to know that I am very hopeful of effecting some workable plan of economy that will leave everyone highly pleased. In fact, I have good news for you. I have insisted that the Government reorganization bill be brought out shortly and I hope to use this to effect economy that will astonish you.

If you have any further ideas on the subject I will be delighted to hear from you. Your friend,

CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia, R. F. D. No. 1.
May 27, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I am glad you have found a way to help me, as I cannot give you any more ideas for a while. My wife says economy begins at home, and I had better start by saving writing paper and stamps. She also said I was beginning to neglect the cows for you, and I am going to take her suggestion and leave the national economy question to you and give more attention to the cows.

Hoping that you will be able to save the $100 for me next year, and assuring you that I appreciate your letters, I am Your old friend,
PINKUS PRATT.

P. S.—Why don't you get yourself that Supreme Court appointment?

Washington, D. C.
May 29, 1937.

Mr. Pinkus Pratt,
R. F. D. Petunia.
My dear Mr. Pratt:

I am sure that the Congressman will regret to learn that you have had to neglect the cows for him and that you cannot give him any ideas, but you may be sure that he is giving the matter his very closest consideration and that definite steps will be taken by him to effect national economy in due course.

I am glad to inform you that you can safely leave this highly important matter in the capable hands of the Congressman.

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P. S.—The Congressman has been mentioned prominently, but he does not choose. He prefers to remain faithful to his constituents. He has always made it a rule to sacrifice his own interests to the welfare of his country.

How Neutral?

By Barnet Nover

America's Weight In The Scale.

IN APPEALING, as he did, to the German and Spanish governments through their Ambassadors for a peaceful adjustment of the situation arising out of the Ibiza incident and the Almeria bombardment, Secretary Hull was echoing the fervent hope of the American people.

It is clear that the United States is interested in the preservation of peace in Europe for more than sentimental and humanitarian reasons alone. We have a very tangible and vital stake in peace everywhere in the world. We might manage to stay out of a European war should one break out at this time, although this is problematical. But it is certain we could not escape the evil repercussions of such a dreadful development. After all, we did not escape the belated but nonetheless devastating economic aftermath of the last war. And history is likely to repeat itself after the next.

From the viewpoint of our own interests, therefore, the present situation demands that the United States do everything it can to aid the forces of peace in Europe and, as a corollary, to do everything it can to restrain those powers that are inclined to unleash the dogs of war.

• • • •

BUT HOMILIES are not enough. There is no reason to believe that the Fascist nations, whose contempt for peace, international law and considerations of humanity they have taken no pains to hide, will be moved by moral preachments by Uncle Sam or anyone else.

If they do take our advice into account it will be for very practical reasons. It will be because they realize, if we ourselves may not, that the United States can throw an onormous weight into the scales and because, among other considerations, they fear that if our advice is flouted this weight will be thrown in against them.

The United States is professedly neutral in Europe's quarrels. This Nation had nothing to do with bringing on the Spanish crisis and has no responsibility for the turn events have taken in the Old World. Nonetheless, we now find ourselves in a very paradoxical position. For if we propose to be truly neutral, in the sense of doing nothing whatever, then, clearly, Secretary Hull's earnest pleas to Germany will have no force that the Third Reich will find it necessary to respect. On the other hand, insofar as Mr. Hull's efforts do make a dent on the Nazis, it will be because the United States is not and cannot be neutral where the question of war or peace is involved.

• • • •

IT IS A PARADOX which has dogged our foreign policy for years and will continue to do so as long as we humbug ourselves into the belief that the United States is or can be isolated and that neutrality has or can have any real meaning for a nation with our power, our influence and our far-reaching interests.

It is a curious fact, certainly, that at present our principal instrument of policy is the neutrality act which was never intended to be an instrument of policy at all but only a bomb-proof cellar to hide in when the guns begin to roar abroad.

At the present juncture of affairs Italy and Germany are forced take into account the possibility that, should they indulge in further acts of hostility against the Spanish government, the American neutrality act will be applied to them. And already the United States is in a position of being able to brandish that law over their heads as a sword.

The demand that the act be applied to the Fascist powers has been made in the Senate and House with great force as a consequence of the Almeria bombardment. It has behind it considerable public support. And it certainly can be argued that if the United States did not wait, in 1935, until Italy had actually declared war on Ethiopia to declare that a state of war existed, there is no reason to wait now in view of Malaga, Guadalajara, Guernica and Almeria. Or was the march of the Italians into Ethiopia less of an act of war than the bombardment of Almeria?

• • • •

THE TRADE balances of Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy are in none too happy a plight. Desperately in need of foreign exchange, they would be seriously hurt were they to come within the scope of the neutrality act's prohibitions. It would mean that Americans should not travel on their ships. At the beginning of a tourist season the loss to them in badly needed foreign exchange might be considerable.

In view of this circumstance, Mr. Hull's plea for peace has teeth in it, whether or not these teeth are permitted to do any biting. But if the adverse economic effects of applying the neutrality law to Germany and Italy may be considerable, the political repercussions of such a move are also certain to be considerable.

Some argue that it would make it more difficult and perhaps impossible for Great Britain and France to continue their efforts to win Germany and Italy back into the nonintervention fold. Thus, it is said, instead of being a factor for peace, the extension of the neutrality act to cover the new situation in Spain, would only make matters worse.

This, of course, is conjectural. But the very circumstance that the United States is being asked to take into account the actions and points of view of the London and Paris government in applying or withholding from application a law on our statute books is illuminating.

Co-operation with Great Britain and France may be an excellent thing. There is much to recommend such a course, particularly if the American people clearly understand what is being done and the United States has some say in the proceedings of such a united front of democratic powers. But it is quite another matter when such co-operation is covertly undertaken in the name of neutrality, with the United States forced, willy nilly, to run after the Franco-British chariot.

The fact of the matter is that the United States, desperately anxious to stay out of Europe's quarrels cannot ignore the circumstance that Europe's quarrels, by leading to war, may have a deleterious effect on ourselves. The inevitable implication of this is that our policy is bound to be affected by considerations of whether our action or inaction will contribute to the peace of the Old World or make war more likely. Thus our peace policy gets into the way of our neutrality policy and vice versa.

The Constitution

By William Lyon Phelps

Prayer Of The U. S.

In this year of 1937 all Americans should fix their minds frequently and steadily on the Constitution of the Country, which came into being exactly 150 years ago. Two miracles happened—the writing of such a Constitution and its adoption. The delegates to the convention were indeed a collection of remarkable men. Prof. Morison says, "The temper of the convention, in marked contrast to that of the French Constituent Assembly of 1789, was realistic and objective, rather than idealistic and theoretical. 'Experience must be our only guide. Reason may mislead us' was the keynote struck by Dickinson."

• • • •

I have always thought it interesting that the year 1789, which saw the beginning of the French Revolution in Europe, saw the First President of the U. S. A. take office.

Although Europe was far away in those days, and many persons seem to think that the 13 colonies were not of world-wide interest, the fact is that all Europe was watching the Americans, as it had been watching them since July 4, 1776.

• • • •

Finally, it is interesting to remember the Prayer for the United States of America composed by George Washington.

"Almighty God, we make our earnest prayer that Thou wilt keep the United States in Thy holy protection; that Thou wilt incline the hearts of the citizens to cultivate a spirit of co-operation, subordination and obedience to government; and entertain a brotherly affection and love for one another and for their fellow citizens of the United States at large.

"And finally that Thou wilt most graciously be pleased to dispose us all to do justice, to love mercy, and to demean ourselves with that charity, humility and pacific temper of mind which were the characteristics of the Divine Author of our blessed religion and without a humble imitation of whose example in these things we can never hope to be a happy Nation.

"Grant our supplication, we beseech Thee, through Jesus Christ our Lord."

Wallace Assigns Co-ordinator for Dust Bowl Control

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace announced yesterday Roy I. Kimmel, Amarillo, Tex., had been placed in charge of a long-time program in the Southwestern dust bowl.

Wallace told a press conference Kimmel would co-ordinate all activities of Department of Agriculture agencies in 100 counties of Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas.

Wallace said M. L. Wilson, Undersecretary of Agriculture, who recently visited the dust bowl area, would be in direct charge of the co-ordinated program. He said experience and advice of State, regional and county organizations and governments would be utilized.

Wilson told reporters the long-time program in the dust bowl region called for removal from cultivation of thousands of acres where top soil had been blown away, and shift of additional thousands of acres from cultivated crops to grass and pasture.

Wilson said recommendations made by the Great Plains Drought Commission, appointed by President Roosevelt, would form the basis for the long-time program.

Pope Pius Assigns New Bishop in U.S.

Pope Pius has appointed the Rev. Paul Schulte, of St. Louis, to be Bishop of the Diocese of Leavenworth, Kans.

Announcement of the appointment was made last night by the apostolic delegate, Archbishop Amleto Giovanni Cicognani.

Japan Group Sees U. S. Business Men

New York, June 2 (AP).—The Japanese economic mission conferred today with several American business men about questions of a Japanese-American trade to be discussed with business groups in the East.

Topics will include cable rates and cotton standards and, on the mission's visit to Washington, a review of export and import statistics.

New York, June 2 (AP).—A group of 17 oil men sailed on the Normandie today for the World Petroleum Congress in Paris this month.

They will discuss new problems and discoveries in petroleum with 1,300 other oil experts from 30 countries. The congress will be invited by the American contingent to hold its 1940 sessions in Tulsa, Okla.

House Passes Bill To Link Capital, Ottawa by Air

A bill which would make possible airmail service between Washington and Ottawa, the Canadian capital, was passed by the House yesterday afternoon and sent to the Senate.

Sponsored by Representative Mead (Democrat), New York, chairman of the Postoffice Committee, the legislation authorized 3,000 additional miles or airmail routes. Mead said the Postoffice Department had approximately $250,000 available for extensions and additional schedules on existing routes.

The capital-to-capital route, which has been proposed many times, would go by way of Buffalo, N. Y. During the last six months, several companies have considered such a service.

The new legislation would increase airmail routes from 32,000 to 35,000 miles, meaning an anuual increase in airmail miles of from 45,000,000 to 52,000,000.

Congress Will Get Roosevelt Message

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt will send Congress today what may be his last major recommendation this session—a message proposing a network of regional power, flood control and national planning authorities.

The communication is expected to urge creation of a series of administrative agencies similar to the Tennessee Valley Authority. They would supervise sale of surplus power at Federal dams and draw up soil and water conservation and flood-control programs.

The message will be the twenty-second—counting regular annual communications and letters to committee chairmen—sent by the President since the current Congressional term began January 5.

Mr. Roosevelt completed the message before he returned yesterday morning from a three-day visit to his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., but it could not be delivered yesterday because the Senate was in recess.

C.I.O. Asks Inquiry In Labor Spying

Coatesville, Pa., June 2 (AP).—The U. S. Senate Civil Liberties Committee was asked today to investigate "immediately" charges that private detectives have been brought to Coatesville to intimidate employes of the Lukens Steel Co.

J. J. Lever, field director for the Committee of Industrial Organization, sent a telegram to Senator La Follette saying:

"It has come to our attention that, pending the Labor Board hearing now being held as a result of our charges against Lukens Steel Co., agents of a notorious detective agency have been brought here to intimidate Lukens workers. We request an immediate investigation."

The C. I. O. charged the company has been guilty of unfair labor practices.

Private Power, Md.REA Group Arrange Truce

Tri-County Co-operative, Light Firm Agree to Avoid Competition.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 2.—An agreement to avoid competition with a private concern paved the way today for the Southern Maryland Tri-County Co-operative Association, Inc., to present its plan to the public service commission for providing electric service in Prince Georges, Charles and St. Marys counties.

Counsel for the association and for the Maryland Light & Power Co. announced during the hearing that they had agreed that the company will offer no contenst for the Pearson area if the co-operative will not give service to persons living in the Loveville and Morganza sections.

After the association had presented its proposal for erecting a 162-mile transmission and distribution system in southern Maryland and called several witnesses to testify as to its need, the commission took the co-operative's application under advisement.

REA Loan Contracted.

The Rural Electrification Administration announced in Washington during the day that it had executed a loan contract with the association for not more than $165,000 to aid in the project. The association asked the commission for permission to issue a promissory note to secure this loan.

The only objection to the association's application at the hearing was presented by S. W. C. Webb, of Salisbury, counsel for the Maryland Light & Power Co., which already operates transmission lines in some sections of Southern Maryland.

Webb questioned the first two witnesses, Wendell M. Reed, of Welcome, president of the association, and Col. Peter M. Anderson, of Washington, its electrical and mechanical engineer, before the agreement was reached. Raymond S. Williams, of Baltimore, and J. Edward Burroughs, jr., of Washington, represented the association.

Authority Changed.

The utility company had previously received permission from the commission to erect a 6-mile transmission line between Great Falls and Pearson in St. Marys County. The association requested this authority be rescinded in order to construct a 30-mile line in that section.

The agreement provided that the utility give up its authority except for one mile north of Great Mills. The association agreed to leave Loveville and Morganza out of its service. It was pointed out at the hearing that no customers had been signed up in the vicinity of the two communities.

16 Casualties as Bus Plunges 135 Feet

H. J. Sandford, chief petty officer on the U. S. S. Monahan, was killed and 15 other men were hurt when this bus carrying 33 Navy men from Los Angeles to San Diego collided near Del Mar with an oil truck trailer and plunged 135 feet off the road.

House District Group Again Lacks Quorum

For the second successive week the House District Committee failed to obtain a quorum yesterday and the weekly meeting was postponed. As a consequence action on the revised abattoir bill and the daylight saving time measure was delayed another week.

Chairman Mary T. Norton introduced the revised abattoir bill prepared by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal and expressed the hope that hearings may be started the latter part of next week.

Painter, Throat Cut By Razor, Near Death

Neumler Nash, 35, 455 G street northwest, was near death in Gallinger Hospital last night after he was found in his home with his throat slashed. A razor blade was found at his side.

A painter, Nash was discovered by his wife, Mrs. Flossie Nash. Taken to Casualty Hospital his condition was reported serious and he was transferred to Gallinger Hospital. Mrs. Nash told police she knew no reason why her husband should attempt to end his life.

Coast Guard Station's Continuance Is Asked

By the Associated Press.

Senator Millard E. Tydings, of Maryland, asked the Coast Guard yesterday to study requests that the Green Run Coast Guard Station be continued.

He said proposed discontinuance of the station would leave 12 miles of shoreline without protection. The Green Run Station now has a staff of two men, and buildings recently were prepared. The station is on the Eastern Shore of Maryland near Chincoteague, Va.

Reserve Board Approves U. S. Security Issue

Cash Supply Dwindles; Total Sought to Be Announced Today.

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury Department arranged yesterday to increase its dwindling cash supply through new borrowing.

Secretary Morgenthau completed preparations for the June 15 financing at a closed meeting with members of the Federal Reserve Board's open market committee.

The committee customarily is consulted on Treasury borrowing because it dictates Reserve Board policy in the purchase and sale of Government securities.

Morgenthau will announce the total of June borrowing today, officials said, but the type of securities to be issued will not be disclosed until next week.

Debt Mounting.

Informed authorities predicted the financing, including $300,000,000 to meet a discount bill maturity, would go over $500,000,000. Some persons expressed belief it might reach $750,000,000.

If the latter amount is borrowed, the public debt on June 30, when the fiscal year ends, will total about $35,600,000,000. This would be $1,800,000,000 above the debt at the end of last year, and $600,000,000 over the figure predicted for this year by the Budget Bureau last January.

The Treasury's supply of cash available for spending now totals $305,400,000—the smallest in four years. The total probably will be reduced further by June 15.

Treasury officials said they are hopeful that June tax collections will push this year's revenues above the $5,224,000,000 forecast by President Roosevelt last month.

Income tax receipts through May 31 totaled $1,610,000,000, the Treasury reported yesterday, and some authorities said they might aggregate $800,000,000 this month. If the latter figure is realized, these receipts will top recently revised estimates by about $100,000,000.

To Replace Leviathan.

The Maritime Commission yesterday announced it had rejected all bids for construction of a new combination passenger-cargo ship for the United States Lines Co. of New York, to replace the Leviathan in the transatlantic trade.

Syrian Parliament Threatens to Hold State With 'Blood'

Bierut, Syria, June 2 (AP).—Disorders broke out in the Alexandretta region today immediately after the Syrian Parliament refused to ratify the League of Nation's decision to make that district autonomous.

Turkey had insisted on separation of the region, called the Sanjak, in line with the establishment of separate, autonomous states of Syria and Lebanon, both of which have been supervised by France under League mandate. Syria and Lebanon are to become independent in 1939.

The Syrian Parliament, fighting against the League's plan to make the Sanjak also a separate unit, declared Syria was indivisible under the Franco-Syrian treaty, which provided for Syrian independence.

"We will hold the Sanjak with blood," a resolution said.

British Show Magnate Praises American Legs

New York, June 2 (U.P.).—C. B. Cochran, British revue producer who has looked at so many female legs that he is content to stay indoors on windy days, said tonight that the American girl had the finest in the world—"the tapering greyhound type."

"English faces are just as pretty as American faces," Cochran said. "Sometimes prettier because they have more character and are less standardized. But it seems to be a question of legs. American girls have the tapering greyhound type and we don't."

105 Engineers Get Diplomas At Bliss Finals

Dean G. B. Woods, of A.U., Delivers Graduation Address.

Deriding the idea the world owes them anything, Dr. George Benjamin Woods, dean of the College of Liberal Arts of American University, last night addressed the graduates of the Bliss Electrical School, Takoma Park, Md.

Dr. Woods told the graduates they must not rely on society to go out of its way for them. They should adopt an adventurous spirit, he said, adding that the frontiers are wide open for them to gain success in the scientific world.

"Society has been retreating as far as general morals are concerned. It has become too paternalistic and has too much sympathy toward the criminal. Without a democracy no such thing as freedom of education and science can exist," Dr. Woods stated.

Louis Denton Bliss, president, presented the diplomas to 105 graduates, assisted by Charles F. Ferry and Eugene W. Bond. Benediction and invocation were given by the Rev. Ralph Dela Smith, pastor of Woodside Methodist Church.

Diplomas were awarded to:

57 at Staunton Are Graduated

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., June 2.—Fifty-seven seniors at Staunton Military Academy yesterday received diplomas from Col. Emory J. Middour, superintendent. Jay Winston Johns, of Ash Lawn, president of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, delivered the address.

Highest honors in the academic department went to Robert R. Brafford, of Ohio.

Dogs, Missing Bags Complicate Sailing of Mrs. J. B. Harriman

Copyright by the Associated Press.

A missing maid, missing luggage and two dogs temporarily complicated the departure of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, right, as she sailed yesterday for Norway to take up her duties there as American Minister. "But don't say I'm upset, because I'm not," said Mrs. Harriman, reading a telegram to her daughter, Mrs. Harriman Russell.

New Minister to Norway Departs on Liner Washington for New Post; Other Envoys Sail on Same Ship.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 2.—A missing maid, missing luggage and two dogs today complicated the departure of Mrs. J. Borden (Daisy) Harriman for her post as United States Minister to Norway.

Mrs. Harriman, the second woman to be appointed to a ministerial office, got on board the liner Washington shortly before 11 o'clock and discovered her stateroom bare except for some diplomatic pouches and baggage.

"But don't say I'm upset, because I'm not," admonished Mrs. Harriman as she looked anxiously for her maid, who preceded her by an hour with the luggage.

Meanwhile, she wrote a check for $42 to get Kim, her German shepherd, and Bart, her cocker spaniel, on board. The missing maid and luggage arrived shortly before the liner sailed at noon.

The $42 represented the passage fare and tax for the dogs, of which Mrs. Harriman said she was very fond.

The minister said she hoped she would be "as much credit to my country as was Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen," Minister to Denmark and first woman appointed to such a post.

George S. Messersmith, Minister to Austria, and Frederick A. Sterling, Minister to Bulgaria, who is on leave to serve as United States Commissioner to the Paris Exposition, also sailed on the Washington.

"I am simply delighted to be coming to Norway—a country where I've never been and which has so much in common with us," said Mrs. Harriman. "Norway is a democracy which has always had a consistent attitude toward peace and which has always been in the forefront in social security legislation."

Mrs. Harriman was accompanied by Jaqueline Story, her secretary. Her daughter, Mrs. Harriman Russell, of Beverley Hills, Calif., and her sister, Mrs. George H. Harris, of Concord, N. H., were at the dock. Mrs. Harriman said her 16-year-old granddaughter, Phyllis Russell, would join her in Oslo later in the summer.

Mrs. Harriman declined to answer direct questions about her post and said "I am leaving with the usual instructions which are given to ministers by the State Department."

She interposed that she did not want "scare-headlines, please, gentlemen."

"Do you think you've had enough scare-headlines?" asked a reporter.

"To that remark, I don't want to be quoted as saying yes or no, but you know the story," answered Mrs. Harriman.

The day after she was named minister, Mrs. Harriman startled the State Department by inadvertently disclosing that negotiations for a trade pact with Norway were well under way.

Justice Hudgins Speaks.

Charlottesville, Va., June 2.—Speaking at the Buckingham County Home-coming exercises, held at Lee's bivouac site, Justice E. W. Hudgins, of Chase City, member of the Supreme Court of Virginia, predicted that the conflict between capital and labor would be peacefully settled, and that the established form of democratic government would be preserved.

Weight Chief Asks Uniform Can Systems

Present Sizes Deceive Food Purchasers, Is Charge.

The twenty-seventh annual Conference on Weights and Measures was told yesterday that Federal action is needed to simplify the task of making certain that the buyers of canned foods get their money's worth.

George Warner, Wisconsin's chief inspector of weights and measures, stated that inconsistencies in the present maze of can sizes and systems of measurements were "nothing short of ingenuity to deceive the purchaser."

Standardization Sought.

The conference was shown by Warner an exhibit of 52 cans of different sizes being used in the sales of foods. He proposed a Federal law standardizing such cans at seven sizes, ranging from one-fourth of a pint to 1 gallon.

"If the people realized they were not getting accurate measurement in the cans of food they are buying now they would demand that these cans be carefully checked," said Warner.

"It is impossible," he added, "under present conditions to give the consumers or the honest packers any protection now."

Size Juggling.

Warner placed on exhibit a can holding 13¾ fluid ounces, which is used for packing about 75 per cent of Wisconsin's output of condensed milk.

This "favorite can" was reduced in size from 16 ounces in 1933, he said, adding that it was difficult to notice any difference in the size unless the cans were standing side by side.

The price of canned milk was not proportionately reduced, he said, so that Wisconsin producers gained about $3,500,000 by cutting the can size.

Reich, Italian Arms Embargo Spurned by U.S.

Government Will Continue Neutral Policies in Spanish Crisis.

By William V. Nessly.

Drives to have this country declare Germany and Italy belligerents in the Spanish civil war were repulsed yesterday, as the Government firmly maintained the policies it has pursued throughout the crisis, after a two-hour conference between President Roosevelt, Secretary of State Hull, Undersecretary Welles, and Norman Davis Ambassador at large.

The "stand pat" attitude of this Government apparently was supported by the general review of world affairs that marked the President's luncheon discussion with his foreign affairs advisers.

It was reflected later when a delegation of four House members called on the Secretary of State to urge an arms embargo against Germany and Italy, but failed to receive any commitments in favor of their proposal.

Won't Consider Ban.

At the Capitol, meanwhile, Chairman Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said that group would make no move toward invoking the neutrality act against other powers than Spain because "it might endanger our own peace."

Stephen T. Early, White House secretary, said after the luncheon conference that Secretary Hull had reported nothing new had occurred in the Spanish crisis since he talked with the President by phone to Hyde Park, N. Y., before the President's return to the Capital early yesterday.

Aside from the Spanish situation, Early reported, the discussions were general in nature, nothing specific or definite having been decided. A general discussion of world affairs, it was understood, brought no tendency to alter this country's policy of maintaining strict neutrality while at the same time urging all nations to settle their differences peaceably.

Called Act of War.

The four House members who visited Secretary Hull include: Jerry J. O'Connell (Democrat), Montana; John T. Bernard (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota; John M. Coffee (Democrat), Washington, and Robert G. Allen (Democrat), Pennsylvania.

They made public a letter to the Secretary, declaring "the wanton bombardment of Almeria by Nazi warships is an act of war, * * * the latest in a long series of brutal and warlike attacks by the Italian and German governments upon the brave Spanish people."

It added:

"Further delay in including Italy and Germany within the embargo now enforced against the legitimate government of Spain is tantamount to a declaration that the United States Government, despite all official statements to the contrary, has sided with the traitor general, Francisco Franco, and his allies, the Fascist invaders of Spanish soil."

Caution Need Cited.

Secretary Hull reminded the delegation, O'Connell said, that this country must move cautiously, but assured them that every phase of the crisis is being studied by the department.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, at the same time, declined to advance a resolution by Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, which was designed to extend provisions of the neutrality act to Italy and Germany. The committee reviewed the entire European situation, and later Chairman Pittman said:

"The President has the authority to declare that a state of war exists and whether the neutrality act should be invoked. The European non-intervention nations are seeking to keep the warfare localized in Spain and so far have succeeded. There is nothing we can do to aid them and any attempted action on our part might disrupt their efforts and endanger our own peace."

Other developments here included the summoning home of the Spanish Ambassador, Fernando de Los Rios, for a general conference of Spanish officials and diplomats on the war situation. He is to sail June 9.

Action Deferred.

The Senate Finance Committee deferred action on all measures to take the profits out of war, pending a report from the Treasury on profits of munitions makers during the World War.

Secretary of Commerce Roper told his press conference that apparently Spain is trying to get all the money it can from foreign trade to help finance its war.

He said that in the first three months of this year United States exports to Spain totaled only $970,000, compared with $10,391,000 in the corresponding period of last year. At the same time, American imports from Spain were $4,716,000, only $225,000 below the total for the first quarter of 1936.

Of interest, also, was the disclosure by Chairman James M. Mead (Democrat), New York, of the House Postoffice Committee, that 1,000 planes in the mail service of this country could quickly be transformed into bombers. His statement preceded action by the House approving a bill to increase the air-mail service by 3,000 route miles and 7,000,000 flown miles yearly. The extension also will increase the number of trained pilots available, he said.

Reich, Vatican Relations Held Virtually Ended

By the United Press.

Vatican City, June 2.—Diplomatic relations between Germany and the Holy See were virtually "suspended" tonight as the papal nuncio to Berlin prepared to return to the Vatican under pretext of taking a vacation.

Diplomats accredited to the Vatican said that a definite rupture of relations between the Nazi government and Pope Pius XI seemed almost certain, as result of an anti-Nazi speech by George Cardinal Mundelein in Chicago.

Germany, in a note to the Vatican yesterday, threatened to break off diplomatic relations because of the Pope's refusal to denounce the Chicago Archbishop's description of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler as "an Austrian paperhanger, and a poor one at that."

Refuses To Discuss Reports.

Vatican officials refused to discuss reports that Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, Vatican secretary of state, had ordered the recall of Mgr. Cesate Orsenigo, nuncio to Berlin.

Informed prelates believed, however, that Mgr. Orsenigo was coming from Berlin to make a detailed report of the situation.

They said that relations between Germany and the Holy See were to all purposes, suspended because the German diplomats have boycotted all recent ceremonies.

Count Carl Ludwig Diego von Bergen, German Ambassador to the Vatican, has been absent in Berlin since May 26, also on a "vacation," but diplomats said there was scant likelihood that he ever would return to his post.

Will Retire in Fall.

He reaches the retirement age this fall, and unless there is a settlement of the Nazi-Vatican controversy, he may not be replaced.

German sources said that the Hitler government considered the Vatican reply to its protest against the Mundelein speech as "extremely unsatisfactory."

The Pope was believed to have discussed the German situation today with Cardinal Pacelli at Castel Gandolfo, papal summer residence.

It was emphasized here that if a formal break comes in the relations it will not come from the Vatican.

Five Sentenced by Nazis.

Berlin, June 2 (U.P.).—Five Catholic priests and monks today were sentenced to prison terms on immorality charges as Nazi authorities continued their "clean up" of the Church in the face of an impending break between the Reich and the Holy See.

The five churchmen, sentenced to hard labor for terms ranging from 20 months to 4 years, were charged with seducing boys and girls.

13 Women Fined On Vice Charges

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 2.—Fines ranging from $25 to $75 and six months suspended sentences in the House of Correction were imposed upon 13 women defendants seized in vice raids here by Magistrate John Dunn today.

Three of the women were acquitted and a man charged with pandering was found not guilty. None of the Federal officers participating in the raid appeared at the trials and there was no evidence to show grounds for interstate traffic justifying white slave charges.

The $75 fines and six months suspended sentences were imposed upon those of more recent residence here. The prison sentence was suspended on condition they either leave town or find lawful means of making a livelihood. The $75 fines were for those found guilty or who pleaded guilty to maintaining houses of prostitution, and $25 fines were for inmates.

Naval Academy Graduates Hold Closing Parade

Annapolis, June 2 (AP).—The members of the graduating class at the Naval Academy attended their last dress parade today, surrendering their authority to the Class of 1938.

Thirty-one midshipmen were honored during the parade when they received prizes and awards they won in studies and athletics during the academic year. These were presented by Capt. Chester W. Nimitz, U. S. N., assistant chief, Bureau of Navigation, and representatives of the patriotic, civic groups and academy classes sponsoring the awards.

The traditional surrender of first class authority to the junior class came when battalion commanders reported their battalions. The first battalion reported "one" man absent; the second "nine" men; the third, "three" men, and the fourth "eight men. The reports, in order, gave 1-9-3-8 when the junior class will graduate.

319 Graduate Today.

It signified that all "first class" rates and privileges were given to the new senior class. Tomorrow at 11 a. m., 319 members of the graduating class will receive their diplomas and the degree of bachelor of science. Twenty-Six will be commissioned second lieutenants in the Marine Corps, others will resign and the remainder will be commissioned ensigns in the line of the Navy.

Because of the heat the regiment of midshipmen marched in the dress parade today wearing infantry drill uniform, consisting of blue shirts, blue trousers, with white belts and white leggings. In the past the midshipmen have worn the heavy full dress uniform.

5,500 Watch Awards.

About 5,500 June Week visitors watched the prize-winning midshipmen leave the ranks of the regiment and form in line facing Capt. Nimitz and a table bearing the cups, swords, binoculars, letters, medals and other awards.

As their name was called each midshipman stepped forward, saluted and received his award. They returned it to the table and then took their position in line.

Jack Arthur Obermeyer, New York City, honor man of the graduating class, received four pains of binoculars and three watches for leading his class and standing highest in mathematics, electrical engineering, history, economics and military law. He advanced seven times to receive his awards as the crowd applauded.

Ingram Gets Sword.

Another roar of applause and cheering came from the spectators when Capt. Nimitz handed the coveted Navy Athletic Association sword for personal excellence in athletics to William T. Ingram 2d, Culver, Ind. Ingram, football, basketball and baseball player, is a member of the junior class and the third member of his family to win the sword. The other two were his father, Capt. Jones Ingram, U. S. N., and his uncle, William A. (Navy Bill) Ingram, former Academy football coach.

Reich Speeding 4 Submarines to Spanish Waters

Nazi Leaders Confer With Hitler Secretly Over Blockade Crisis.

to the speech last night by Sir Nevile Henderson, promising "sincere" friendship by Britain if the Reich would assure the peace of Europe.

The new British ambassador to Berlin spoke at a reception of the German-English Society in an apparent direct bid for Anglo-German accord, but Marshal Werner von Blomberg was in Rome today to discuss Italo-German co-operation for European peace and the next step after their joint withdrawal from the London neutrality committee.

And, with the Spanish crisis still unended, the third Reich turned to her Balkan neighbors on the southeast to exchange assurances of friendship.

Will Visit Capitals.

Foreign Minister Baron Konstantin von Neurath will go next week to the capitals of Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Hungary on a journey which the Berliner Tageblatt said was designed "not only to quiet down the southeast, but also to pacify it considerably."

Bonds of World War co-operation link Bulgaria and Hungary with Germany.

Though of more recent date, trade relations with Yugoslavia are an important factor in the Reich's economic organization. The Tageblatt pointed out also that "Germany has acquired significance in Premier Milan Stoyadinovitch's grandly conceived program of economic reconstruction."

Italy Demands Guarantee.

Rome, June 2 (AP).—Italy, her navy virtually blockading the eastern Spanish coast to keep out "Communist contraband," confirmed tonight her readiness to rejoin the European nonintervention committee if she gets a guarantee her fleet will not be molested.

That declaration by a high Fascist official followed a long conversation between Premier Benito Mussolini and Marshal Werner von Blomberg, German war minister, in search of a common military point of view toward Spain.

In waters near Spain lay the German and Spanish warships which previously had been participating in the international control plan, and Germany sent more craft to strengthen her fleet.

The Italian explanation was that Russia must be kept from providing the Spanish government with war materials and supplies to help the Madrid-Valencia regime in its fight against the insurgents, recognized by both Germany and Italy as the official Spanish government.

Premier Mussolini ordered his warship commanders to use force if necessary to attain this end.

Italy and Germany quit the neutrality committee, with its program of peacefully preventing arms and foreign volunteers from going to Spain, on Monday.

Submarine Sinks Boat.

Perpignan, Franco-Spanish Frontier, June 2 (U.P.).—An unidentified submarine was reported tonight to have sunk the Spanish sailing ship Granada off the Catalan coast.

The ship, a 214-ton vessel loaded with cement, sank rapidly and eight of her crew, escaping in a rowboat, were shelled by the submarine.

A sailor, Salvador Barberoni, was killed and two others, Antonio Colomer and Antonio Lafuentes, were wounded.

Germany Wins Point.

Paris, June 2 (AP).—France and Great Britain bowed tonight before one of Germany's conditions for her to return to the European "hands off Spain" committee, an official source said, with an agreement in principle to unify the patrol fleets around Spain.

A German demand for collective punishment in event of any further attacks like the Spanish warplane bombing of the German pocket battleship Deutschland, however, met Franco-British opposition as possibly leading to extension of the Spanish civil strife.

Active negotiations continued in Paris and London in the search for a complete formula to repair the nonintervention machinery following Monday's withdrawal of co-operation by Germany and Italy.

House Group Approves Tax Inquiry Plan

Formal Adoption Today Forecast; Maverick Halts Stampede.

subpena witnesses and examine witnesses."

Hearings were ordered immediately before O'Connor's Rules Committee. A committee report was filed with the House last night, but not before the House group had made three modifying changes in the resolution.

Section 5, permitting the joint investigating committee to authorize any Treasury official to investigate, subpena and hold hearings "on behalf of the committtee," was stricken from the measure.

Discretionary authority for the joint group to submit information uncovered to the House Ways and Means and the Senate Finance committees was made mandatory.

The Rules unit also deleted a publicity provision empowering the joint investigating committee to make public tax returns or any of its findings. O'Connor pointed out that hearings in which income tax data is mentioned would still be open to the public.

Debating Time.

With these changes ordered, O'Connor was ready to call the measure up in the House today under a rule providing an hour's debate.

Meantime, Attorney General Cummings said the drive against tax dodging would take four directions—criminal prosecution of tax evasions; action by courts and juries; Congressional removal of loopholes in the tax law, and a public opinion aroused against tax avoidance.

After failing in his effort to get immediate House action on the investigation, Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, repeated his arguments before the House Rules Committee. Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, minority member of Doughton's committee, testified in support of O'Connor's proposed changes.

No Rubber Stamping.

Urging adoption of the original resolution, which he said had the approval of the President and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Doughton was in several sharp exchanges with O'Connor and Republican members of the committee. He threatened at one time to withdraw, if the committee wouldn't listen to his testimony.

Doughton denied any "rubber stamping." He said the House and Senate drafting service "went down and helped draft the bill."

"This resolution was drawn under the President's direction, and was submitted to him before he left here," he said. "I take the responsibility for introducing the bill, and expediting consideration."

O'Connor's Complaint.

O'Connor complained the resolution "would permit a $1,200 Treasury official to conduct Congressional hearings."

Representative Carl Mapes (Republican), of Michigan, pointed out that the President's tax-dodging message proposed an investigation by the Treasury and said nothing about a Congressional inquiry. Mapes said matters pertaining to taxes should originate in the House, and in approving the Senate resolution the House was surrendering its prerogatives.

Doughton replied that the legislation recommended by the joint resolution would originate in the House; that it was merely to expedite action that the Senate resolution was called up yesterday.

Martin's Point.

The blunt, rugged Ways and Means chairman flared again when Representative Joe Martin, Massachusetts Republican, asked why the tax-dodging instances mentioned by the President hadn't already been prosecuted.

"You can't prosecute before sunup," Doughton retorted.

O'Connor urged elimination of Section 5, he said, "because I want to preserve the prerogatives of the House."

"Under this provision," O'Connor went on, "an official of the Treasury can conduct these hearings without any member of the House committee being present. They can proceed in the name of a Congressional committee. I never heard of anything like that being done before."

The surprise of the day came earlier in the House when Maverick, usually in the Democratic forefront fighting the Administration's battles, objected to immediate action on the Senate resolution creating an investigating committee of six Senators and six Representatives.

Vagueness Criticized.

"I am entirely in accord with everything that is being done," said Maverick. "But the technique of writing the bill ought to take a little time. Some of these bills come in here that do not look like they were written in the United States, much less in Washington. * * * On account of the vagueness of the way this jumps up like the devil, I am going to object to it, because I do not believe we should be asked to vote on things in such a sudden way."

O'Connor indicated he would have objected if Maverick hadn't, and hit at the speed with which the resolution was approved by the Senate.

"There is supposed to be some hurry about this," O'Connor told the House, "but the gentlemen will recall that earlier in this Administration we hurried through an appointment of a joint committee to reorganize the Government, and that committee is entirely disjointed, although it held some hearings."

In memory of the gallant Col. John Mosby, C. S. A., who, with a detachment of 29 horsemen, captured Gen. Edwin H. Stoughton, the Union general, in Fairfax County in March, 1863, a tablet yesterday was dedicated in historic Truro Churchyard, Fairfax County, near where the raid occurred. In the picture are the great grandchildren of the officer, Charles Parrish Coleman and Stuart Mosby Blackwell, who played a leading part in the ceremonies.

Explosion of Gas During Operation Fatal to Patient

Baltimore, June 2 (AP).—Dr. Winford Smith, director of the Johns Hopkins University Hospital, said today that an explosion of gas in a patient's lungs had killed the patient during an operation.

Benjamin Taylor, 34, of Belnew, Md., was undergoing an operation for removal of a carbuncle on his neck yesterday. The operation had been completed and an electric cautery was being used when the explosion occurred. Two nurses standing by the patient were burned slightly, but the operating surgeon escaped injury.

Beer, Wine Sale by State Is Urged by Methodists

Ferrum, Va., June 2 (AP).—A recommendation that the State Liquor Control Board allow wine and beer to be dispensed only through its State stores in Virginia was approved today by the Danville district conference of the Methodist Church South, in annual session here.

While it adopted a report of the temperance and social service committee calling for absolute prohibition as the only way to deal with this "monster of appetite and greed," the conference agreed with the committee that restricting the sale of the lighter beverages to the dispensaries would make for less drinking.

Lightning Kills Martinsville Boy

Martinsville, Va., June 2 (AP).—Maurey J. Wood, 18-year-old Fieldale High School student, was killed instantly when struck by lightning during a severe electric storm last night.

Wood, with Lester and Roy Rakes, had been swimming in the Smith River and he was on the bank when struck.

The youth had taken examinations for the Naval Academy which he hoped to enter. Dr. Warren A. Rucker pronounced him dead when he arrived and called Dr. Q. W. Simmons, coroner, who said death was due to lightning.

Wood's body toppled into the river and was recovered by his companions.

Warmth, Rains Aid Backward Crops in Week

Grains Show Rapid Progress, Maryland Bureau Reports.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 2—Warm weather and heavy rains last week did much to correct Maryland's backward growing season, the United States Weather Bureau said today.

The bureau's weekly crop report, covering the seven days ending June 1, described last week as "warm, with abundant rain during the first part, and with abundant sunshine during the second part." Sunshine was 10 per cent above normal.

"Grains, other growing crops, grasses, pastures and fruits made rapid progress, and are mostly good to excellent," the report said. "Wet fields during the first part of the week interfered with farming operations."

Wheat is heading, or is in head, except in the western Maryland mountains. Rye is filling out in the southern countries and blooming in the northern ones. Early potatoes also are blooming, except in the northern counties.

Peas are maturing and are being harvested in the southern counties; in the central counties the pods are developing; peas are in bloom and podding in the northern counties. There is a bad infestation of aphids in the Easton district.

Bob Burns Says:

City people imagine it would be dull livin' in a small town because there are so few people there. They don't realize that in a town of 5,000 everybody knows each other while a city man is lucky if he actually knows 250 people.

A city man stopped off in Van Buren one time and he got into conversation with my Cousin Pernell. The city man says "I sure would hate to live in a town like this." Pernell says "So would I." The city man says "Well, don't you live here?" and Pernell says "No, I live eight miles back in the hills."

Application forms must be postmarked and returned to the Baltimore address before midnight, June 12 . . .

More Notes.

Should J. A. Fitzwater, assistant chief of the division of timber management, Forest Service, make many more such speeches as he did recently, he may find people closing up their desks and making for the open spaces, holiday or no holiday . . . Said Fitzwater, too invitingly: "Fishing to the real out-of-door man, means much more than the mere catching of fish. It means an opportunity to come in closer contact with Mother Nature and learn her secrets; to see a mother grouse feign a broken wing and crawl off in anguish to lure the invader from her chicks; to listen to the thrilling notes of the hermit thrush, or to see a dragon fly nymph climb a reed from his watery home, split his shell, unfold his glossy wings and sail away to view new worlds . . . The National Forests, administered for integrated, multiple use—timber, forage, wildlife and recreation—welcome you. So get out that old trout rod, sort over your flies and start for the mountains where the ozone is pure and invigorating and where you can forget the many little formalities of civilization . . ." Now, Mr. Fitzwater, that's too much to read on a hot Washington day with work and duty the two compelling things which they are . . .

The Committee Against False Economy—the seven A. F. G. E. lodges which are acting independently against the economy measures in Congress—have announced that Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, will address the mass meeting to be held the night of June 10 in the Willard Hotel, when the committee hopes to fire a loud gun against the Byrnes and Cannon resolutions . . . They point out that McCarran's activities on behalf of employes—they were recalling his bill that provides for minimum wage and automatic promotions—would make of him a logical speaker at the protest meeting . . . William Green, of the A. F. of L., with which the A. F. G. E. is affiliated, has been invited . . . Maybe he will have something to say . . .

Meeting.

Meanwhile, the Committee Against False Economy has called another meeting for Saturday afternoon in the Chantilly room of the Hamilton Hotel . . . And at the meeting of the committee Tuesday night there was some informal talk—not from the floor—about the probabilities of the seven "rebel" lodges being ousted from the A. F. G. E. . . . The way is open, in the light of President Stengle's cease and desist order . . . Some ventured that maybe the seven lodges can build up such backing and support generally throughout the organization that the national headquarters would hesitate to try an ouster . . . Maybe the wish was father of the thought in this . . . But it's an interesting thought . . .

"Indians at work," published by the Indian Office, comments on the recent transfer of Robert Marshall to the position of director of recreation in the Forest Service: "One of the central preoccupations of Mr. Marshall, as a forester and as a humanist, is the wilderness. He is the boldest of the advocates of the preservation of wilderness values. This interest unites Mr. Marshall with the most ancient of the Indian heritages, and keeps him as the battling protagonist of a difficult cause whose success or failure will influence the spiritual and imaginative future of America—of the world. Many factors combine, in these days, to annihilate what Mr. Marshall has called the 'vanishing wilderness.' A resourceful minority has arisen to defend it. Mr. Marshall is leader of this minority."

Alumni Event Set for Tonight At Georgetown

Reunions, Other Activities Planned for Returning Graduates.

Opening the 138th annual commencement week of Georgetown University, several hundred local and out-of-town alumni will attend class day exercises at the school of Law this evening at 7:30 o'clock.

From then until Sunday afternoon, when about 450 seniors in all departments are awarded diplomas, there will be activities and reunions for alumni classes. The Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of the university, has to forego the commencement program because of illness. At Georgetown Hospital, where he is recuperating from an operation, he will receive visits from alumni.

The Most Rev. Thomas A. Emmett, S. J., Bishop of Jamaica, who is here for the Georgetown Preparatory School commencement, was among Dr. O'Leary's callers. Bishop Emmett served many years on the Georgetown College faculty.

The Class of 1917 of the law school, represented by about 50 members, is holding its twentieth reunion and will attend the exercises tonight. Francis W. Hill, jr., and T. Gillespie Walsh, Assistant Corporation Counsel, are in charge of the class reunion. Maintaining headquarters at the Mayflower Hotel, the class will give a dinner Saturday night for Dean George E. Hamilton, the Rev. Francis E. Lucey, S. J., regent of the school, and Dr. Hugh J. Fegan, assistant dean.

At tonight's exercises, Dr. James Brown Scott, professor of international law at Georgetown, will present to the school his private collection of etchings and prints of famous lawyers. Dr. and Mrs. Scott spent 25 years compiling the collection of about 100 pieces in England, Scotland and Ireland. Today is also Dr. Scott's birthday anniversary.

Features of class day exercises will be the bachelor's oration by Jerome J. Downey, of Washington, and the valedictory address by William Vincent O'Connor, of North Dakota.

Revision Is Urged In Building Code

In an attempt to avert accidents similar to the one which, in March, 1936, took the life of 13-year-old Harvey Crowell, a special committee yesterday proposed to the Commissioners revision of the elevator code.

Among other things, the proposed new code would decrease the legal space between the elevator cage and the landing threshold to four inches when the elevator is run by a licensed operator, to one-half inch when the elevator is equipped with swinging doors and to two and one-quarter inches when equipped with sliding doors.

The report reveals also that the District Building Inspector has found that elevators in many Federal buildings do not comply with District regulations. Neither, it is stated, are building plans for such elevators submitted to him for approval.

A public hearing on code changes will be held June 22 by the Commissioners in the board room of the District Building.

Group to Pass on Architects For U. S. Buildings Proposed

Establishment of a commission to assist in selection of architects for Federal buildings was recommended yesterday to the annual convention in Boston of the American Institute of Architects by Francis P. Sullivan, of Washington, chairman of the public works committee.

Sullivan's suggestion, contained in his annual report, resulted from a series of conferences between representatives of the A. I. A. and the Treasury Department procurement division. The meetings were held at the request of Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., to discuss methods of insuring that the public buildings erected by the Federal Government should embody the highest standards of planning, construction and design.

Five Members Proposed.

The proposed commission would consist of five members, including three architects, and would prepare from time to time lists of architects particularly qualified to design public buildings. From these lists the selection of designers would be made by the Secretary of the Treasury.

The Associated Press reported from Boston that a resolution calling for the institute to appoint a commission to pass on architects' qualifications was adopted with provision that competitions be held among architects qualified by the commission.

Discussion on a proposed remodeling of the Capitol building was postponed by the institute.

Education Discussed.

At the meeting last night, Dean Everett V. Meeks, of the Yale University Gallery of Fine Arts, asked the architects to improve architectural education in this country by eliminating the credit system and the academic year. Saying that both these measures were "fetishes," Dean Meeks proposed substitution of promotion whenever accomplishments call for it, the Associated Press said.

Charles D. Maginnis, of Boston, was elected president of the institute. He succeeds Stephen F. Voorhees, of New York.

Gasch Is Appointed To D.C. Legal Staff

Oliver M. Gasch, member of the Capital Transit Co.'s legal staff was yesterday appointed an assistant corporation counsel by the District Commissioners.

At the same time, the salary of F. Glenn Simmon, an assistant corporation counsel, connected with the Police Court staff, was raised from $2,600 to $3,200 a year.

Gasch will be assigned to police court, and Simmon, in turn, will be transferred to the District Building.

The appointment and promotion were recommended by Elwood Seal, corporation counsel, to fill the vacancy left by the resignation last week of Raymond Sparks.

A native of Washington, Gasch is a graduate of Princeton University and Georgetown University Law School.

Senate Promises Steel Firm Quiz

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Civil Liberties Committee promised yesterday it would give careful study to charges that private detectives have been called into Coatesville, Pa., to intimidate employes of the Lukens Steel Co.

Robert Wohlforth, committee secretary, said he had not yet received a formal complaint from the Committee for Industrial Organization which made the charges, although he understood one was on the way.

Joseph Schladt Dies at Hospital

Joseph Schladt, 87, for 57 years proprietor of the West Washington Hotel, died yesterday at Providence Hospital.

Mr. Schladt, who for many years served Congressmen in his summer garden, came to this country from Germany at the age of 15.

He is survived by his wife, Sarah Schladt, and two daughters, Mrs. Katherine Probey and Mrs. Rose Dingman, both of Washington. Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. tomorrow at Holy Trinity Church. Burial will be in Holy Rood Cemetery.

Rotary Hears Address On Boys Club Campaign

The demand for police boys' clubs is growing, and eventually there will be one in every precinct in the District, Harry P. Somerville, manager of the Willard Hotel and a member of the Police Boys Club committee in its drive to raise $75,000, told the Rotary Club at a luncheon-meeting at the hotel yesterday.

Somerville lauded Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and the work of the present club. He said juvenile delinquency had been reduced through the club. Already $15,000 of the $75,000 goal has been raised, he pointed out.

May 31 Set as Deadline For Fidelity Interest

May 31 has been fixed as the "cut-off" date for interest on accounts of the closed Fidelity Building & Loan Association, it was learned last night.

The action was decided on by the Treasury Department as a matter of bookkeeping, it was explained, so that detailed accounts can be set up for both borrowing and investing shareholders.

Board Calls 'Patriotism' School Goal

Undue Stress on Beliefs Contrary to Democracy Is Forbidden.

Assuring Congress and the public that it does not intend to "indoctrinate" Washington's public school pupils with the philosophy of communism, now that the disciplinary "red rider" is no longer in force, the Board of Education yesterday adopted a strong declaration of educational policy.

The school trustees will insist, the statement declared, there be a "comparative study of all forms of government." But there will be "no place for teaching which has the purpose * * * of indoctrinating pupils with any philosophy of government * * * antagonistic to that of the United States."

"We feel it is only fair to tell the public what we're trying to do and how," said Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board, who, with Robert A. Maurer, vice president, drafted the statement.

Board Edits Statement.

After Maurer submitted the declaration to the board his colleagues spent more than a half hour editing the statements "so that there can be no misunderstanding about the board's meaning."

Dr. Frak W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, said he was anxious to have a comprehensive statement from the board, not only for the public, but for his teachers as well.

"My office is getting requests every day from teachers, who want to know just how they are to teach the facts about communism," Ballou said.

The board approved this statement:

"The essential outstanding purpose of an American public school system is the education of our youth for intelligent and loyal citizenship.

"This end can in large measure be achieved through the comparative study of all forms of government, the history of other nations, and especially—and most important—by thorough study and understanding of our own history and of our ideals of democratic government under a constitution. The courses of study in the District of Columbia public schools, with their ample provisions for such study and understanding, promote faith in, loyalty to, and appreciation of American institutions and the American principle of government.

"Under such a program of instruction the satisfactory character of teaching depends to a great extent upon the result it achieves in patriotic citizenship. Without such result teaching is unsatisfactory.

"Under such a program of instruction there can be no place for teaching which has the purpose or effect, directly or indirectly, of indoctrinating pupils with any philosophy of government, by whatever name called antagonistic to that of the United States. This board has not heretofore countenanced, and will not hereafter countenance such subversive indoctrination in the public schools of the District of Columbia.

Summer school will begin July 1 in 16 schools for white pupils and in 12 for colored pupils, Dr. Ballou announced. The white schools to be opened for summer classes include Central High School, Macfarland and Stuart Junior Highs, and these elementary schools: Blair, Brown, Buchanan, Burroughs, Curtis, Emery, Fairbrother, Force, Park View, Pierce, Wallach, West and Webster.

Colored Classes.

The colored summer classes will be at Dunbar High School, Garnet-Patterson Junior High, and at Bell, Burrville, Cook, Garrison, Giddings, Love Joy, Mott, Phillips and Sumner elementary schools.

Selection of three educators in the District school system to attend the World Conference of Education Associations this summer at Tokyo, Japan was approvad. The representatives include: Henry W. Draper, supervising principal of Division 1; Mrs. Annie G. Trenis, Western High School teacher; and Miss Bernadette L. Dore, principal of Barnard School.

Board members voted to support issuance of a postage stamp commemorating Horace Mann, American educator, who established the first State public school board in Massachusetts 100 years ago.

Memorial Sunday For Men in Gray

The men in gray who fought and died for the Confederacy will be honored at memorial exercises in Arlington National Cemetery Sunday.

Exercises will be held by Camp 171 of the United Confederate Veterans and by the Sons and Daughters of the Confederacy. Also participating in the ceremonies, scheduled for 1:45 p. m., will be the Confederate Southern Memorial Association, the Children of the Confederacy, the District Department of the United Spanish War Veterans, the American Legion, National Guard units and Boy Scouts.

Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, will deliver the principal address after the veterans, led by the United States Marine Band, have marched into the Arlington Amphitheater.

Faculty and Alumni Will Honor Dr. Bell

Reunited with his naturalized American brothers, after more than half a century with the ocean between him and them, Adolph Warneson, center, was happy yesterday. Adolph, 65, was left behind to run his father's bookbinding business when Charles Warneson, 73, left, and later Henry S. Warneson, 75, set sail to find success in America. Charles lives in Kansas City and Henry, a bookbinder, lives at 607 Taylor street northwest. Adolph, now an agent of the Hamburg-American Line, soon will return to his native land.

Takoma Group Opposes Two Zone Changes

Citizens Association Advises Commission Against Proposals.

Two changes in the zoning regulations, both opposed by the Citizens Association of Takoma, D. C., were proposed to the Zoning Commission yesterday afternoon.

The first change, proposed by Margaret J. Calvin, would permit her to build an apartment house at 7148 Chestnut street northwest. The area is now "A restricted," and therefore, said W. H. Parsons, of the Takoma Association, "in accordance with our standing policy, we oppose the change to 'A residential.'"

The second change, proposed by G. W. Bonnette, president of the Old Colony Laundry, Blair road, between Aspen and Butternut streets northwest, would permit him to build an adjoining garage. Although the Takoma Association is opposed to the change, "we might be agreeable," Parsons said, "if the laundry met certain demands—drained off surface water and built a brick wall to replace the present wooden fence."

In the morning an application for a change to commercial of the property at 1609 T street northwest, a grocery, was heard. The application was supported by W. Gwynn Gardiner, for the owners, and opposed by several property owners.

A request for permission to build to a height of 110 feet on I street, between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets northwest, was made by Michael J. Keane, representing the Doctors' Hospital. There was no opposition.

Tax Group Gets Income Levy Today

Vote on Issue Will Be Tuesday, Kennedy Reports.

By James D. Secrest.

The Kennedy sub-committee on District taxation yesterday approved all the legislation submitted by the District Commissioners on Tuesday except the income levy.

The latter is expected to be passed upon at an early morning session today prior to a meeting of the full District Committee. A complete report will not be submitted by the sub-committee, however, until tomorrow.

Chairman Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland said that drafts of the legislation will be given the full committee members for study over the week-end. A special meeting will be held Tuesday, he said, to vote upon them.

He said that he had conferred informally with Chairman O'Connor of the House Rules Committee regarding a special rule, and he said the measures may be called up in the House the latter part of next week.

Advance Bill.

Among the bills approved yesterday at an all-day session was a legislative draft urged by the District Commissioners to offset an anticipated fiscal emergency early in the fiscal year which begins July 1.

This bill will enable the District government to obtain advances from the Federal Treasury until collections from the new tax measures equal or overbalance expenditures. The District had such authority until a decade ago.

Other measures approved included the business privilege tax, the inheritance and estate tax, the insuranve levy increase, the motor vehicle weight tax, authorization for the establishment of parking meters and a bill creating a special highway fund and providing for the bonding of gasoline importers.

Kennedy explained that the subcommittee is already committed to the income tax, but that minor details remain to be worked out. Among these is the question of whether the law is to be retroactive to 1936 income on a half-rate basis, the tax to be payable in October of this year.

Threatened opposition to the income levy on the full District Committee appeared to be fading as an informal poll revealed that a majority is favorable to it.

An appeal for exemption of all service officers who are stationed from time to time in the District was made to the sub-committee by Capt. T. S. Wilkinson, of the Navy Department, but it received little encouragement.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, said he saw no reason why the officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, for whom Capt. Wilkinson spoke, should not bear their share of the expense of maintaining the city in which they reside.

Officers Affected.

Capt. Wilkinson pointed out that the States now are unable to tax the pay of these service men and that consequently those who are stationed in Washington would pay a tax not imposed on their fellow officers.

He said about 1,500 officers and 500 men in the District probably would be subject to an income tax.

Members of the sub-committee pointed out that one group of Federal Government employes cannot be exempted without unfairness to the others and that exemption of all would virtually destroy the tax.

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, who worked with the subcommittee throughout the day, said all bills will be ready for submission to the full District Committee on Friday morning.

Meeting Hears American U.'s Call for Funds

Dr. Gray Outlines Need to 200 Banqueters at Willard.

Because American University in the midst of a changing economic, political and social life, is preparing youth for leadership he feels justified, Chancellor Joseph M. M. Gray said last night, in calling on the people of the country for funds.

In outlining the needs of the university, Dr. Gray told more than 200 friends, faculty and alumni gathered in the Willard at the banquet which opened a campaign for $250,000, that "we must have dormitory space, library space, classroom space, an increased faculty and higher salaries."

"Registration," he said, "has surged beyond our facilities."

The Rev. Edwin L. Hughes, Methodist Bishop of Washington, speaking after Dr. Gray, declared "we must secure the educational foundations of the country." He cited the examples of Leland Stanford, Commodore Vanderbilt and Robert Morris.

Edwin F. Colladay, president of the Board of Trade and chairman of the finance committee of the board of trustees of American University, emphasized the needs outlined by Dr. Gray.

Chairmen of the campaign, which will continue for 12 days, are: General Chairman, Dr. A. C. Christie; chairman of the university's board of trustees; vice chairmen, Colloday and L. P. McLachlen; publicity chairman, Mark Lansburgh; alumni chairman, Wilmer F. Stickle; special gifts chairman, John Poole; special gifts vice chairman, S. H. Kauffmann; division "A" chairman, Edgar Morris; division "B" chairman, Walter M. Bastian, and division "C" chairman, Dr. G. E. Williams.

Washington Theater Managers Will Find Audiences Watching Airplanes, Ships Down in Potomac Park

First Lure of the Hot Weather Has Enticed Hundreds Out From Under Theater Roofs Into the Open; We Were Too Soon About That New Magazine; Earle Reverses the Order of Things; Notes.

BELL.

IF THE managers of the downtown and residential theaters in the National Capital care to know where an appreciable portion of their afternoon and evening audiences have gone to in this early summer period of seasonal slump for all indoor attractions, they should take a look at Potomac Park, from the Lincoln Memorial to Hains Point, these tepid June evenings.

From the base of the Washington Monument, perched on one of the highest points of ground in the downtown area, they might observe a steady stream of motor cars, loaded to the gunwales with air-minded comfort-seekers, shunning past the Memorial; around the foot of the Monument they would find whole families disporting themselves on the grass and giving the dogs a run; along the walks around Hains Point, hundreds of motorists lolling about, watching the play of lights in the city, the passing of river craft of all descriptions and the faintly musicalized return of the Potomac excursion boats to their docks down on Water street.

These are the outdoor lures of the first hot days and nights of summer. They do not last for any great length of time, because people soon tire of looking at the same things and visiting the same spots, night after night, and eventually return to the belief that, after all, with their perfected refrigeration systems, comfortable chairs and changing bills, the motion picture theaters offer the greatest meed of enjoyable diversion at the cost of the least expenditure of time, energy and money.

But this sudden attraction of the out-of-doors always asserts itself at about this time of year and there is nothing that advertising campaigns and publicity stunts can do about it, no matter how cleverly contrived.

Memorial Day, with a fair break in the weather, usually starts this exodus from under roof and it is apt to continue through the second of the summer holidays, Independence Day. After that, the tug of the wide open spaces—and some of them are not so very wide open, at that—begins to lessen and a gradual return to the theater sets in.

As was remarked in another column a few days ago, the theaters really are the coolest and most comfortable spots to be found, but it takes a little experimentation, a few mosquito bites, a bee sting or two and maybe a little poison ivy to impress that fact upon the lay mind.

The theater managements, of course, contend that they have enough competition under normal conditions, without having to fight the weather man. I suspect that they are wholly right.

It seems that I was a little ahead of myself when I suggested that you stop by a newsstand and purchase a copy of the new Cinema Arts Magazine. It must have been a printer's advance copy of the book that I received, because it has since come to my attention that the mag will not be on the stands until tomorrow, June 4. Well, I still think it is worth waiting for and worth buying, when, as and if it does appear on the stands.

* * * *

Fixed rules of program presentation will be tossed to the winds at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater tomorrow, when Swingmaster Benny Goodman—a veteran at breaking musical rules and box-office records—brings his orchestra to town for a week's engagement.

The feature film with Goodman will be "Kid Galahad," one of the most interesting of the prize-ring features to reach the screen. The picture is fairly long and so is Benny's band act. That is what put the schedule-makers at the Earle into a bit of a dither—how to give the audience a sufficient measure of both. So what? So the customary procedure was exactly reversed.

In order to please everybody, a special Friday schedule has been worked out, according to which the Earle will open its doors at 10:30 a. m. At 11:05 the Goodman band will take the stage, going on ahead of the feature—a most unorthodox way of doing things.

However, the scheme seems to have worked out pretty well, if the hours can be made to stick. By this arrangement there will be five complete screenings and five complete stage shows during the day. That ought to meet with popular approval.

* * * *

Speaking of "Kid Galahad," the Hollywood Variety makes known that Benny Leonard, former lightweight champion of the world, and "Dumb" Dan Morgan, New York boxing managers, reputedly have made a bona fide offer to Wayne Morris to give him a guarantee of $25,000 a year for two years if Warners' featured player will permit them to groom him for the heavyweight championship. The offer is for joint managership and the direct outgrowth of the fisticuffing shown by Morris while in training for and performing in "Kid Galahad." The first suspicion here might be of the deft hand of press-agentry, but after seeing Mr. Morris move about in the ring—whether it is all camera angles or not—there comes another suspicion that the Messers. Leonard and Morgan might not be so dumb.

Marian Chace and her dance group in August will go to Mount Kisco and Westport, where, under the direction of Day Tuttle, of the Washington Civic Theater, they will dance the Bacchanale in the production of "Lysistrata," the play which, after 2,300 years, has been found to be a risque drama.

The Bacchanale, which was created by Miss Chace for the recent Wardman Park production of "Lysistrata," will be danced by the group in the Central High School auditorium on June 9, under the auspices of the Community Center Department.

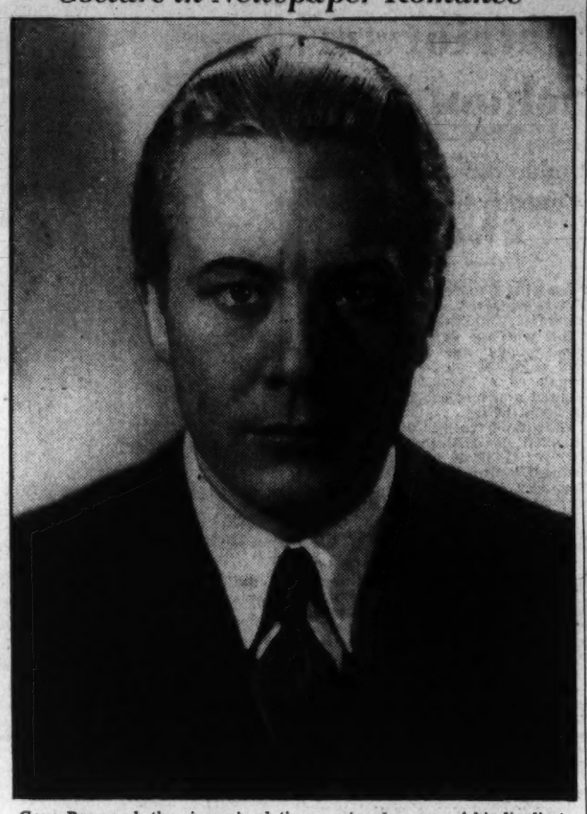
Costars in Newspaper Romance



Gene Raymond, the cinema's platinum actor, has one of his liveliest and best-acted roles in "There Goes My Girl," the new RKO-Radio production that opened on the screen at the RKO-Keith Theater yesterday. In the opposite role of the rival newspaper woman and would-be bride appears Ann Sothern, first known to Capital audiences in "America's Sweetheart," at the National, under her real name of Henrietta Lake. They have appeared together frequently.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, June 2.—Settin' Around (Warner Brothers): One thing I like about this studio—its executives are never afraid to take a chance. Instead of being content to follow Hollywood's ancient custom of imitating the other fellow's successful pictures, they cast about for revolutionary ideas, start most of the new cycles and are the ones imitated. Sometimes, it must be admitted, the other studio's follow-ups are better than the Warner originals, but I doff my bonnet to any man who dares be a leader.

DICK POWELL.

Warners were the first to produce a talking picture! they started the gangster cycle; they led the parade on filmusical gigantics; they defied Hollywood's prophets of disaster to produce biographies on a lavish scale; they are the only major producers who have maintained an experimental television station; they were the first to build big "outdoor" locations on sound stages; they have consistently pioneered the use of trick photography (remember "Captain Blood?" It was made without shooting a single scene at sea).

Every other studio strives to develop women stars and kowtows to the women in the audience by making love the predominant note in every picture; the Warner brothers concentrate on male stars and every now and then dare to produce a picture that flouts Cupid.

Every time I enter this studio it is with the feeling that I am in the laboratory of the industry.

If I ever doubted the success of the Dick Powell-Joan Blondell merger, I changed my mind during one hour today on the "Angle Shooter" set, where Joan is working, Dick, playing on a nearby stage in "Varsity Show," visited her once between scenes and telephoned twice. I kidded her about his attentiveness but she brazenly informed me that I didn't know the worst. She said that Dick, when working on location some 70 miles from Hollywood, refused to stay overnight with the rest of the company and drove to and from work every day. In order to be on the job at 9, he had to set the alarm for 4 a. m. That could be only love!

You are going to see two new candidates for stardom in "Variety Show"—Rosemary and Patricia Lane, the younger sisters of Lola Lane. They were a song and dance team with Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians and hadn't a movie ambition in their heads when they came to Hollywood with the orchestra for a brief appearance in this picture. But Jack Warner saw their first scenes and immediately put them under long term contracts. Instead of doing a bit, they are playing two feminine leads opposite Dick Powell.

Imbibing soup through one's own whiskers may have its points, but taking nourishment through a synthetic beard seems to be something else again. I found lunchers in the studio cafe in stitches, watching the bewhiskered cast of "The Life of Emile Zola" struggling with their food. Paul Muni, adorned with a brush that would do credit to the Smith Brothers, told me he had lost pounds because he had foregone his lunches rather than to mess up his beard, which requires an hour to put on.

On the "That Certain Woman" set, I caught Bette Davis bribing 4-year-old Jackie Day to act. When I accused her of demoralizing Young America, she explained that Jackie had gone temperamental last week and refused to play a scene until she promised him a drum. "Guess that gave him ideas," she laughed, "for now he holds us up before every take. Look . . ." and she led me to a corner of the set where the profits of Jackie's banditry were piled knee-deep. "It's wrecked the company morale," Bette said. "Someone brought him an electric train and the director can't pry the men in the cast away to play their parts."

100-Mile-an-Hour Locomotive Is Built

Development of a new type of steam locomotive, able to haul a 14-car train at sustained speeds of 100 miles and hour, was announced yesterday by M. W. Clement, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The new locomotive will be known as "The Pennsylvania Type." It will be a development of the conventional coal burning steam locomotive, costing little more to build, operate and maintain than the present locomotives. It will have four cylinders instead of two, each pair providing power for the two pairs of driving wheels. The tender will carry 25,000 gallons of water and 26 tons of coal.

The engine, which is streamlined, is designed primarily for passenger service. It may later be adapted for fast freight service.

Women Rule Town.

Friendly, W. Va., June 2 (AP).—The hand that rocks the cradle will rule this little Ohio River town. Women won every office in yesterday's municipal election by an average vote of 40 to 15.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Silly Defense.

Many player do not realize the negative implication of signal cards. Probably every one of my readers has had the experience of watching eagerly for an echo that will advertise partner's ability to ruff a third round of a suit. Few conventions are so standardized as this one, and yet I see many better-than-average players go astray in use of the echo. Consider today's hand.

West dealer.
East-West vulnerable;
40 part-score.

	♠ J 8 5 2 ♡ 9 6 3 ◇ A Q J 10 ♣ Q 9
♠ A ♡ K 8 ◇ K 7 4 3 ♣ A K 7 6 5 4	North West East South	♠ K 10 9 7 4 ♡ 10 2 ◇ 8 6 5 2 ♣ J 10
	♠ Q 8 3 ♡ A Q J 7 5 4 ◇ 9 ♣ 8 3 2

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	Dbl.	1 ♠	2 ♡
3 ♣	Pass	Pass	3 ♡
Pass	4 ♡	Pass	Pass
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

North's takeout double was, of course, virtually a bluff, and his four heart bid an atrocity.

West opened the Ace of spades, and shifted to the King of clubs. East, for reasons that I am afraid never will be known, followed with the ten-spot. This looked like the beginning of a high-low but, when the Ace brought the Jack from East, West had to stifle this hope. East, by failing to play the Jack first and the ten next, had given the explicit message that he either could not or did not wish to ruff a third round of clubs.

Obeying orders, West shifted to a low diamond. Dummy's Ace won, and declarer then led a trump and went right up with the Ace. The Queen of hearts followed, putting West on lead. When the ten fell from East (providing that he could have overruffed dummy if he had held a doubleton club), rather than give declarer what appeared to be a sure ruff and discard, West laid down the diamond King. Declarer of course, ruffed and claimed the rest of the tricks.

In response to West's tart question as to why there had been no club echo, East mumbled something to the effect that he had been afraid that declarer also had had only two clubs and that he wanted a spade continuation, not knowing West's Ace had been a singleton. West wound up the discussion neatly by the caustic comment that if East had echoed in clubs, he (West) might be able to figure out by logarithms, algebra, or some other means, the number of clubs with which declarer had started.

Obviously, the correct defense including a third round club ruff and the crashing of the spade King would have defeated the contract at least three tricks.

Dr. Bowerman, Miss J. L. Webster Wed at Her Home

Miss Joy Louise Webster, woman suffragist, and Dr. George F. Bowerman, for 33 years librarian of the District Public Library, were married at noon Tuesday at the bride's home in the Ontario Apartments. The Rev. Dr. John Van Schaik, jr., editor of the Christian Leader in Boston and former pastor of the Universalist Church here, officiated. The couple will live at the Ontario.

Miss Webster, a native of Lincoln, Nebr., was treasurer of the National Woman's Party during the active campaign which preceded the adoption of the woman's suffrage amendment. After graduating from the University of Nebraska, she came to Washington with her father, Judge Joseph R. Webster, who was Assistant Attorney General in the Interior Department from 1900 until his death in 1917.

Dr. Bowerman was born in Farmington, N. Y., and received his education at Genesee Wesleyan Seminary, the University of Rochester, and the New York State Library School.

Dr. Bowerman came here as District Librarian in 1904. His first wife, Mrs. Sarah Graham Bowerman, died in May, 1935, as the result of an auto accident.

Catholic Charities Work Is Discussed

Regardless of Federal and District relief appropriations, there always will be need for the private family agency, according to the Rev. Laurence J. Shehan, director of Catholic Charities. Father Shehan made this statement at the meeting of the Federal Community Chest Forum at the Harrington Hotel Tuesday. J. Austin Latimer, of the Postoffice Department, who presided, announced that the next meeting of the forum would be held in September.

Father Shehan said the Catholic Charities, a comparatively small family agency, took care of about 1,000 families last year. About half of these, he said, were emergency cases who were on the rolls but a few weeks. The agency, he estimated, had a regular enrollment of about 250 families.

Sen. King Ordered To Rest Ten Days

Still suffering from an attack of grippe that has confined him to his home for a week, Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, was ordered home again by his physician yesterday for another week or ten days.

The illness of the chairman of the sub-committee of the Judiciary Committee, in charge of drafting the adverse majority report on the President's court reorganization bill, set back plans of Administration chieftains to place the court bill on the calendar late this week or early next week.

The adverse report is nearly complete, it was said yesterday, and only a few polishing touches by King and Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, and Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, are necessary before the bill reaches the floor.

Veterans Are Advised To Renew Insurance

By the Associated Press.

The Veterans Administration indicated last night those veterans desiring to renew their expiring war risk insurance should do so without undue delay.

The decision of Congress Tuesday to override a veto of an insurance extension bill permits veterans holding five-year term policies to extend them five years if they pay all premiums on their present policies and pay one month's premium in advance on the new ones.

Officials advised veterans that if they let their present policies expire, they still will have five additional months to renew them. But, when the insurance is renewed, the holders will have to pay premiums for the period in which the policies were out to effect.

Army Awards Contract For 85 Combat Planes

A contract for 85 basic combat airplanes, and the equivalent of 10 additional planes as spares, was awarded to the North American Aviation, Inc., by the Army yesterday at a cost of $1,372,255.

The planes carry crews of two, have two-way radio, top speeds of 190 miles an hour and service ceilings of 18,000 feet. The planes will be used for observation purposes and training.

Newspaper Tale Is Feature on Keith's Screen

"There Goes My Girl" Has Raymond and Sothern as Costars.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THERE GOES MY GIRL." RKO-Radio picturization of a story by George Beck, adapted to the screen by Harry Segal, costarring Gene Raymond and Ann Sothern, with Gordon Jones, Richard Lane, Frank Jenks, Bradley Page, Joan Woodbury, Marie Shelton, Alec Craig, Joseph Crehan, Maxine Jennings, Charles Coleman and Harry Worth. Directed by Ben Holmes. Reviewed Wednesday afternoon at RKO-Keith's.

Although they have been seen on the screen as costars in several previous vehicles — "Hooray for Love," "The Smartest Girl in Town," "Walking on Air," and the like—this marks a bit of a departure from their usual type of picture by Gene Raymond and Ann Sothern.

"There Goes My Girl" is a story with a newspaper background—about as authentic as all celluloid newspaper backgrounds are—and gets into a little more of the high zest of professional competition than the earlier films costarring these two have been able to achieve.

Jerry and Connie—they would be the platinum Mr. Raymond and the almost-as-blond Miss Sothern—are rival reporters, with Connie having a slight edge on her suitor in the matter of scoops. They are about to be married—in fact, they are at the altar—when Connie's managing editor pulls what is phonetically known as a dirty trick to break up the match and hang onto his star reporter. A fake shooting is put on and both bride and groom dash away from the minister to "get the story."

Fine Comedy Scene.

There is a fine comedy scene following this incident, in which the bride and groom do everything but start a street riot, she in bridal veil and he in top hat and tails.

Then there breaks the most sensational real murder story of the year and both go at it hammer and tongs, as the saying is. Connie's managing editor still attempts to outfoot Cupid, but in the long run gets himself exactly nowhere. You always know how these things are going to come out.

Nevertheless, there is a good deal of excitement, a considerable amount of melodramatic action and some pretty fair playing in "There Goes My Girl." It falls several thousand miles short of being what is technically known to the trade as an "epic," but it provides a reasonable measure of animated entertainment for the casual theatergoer who does not demand "greatness" in every film he views.

Gene Raymond, it may be said, is coming along as an actor. He has acquired poise, an ability to read lines and a flair for comedy that he did not manifest back in the days of "Zoo in Budapest," when Jesse L. Lasky still insisted that he had them. I doff my cap to Mr. Lasky as a bit of a clairvoyant.

Miss Sothern Charming.

Ann Sothern always is a charming, if not especially forceful ingenue. Slimmer now than she was when she played opposite Jack White in "America's Sweetheart" at the National as Harriette Lake, she makes a stunning screen figure and manages to imbue her characterization with something of the tang of realism.

There are many more in the cast who deserve a bit of praise that space will not permit. Among them, however, should be mentioned Eric Craig, for his Oxonian bum; Frank Jenks, Richard Lane, as the managerial Nemesis; Tom Kennedy, Maxine Jennings, Gordon Jones and Charles Coleman.

The production is a handsome one and the action has been fastly paced by Ben Holmes, who directed.

Color Photography In Eye Treatments Is Discussed Here

The important part played by color photography in the treatment of eye diseases was discussed yesterday by Dr. Arthur J. Bedell, of Albany, before a group of the country's leading eye specialists, meeting this week at the George Washington School of Medicine.

Stating it was a relatively new development, Dr. Bedell said that color photographs of the fundus, or back of the eyeball, should enable opthalmologists to make a more accurate and leisurely diagnosis of pathological condyitions. It is now possible, he told his listeners, to photograph the various stages leading to blindness as well as the recovery period after a brain tumor has been removed. He showed consecutive colored slides of the retinae and optic nerve.

Infections of the cornea were discussed by Dr. Sanford R. Gifford, of Chicago. Moving pictures illustrated a discussion of crossed eyes by Dr. P. Chalmers Jameson, of Brooklyn. Dr. Edward Jackson, of Denver, reviewed the history of the use of glasses.

32 at Stuart Hall Given Diplomas

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., June 2.—Stuart Hall, Episcopal School here for girls, brought its ninety-third session to a close yesterday by awarding diplomas to 32 seniors.

Mildred Klotz, Staunton, won the Latin prize; Maud Cover, Staunton, that for English composition; while Miss Conger was selected "Miss Steuart Hall" for 1937, the highest honor that comes to a student at the institution.

Those receiving distinctions included Miss Mary McRea Boydon, Glendale, Md., in music appreciation; Helen Winn Nelson, Lynchburg, in Bible; Beirne Blackford Moore, Baltimore, in physical education; Allison Robina Scott, Washington, in music appreciation and Bible; Mary Charlotte Thorne, Martinsburg, W. Va., in domestic art and physical education, and Anne Thornton, of Norfolk, in Latin and Spanish.

Returns to F Street in Gay Film

When that diverting continental comedy, "Cafe Metropole," returns to the screen of the Columbia Theater tomorrow, it will bring back to F street in its principal feminine role that delightful young cinema actress, Loretta Young, whose most recent portrait study is reproduced above. In the associate cast are such eminents of stage and screen as Adolphe Menjou, Tyrone Power, Charles Winninger and Helen Westley.

Open Air Vies With Theaters These Hot Days

Next Week's Bills Betray Keen Rivalry Between 'Open' and 'Shut.'

One of the most exciting prize-fight films ever brought to the screen, and one of the most notable, furthermore, by reason of its introduction of a handsome new leading man in the person of Wayne Morris, will be presented on the screen at the Earle Theater tomorrow, when "Kid Galahad" will be the major feature of the bill. Edward G. Robinson and Bette Davis are the ostensible costars of this release, but it is the stalwart young Mr. Morris who steals the show. On the stage, Benny Goodman, the old "Swingmaster," and his crew of instrumentalists and specialists will provide the living entertainment.

Robert Montgomery will be seen in one of the finest screen characterizations he ever has offered at Loew's Capitol Theater, beginning tomorrow, in "Night Must Fall." This is a unique sort of melodrama in which the star is confronted with a weighty chore. That he does it so well is all to his credit. In the opposite role appears Rosalind Russell, and in supporting parts Dame May Whitty, Alan Marshall, Merle Tottenham, Kathleen Harrison, E. E. Clive and Beryl Mercer. The stage bill will be provided by Benny Meroff and his orchestra, presenting a new twist in rhythm known as "jibe music."

"Her Husband Lies," the drama of a lie that had to be told, will be the chief screen attraction at the Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Its cast is featured by the presence of Ricardo Cortez and Gail Patrick. They are supported by Tom Brown, Louis Calhern and June Martel.

Following the current dual showings of "Abraham Lincoln" and "The Call of the Wild," the Rialto Theater will be closed for a week for the installation of its new air-conditioning equipment.

Robert Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck in "This Is My Affair" will be continued for a second week at Loew's Palace Theater. The short subjects will be held over with the major feature.

For the week beginning tomorrow, the Columbia will offer a repeat downtown engagement of "Cafe Metropole" as its chief screen attraction. Loretta Young, Tyrone Power, Charles Winninger, Adolphe Menjou and Helen Westley are cast in the foremost roles.

The Belasco Theater announces a continuance for the run of "Carnival in Flanders," one of the most amusing—and most risque—comedies to come to the American screen from Europe. The short subjects remain the same.

At the Little Theater next week, beginning Sunday, the attraction will be another revival of "Cavalcade," the prize-winning picture of its year, with Clive Brook and Diana Wynyard in the stellar roles. Short subjects will round out the bill.

Seats for the Roadside Theater's opening attraction, "The Wizard of the Waves," go on sale at Mrs. Dorsey's Concert Bureau in Droop's, Thirteenth and G streets, tomorrow. The play will run from June 14 to 26.

Having opened its Marshall Hall riverside park, the Wilson Line reports that a steadily growing demand for picnic reservations are being received. Marshall Hall is reached by the steamer City of Washington, which also makes daily trips to Mount Vernon and nightly cruises down the Potomac.

A varied list of new short-reels is announced for next week at the Trans-Lux Theater, beginning tomorrow, including a French travelogue and close-ups of Hollywood's famous Racquet Club. Newsreels from all the world consume 40 minutes of the program.

The Crystal Swimming Pool, out at Glen Echo Park, has come in for its full share of patronage these past few hot days and nights. Evening bathing is popular and in the background are 50 other amusements devices calculated to keep one's mind off the heat.

"Fats" Waller and his orchestra will be a special feature of the Saturday night cruises of the Steamer Potomac. Two cruises will be made this night, one leaving at 8:45 p. m., and a midnight jaunt leaving the dock at 12:30 a. m.

Hughes Addresses Old-Timers at 'Y'

While the youth of today is living in a "most alluring and complex time," young people now are no different fundamentally from what they were in other generations, Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes declared last night at the eleventh annual "old timers" reunion banquet of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Bishop Hughes, who is head of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the Washington area, developed the thought that, due to the complexity of the present day, the youth now more than ever need the help of older people as represented by the "old timers"—(members of the "Y" for more than 10 years.)

He voiced the opinion also that older persons should stop criticizing the youth and that there should be a closer spirit of co-operation between the younger and older generations.

Leonard W. DeGast, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., spoke and in a brief address, outlined Y. M. C. A. work and progress of today and compared them with "Y" activities of pas years.

Colored P.-T.A. Ask Additional Funds

Charges that the District budget for colored schools has been reduced proportionally to population while expenditures on white schools have in creased were laid before the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations yesterday.

The hearing was the last on the pending supply bill. Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman, said the bill will be marked up following a conference with District officials tomorrow morning.

Jesse McCoy Hanson, president of the Douglass-Simmons Parent-Teacher Association, filed a statement charging that while colored schools are entitled to 36 per cent of the school appropriation only 17.7 per cent of the school budget in the 1938 bill is for colored school.

He asked the Senate committee to include $200,000 for a new Banneker High School and $90 for land for the Dennison School.

Dr. Townsend, Former Tariff Expert, Dies

New York, June 2 (AP).—Dr. Charles O. Townsend, 74, former special expert of the United States Tariff Commission, died at his Woodside, Long Island, home today after a short illness.

Dr. Townsend, a native of Washtenaw County, Mich., entered Government service in 1901, after serving professorships at St. John's College, Annapolis, Md.; Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga., and Barnard College, New York.

Shad Bake Tomorrow.

The annual shad bake of Washington Chapter, Izaak Walton League of America, will be held at Fort Belvoir tomorrow from 4:30 to 7:30 p. m.

Dinner prizes and music are on the program, to be staged at the United States Fisheries Station on the Virginia reservation. A business meeting is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p. m.

"Remous" Stirs Further Ire of Censor Boards

Star of Film Is Puzzled by Custom Officials on Import Attempt.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, June 2.—Red-haired Peggy Thompson, whose screen play "Remous" wowed Europe a year ago, is perched in Santa Monica wondering whether honor is even an important commodity for hometown prophets.

A ball of fire in Paris, Miss Thompson is just one of the girls here, chiefly because of a suspicion lingering in the United States Customs and the New York Board of Censors that "Remous" isn't quite nice.

"I can't understand it," puzzled Miss Thompson. "'Remous' is a story of physical and spiritual love, but there's hardly any sex in it."

Francoise Rosay, French actress, starred in the film, which was made in Paris, but released through Germany's U. F. A. It's a story of trials of a married couple whose domestic tranquillity is interrupted by an auto accident.

"Did you know," Miss Thompson queried, "that customs officers are official censors in America for foreign films? And doesn't that seem odd?

Stir and Delay.

"When Arthur Mayer, of the Filmarte (New York) Theater undertook to import 'Remous' there was quite a stir and a lot of delay. Finally Mr. Mayer was ready to collect affidavits from doctors, lawyers and professional men everywhere to assure officers that the picture is art, but they decided that wouldn't be necessary.

"It's before the New York censors now, and if it is passed I hope the show will open this fall."

Miss Thompson, who was born in New York, calls St. Louis home. After a year in the University of California at Los Angeles, she became secretary to Director Rowland Lee, later a script girl, and finally a small-time writer in Long Island studios, but she had to go to France really to click.

While waiting for the verdict on "Remous," Miss Thompson has dashed off a novel, "Bramble Bush," which has just gone to publishers.

Ann Southern, Edward Stephenson, costume designer, and Stephenson's sister will shortly shove off for Chicago and the East in the last word in dog-houses—a glass trailer.

Gadget, designed by Stephenson as a solarium on wheels, has translucent sides and top, but you can't see through the stuff. Probably just another stunt to avoid publicity.

Buddy Ebsen, bushy-haired celluloid star, was given a day off to get in top shape for a "Broadway Melody" number, and returned unable to walk, much less dance. Early in the morning Ebsen sailed his star class sloop as far as Topanga Canyon, and was becalmed there. He spent the afternoon rowing back to Santa Monica.

Holy Cross Group Presents 'Comus'

John Milton's allegory, "Comus," which depicts the struggle between good and evil will be presented by Holy Cross Academy seniors at 8 p. m. Friday as the last production to be given in the school's Sylvan Theater at 2935 Upshur street northwest.

The theater, built in 1928, will be removed this summer to make room for the new Dumbarton College Building.

Anna Grace Small will play the part of the evil spirit, while Janet Handy will be in the role of the good. Other characters will be played by Rose Ruppert, Mary Ann Kennedy, Regina Bushwaller, Mary Neason. Dances in the play will be directed by Miss Elizabeth Ryan.

After the play there will be a talk by Dr. Spears Strahan, of the English department at Catholic University.

Labor Bargaining Began in 3063 B. C.

Chicago, June 2 (AP).—Collective bargaining—shibboleth of 1937 strikers—was traced back 5,000 years tonight.

Dr. Waldo H. Dubberstein, instructor in Oriental history at the University of Chicago, told an alumni gathering unions were formed by skilled craftsmen about 3063 B. C. He added:

"As the guilds were responsible to society for the good behavior of their members, collective bargaining became a part of the day."

Many other moot topics of the current era were discussed by the citizens of ancient Babylon over beakers of barley beer.

Among them, the doctor related, were government interference in industry, annuities, old-age pensions and stock market manipulations.

New York, June 2.

BERT WHEELER and Bob Woolsey now are completing their work in "Easy Going"—a significant title, inasmuch as this will be their last picture for RKO . . . Jack Oakie met Wheeler and asked him how the picture was progressing. "We got a great fade-out for the finish," Bert confided. "It shows Bob and me walking out of the RKO gates—with Sam Briskin chasing us with a whip!"

MRS. SAM PALEY, mother of C. B. S's. president, Bill Paley, celebrated her birthday last week. Mrs. Paley, who lives in Philadelphia, expected the usual birthday card from her son. Instead, Paley came to spend the day with her—and, in addition, brought $50,000 worth of jewelry as a birthday gift . . . The White House correspondents, who held their annual ball at the White House last week, came away with a new dance-fad they call the "Roosevelt Stomp." It started as a gag when Band Leader Meyer Davis asked the President what song he'd like to hear played. Roosevelt asked for the Fire Music from "Die Walkure." Davis sent one of his men back to the office to find the arrangements, rehearsed the band for two minutes and played the music in swing-time.

All through the meal he restrained his impulse to discuss the sport he's so fond, and directed the conversation to channels which he was positive would interest Mrs. Schacht . . . After dinner Schacht invited Ruby to take an auto ride with him. As they were about to step into the car they heard Al's mother shouting from the window above them . . . "I miss him so much," she sighed, "but—so long as he's finally having that rest" . . . Two minutes later a porter brought two trunks into the restaurant. Murray followed immediately. A sit-down strike had been called by the crew of the vessel. As a result the cruise was canceled.

Story Book Romance of Windsor and Wally Ends in Wedding

The Post is the only daily morning paper in Washington with A. P. WIREPHOTO Service.

1. PROCLAIMED KING EDWARD VIII in January of last year, he informed Commons a few months later of the possibility of marriage. In July he chartered a yacht for a vacation cruise along the Dalmatian Coast and the Mediterranean. Pictured fishing in waters of Yugoslavia, Wallis Warfield, then Mrs. Ernest Simpson, can be seen seated next to King.

2. AT THE RACES. Following exclusive publication in The Washington Post of Edward's intention to wed Mrs. Simpson "at any cost" businessmen in London sought heavy insurance against a possible postponement of the coronation.

3. HIS MAJESTY, shown as he was leaving the House of Lords after his first Parliament, November 3. Increasingly popular with his subjects, he frequently visited industrial and mining areas where there were many unemployed. He won high favor with the labor classes.

4. SIMPSON DIVORCE. Scene outside the Ipswich Assize court where Mrs. Simpson had filed suit for divorce; the decree was granted October 27 and became final after six months.

5. MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT having already started a movement to prevent the impending marriage of the King and Mrs. Simpson, the English public who first heard of L'affaire Simpson when the press lifted a self-imposed friendship in December, demonstrated against plans to interfere with the King's wedding.

6. AT 10 DOWNING STREET Premier Stanley Baldwin was busy conferring with members of his cabinet during the crisis. Dispatch riders were scurring between Fort Belvedere and Downing Street.

7. EDWARD ABDICATES. "For the woman I love," Edward gave up the throne on December 10, his brother ascending to the crown as George VI. He addressed his subjects over a world-wide radio hook-up. The instrument of abdication reproduced at right.

I, Edward the Eighth, of Great Britain, Ireland, and the British Dominions beyond the Seas, King, Emperor of India, do hereby declare My irrevocable determination to renounce the Throne for Myself and for My descendants, and My desire that effect should be given to this Instrument of Abdication immediately.

In token whereof I have hereunto set My hand this tenth day of December, nineteen hundred and thirty six, in the presence of the witnesses whose signatures are subscribed.

8. A HISTORIC REUNION recently took place at the Chateau de Cande, Monts, France, where the former King, now Duke of Windsor, hastened to his intended when Wallis Warfield's decree became final. Windsor had spent his five-month self-imposed exile at Enzefeld Castle, Austria.

9. AT PARIS, FRANCE, dressmaking establishments have been busy for weeks designing and making gowns ordered by Wallis Warfield for her trousseau.

10. THE HAPPY COUPLE in their most recent posed picture, made shortly after the Duke of Windsor reached Monts from Austria. Today Wallis Warfield becomes the Duchess of Windsor.

11. THE HONEYMOON LODGE. A retinue of servants have been busy decorating and refurnishing the Castle Wasserleonburg. Built in the eighteenth century, it is high in the Carinthian Mountains overlooking Yugoslavia. Here the Duke and Duchess of Windsor will spend their honeymoon.

Pants Not Graceful Costume For Either Sex, Says Designer

Miss Dorothy Croissant, Who Knows Dress of All Ages, Prefers Skirts.

By Malvina Lindsay.

SURVEYING the clothes situation from the vantage ground of centuries, Miss Dorothy Croissant believes the crying need of the day is to do something about men's dress.

"Something's got to happen to men's clothes or I'll go crazy," says this young clothes designer, who attired a large cast of men and women so strikingly and so beautifully in the Civic Theater's recent presentation of "Lysistrata."

The drabness of men's clothes is one of the most depressing things on the fashion landscape, believes Miss Croissant. "I always look forward to summer," she said, "because men will at least come out in white and lighter colors."

It was the rise of the middle classes that put men in their present somber, regimented attire, points out Miss Croissant. But now bourgeois gentlemen, she insists, have attained sufficient social standing and an interest in old houses, family trees, etc., that they can afford to step out boldy in more decorative attire. For that matter, even skirts!

MISS DOROTHY CROISSANT.

Skirts for Men.

"Why not skirts?" she asks. "Men have worn them in the past. And who could be more masculine—or more comfortably attired—than the Scottish highlander in his kilties?

"However, I'm not hopeful that we'll get men very soon into even the semblance of a skirt. They would scream and hide in the cellar at the thought. Yet—they are wearing corsets again. That may be a straw in the wind.

"What about the growing pants' peril for women?" Miss Croissant was asked. "Will we all be forced into pants eventually?"

"I hope not," she replied quickly. "While the general tendency toward pants and trouser effects is more pronounced now than in any other period of history, yet I'm not worrying. The practice does not have enough appeal either of beauty or comfort to be lasting.

"I know a great many women are like myself—most unhappy in pants. They do not find them comfortable or practical. Yet many others do. Often I find myself the only woman backstage who is not wearing pants.

"Yet I do not believe pants have enough universal appeal for women to become a lasting influence. They have never taken hold strongly in the past. Oriental women have worn trousers of a sort. In the late Medieval period women included pants in their riding dress. With them they wore page boy coiffures. In European costume not even under pants appeared until the sixteenth century. Not many years ago there was an abortive evening pajama craze. But fortunately it did not last."

Bad for Figure.

Neither as a designer or a student of fashion history does Miss Croissant see any beauty in pants—especially on the feminine figure. "They are only becoming to rare types," she said. "Occasionally you see a slight, very young girl who looks attractive in them."

Women are beginning to realize this, Miss Croissant believes. She points out that even shorts are getting longer and more skirtlike than formerly.

Having disposed of the pants problem, would Miss Croissant offer any advice to the bewildered woman who every season found herself torn between advice on the one hand to "go simple and Grecian and on the other to become ornate and Medieval? Which tendency would win out in the long run?"

"Neither," she replied. "It is the old struggle between the Gothic and the later Grecian cult of simplicity. As a matter of fact, the further back you go in costume history, the more complex are the designs. Not until the early fifth century did the Greeks espouse the philosophy of simplicity. The two influences, the simple and the ornate, always will be at war in woman's dress. The pendulum will swing from one to the other. The thing to do is to suit yourself and your mood, to choose according to your personality and your circumstance.

Mood Determines Dress.

"One may want to be simple one time, decorative another. Occasionally, you will want to wear a very dramatic evening dress—if you can get away with it. But if you are not in such a mood, if you would rather sit in a corner, get yourself a serviceable brown silk."

In her stage work, Miss Croissant says she is happiest "when I am working in a period in which I am as free as possible to load things on or strip them off."

At present, in designing for the Roadside Theater's production of "The Wizard of the Way," to open June 14, she is having "a lot of fun" with the elaborate Spanish costumes of 1840. Recently she got just as much enjoyment out of the simple, though colorful, costumes of Lysistrata. "I got a good dose of simplicity," she said, "and now I'm ready for something more ornate."

Although the Greek costumes of the women in Lysistrata all bore a general similarity there were no duplicates. Feminine individuality began to assert itself in costume from the earliest days, Miss Croissant points out. That is why she does not think there is any danger of future regimentation in dress.

The daughter of Dr. DeWitt C. Croissant, of George Washington University, Miss Croissant studied at the Parsons School, New York, has worked with the American Laboratory Theater in New York, and also in the atelier of Helene Pons costumer.

Hints For Safe Storing Of Winter Clothing

Now's the time to store winter clothes and bedding. Clean and air them thoroughly in the sun. Next pack them securely in newspapers. Then place them in boxes that are covered tightly. Label each box carefully and store those that may be needed in convenient places. Blankets, especially, are often necessary during cool spells.

Elastic Saves Clothes.

To save wear and tear on baby's shirts and hose, take two pairs of baby supporters and make one out of them by cutting off the safety pins at the top and sewing the two supporters together. Hook one fastener to the hose and one to the shirt (one supporter being upside down).

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, June 2.

WITH the arrival of fine weather in great gobs, all our famed outdoor eating houses are running full blast for the duration of the summer, and excellent institutions they are, if you don't mind an occasional fleck of dust in the jellied consomme.

ALICE HUGHES.

Repeal brought these gay luncheon places to birth, and now we are more Parisian than Paris in the matter of tables on the sidewalk. The historic old Brevoort has a lovely one down by the Arch at the beginning of Fifth Avenue, and farther uptown there are the Chatham Walk and the Marguery Pavillon, both clustering in the shadow of Park Avenue's costly pueblos.

This open-air lunching is all very well for ladies of leisure, who can sit about for a couple of hours in their summery prints and dish the day's gossip tidbits over the iced coffee, but it's frightfully hard on us poor working girls, who have to eat and run. There's something about eating in the open, under a bright umbrella and with the pleasant gabble-gabble of unimportant talk going on, that tends to make loafers out of the most ardent of us.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The town has been tremendously posy-conscious for the past week or two, as it always is this time of year, with flower-growers frantically exhibiting their prize blooms all over the shop. The loveliest show I saw was that held by the American Iris Society on the eleventh floor of the RCA Building, the pet exhibit being the first orange colored iris ever produced. And didn't a smart Fifth Avenue emporium right across the street run an "Iris Fashion Show" at the same time? It featured irisy-colored garden party clothes and evening things. Can't get ahead of the merchants!

There's a new magazine on the way labelled, succinctly, "You," and to be devoted entirely to the subject of beauty. Next fall will see the first issue, and its associate editor will be our Jean Spadea, one of the better fashion artists and a high-powered creator of window mannequins . . .

There was a big birthday party over at Southampton, Long Island, last week. Mrs. Sarah Ann Ross was celebrating her ninety-ninth natal day, and was confronted with no less than five birthday cakes, one with 99 candles. Mrs. Ross is very spry, and works daily in her flower garden.

There is still no slacking of the charm bracelet mania, and the little gold gew-gaws are now amazing in their variety. Roy Johnson, at the Waldorf, showed me some honies—detachable dice in a gold frame, a little French phone on which you can dial "I Love You," a tiny compact and puff and a placque reading "Do not disturb!" Johnson makes a lot of these things to order, too—he actually turned out a gold tooth charm for a waggish customer not long ago.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

FINGER to cheek, a lady sits of a May morning, wondering just what she could do to freshen up the scene for summer.

How about your lamp shades? Don't tell us that you've bought a lot of those oil silk covers to hide your lovely lamps! We are all in favor of saving beautiful things from the ravages of summer dust, but we're not in favor of hiding our light under a bushel—or under an oil silk cover. Our suggestion would be to change lamp shades with the seasons. Crisp, light, ridiculously inexpensive shades can replace more elaborate silk shades for summer and give the house a crisp, cool appearance; or clever fingers can fashion decorator-shades at microscopic prices.

White linen or pique shades on a series of living-room lamps for example, especially in a room where the slip covers on the furniture have chalk white backgrounds with sprawling, luscious roses in the pattern. And pale green walls, white linen draperies and white pottery on the mantel to finish a particularly cool and inviting summer living room.

Then there might be frilled organdy, dotted swiss, gingham, chintz, or dimity shades for lamps in a bedroom. Simply shirr them on a wire frame. If you are ambitious you will probably be sewing away like mad on a new summer bed spread and curtains for your own bedroom. Use your left over material to make lamp shades for your bureau or dressing table and complete the hot weather ensemble with a flourish. Or use tiers of old-fashioned embroidered nainsook ruffles to cover plain white shades. Tied with a blue bow if you're feeling really dainty about the whole business.

Old hat boxes are the obvious answer to the storage problem for winter lamp shades.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Mental Reactions.

We are prone to think a great deal about diet in terms of its chemistry and physiology, without thinking very much of what the soul or the mind has to do with it, and yet they have a good deal, according to Dr. Lewis R. Wolberg.

Early man, he points out, was too busy catching his food to concern himself with its preparation. When fire began to be used for cooking, when cereal was made into bread and then baked, and man began to learn something about the gustatory joys of eating, it changed the face of civilization. There are few of us so stultified or so poor that we do not like occasionally to pander to the palate.

This epicurean attitude has been in existence for a long time. We are told by Pherecrates of a Greek who enjoyed eating to the extent that he consumed 2½ bushels of food, but whose friend pitied him for having lost his appetite.

No wonder the word "Lucullan" has come into the language if we can believe the story Lucullus paid as much as 1,700 pounds for a single meal, and in eight months Vitellius poured $7,000,000 worth of food into his stomach.

We know nations by the foods they eat quite as well as by their other national characteristics. The Englishman for puddings and meat roasts, the Irish for corned beef and cabbage, the Italians for minestra and macaroni, the French for onion soup, souffles and sauces; the Hungarians for goulash and paprikas, the Poles for dumplings and kopustal, the Russians for caviar, the Dutch for cheese, the Spanish for puchera, the Scandinavians for their hors d'oeuvres, the Germans for sauerkraut and sausages, the Mexicans for tamales, the Greek for okra stew, the Jewish for borsht, krupnick and blintzes, the Hindu for curry, and the Austrian for schnitzel, breads and pastries.

The food habits of famous men and women in history are interesting, and sometimes have changed the course of the world. A shoulder of mutton and onion sauce turned the triumphs of Dresden into disaster for Napoleon. Napoleon was a very erratic eater, sometimes abstemious and sometimes gluttonous. When he was hungry he would eat to stupefaction.

Cardinal Wolsey said of Henry VIII that rather than "miss or want any part of his appetite, he put the loss of one-half of the realm in danger."

Boswell said of Samuel Johnson: "I never knew a man who relished good eating more than he did."

Questions From Readers.

R. E. B.: "Kindly tell me how much food a child 5½ years old, 4 feet tall, requires."

Answer: About what his appetite demands. That is the safest rule.

Gay Sandals of Hindu Scarfs Emphasize All-White Clothes

Gay-colored stripes are the theme of the new summer shoes to dramatize all-white or dark frocks. The model pictured is made of a Hindu scarf, in hand-woven material; bright navy with green, yellow and red stripes.

Wide Variety of Colors Popular for Summer Footwear; Oriental Prints Lead Fashion Parade for Season.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

COLORFUL HINDU scarfs are being made into gay sandals to dramatize the all-white summer costumes, and if you are ensemble-minded, you can match your shoes with a scarf around your throat or waistline. In this season of riotous color, these lovely Hindu prints are the answer to something exclusive and distinctive. The color combinations are traditional, being handed down from generation to generation, and the materials are all hand-woven.

The styling of the sandals are also interesting; glove-fitting, backless, toeless and laced up the entire front of the shoe, following the "bicycle influence." With the lightweight materials and the decollete styling, these chic sandals are the last word in comfort, as they are in smartness.

Bright Colors Popular.

A lovely bright navy blue with contrasting stripes would be a striking shoe to accent either an all-white or blue costume or a frock in one of the stripe color tones. Other colors available are bright green, yellow and red—all with striped patterns in contrasting colors. The lacings match the background.

Other tinted shoes to add a touch of gaiety to your summer wardrobe are suedes and fine kids in bright or subdued brilliant tones, made with or without backs, and usually without toes. Red earth is an effective subtle tone to accent white, also dull medium green, blues and yellows. White mesh combined with colored kid is as cool as it is smart.

Shoes Accent Costumes.

White shoes continue to hold an important place in the summer style scene, and there should be at least one all-white pair in every wardrobe. Variety in styling and material combinations are as prevalent in the white versions as they are in the tinted shoes. A black or navy sheer frock could change character from day to day by the interchange of shoes—white, tinted kid or suede, and the new Hindu scarf sandals. The same idea is true of the all-white costume.

For summer dancing to accompany the popular cotton evening gowns, there are attractive shoes made of black or white filet mesh, trimmed with discs of silver, gold or black kid. Cotton prints and stripes are also much in evidence to dramatize dancing feet. Shoes for both daytime and evening this summer are as interesting as the ensembles they accompany; in fact, in many instances, they are the most colorful part of the entire costume.

New Recipes For National Tomato Week

By Rebekah Blake.

NATIONAL TOMATO Week, May 30 to June 5, give this fruit, or vegetable, a chance to show its versatility.

Grown at first for ornamental purposes only, tomato and tomato products have assumed a role of vast importance in the menus of the Nation. Rich in vitamins A, B, C and G, and the minerals lime, phosphorus and iron, they contribute immeasurably to good health.

Aside from being distinctive and individual, the flavor of tomatoes is one which combines well with that of many other foods and to most persons it is equally desirable hot or cold.

Tomatoes are delicious when eaten raw, as juice or salad and may be stewed, broiled, fried or baked or served in soup, relish and preserves.

Tomato Scenic.

Chill and peel tomato; hollow out and use the pulp chopped finely and mixed with cream or cottage cheese, seasoned with a little pepper and salt, for filling. Garnish on top with olive slices and pimentos. Serve very cold.

Tomato Jelly Salad.

3 tablespoons gelatin
½ cup cold water
1 quart tomatoes, canned or fresh
2 or 3 slices onion
1½ teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon green pepper (chopped)
2 tablespoons celery (chopped)
1 tablespoon parsley
1 cup cabbage, shredded

Soak the gelatin in the cold water for 5 minutes.

Boil the tomatoes and onion for 5 minutes, strain through a fine sieve, pour the hot tomato juice over the softened gelatin and stir until it is dissolved. Add the salt and sugar and chill. When the gelatin mixture is partly set add the finely chopped vegetables and mix well. Add more salt if needed. If the mixture is not tart enough add a little lemon juice or vinegar. Pour into wet custard cups and place in a cold place until set; turn out on crisp lettuce leaves and serve with salad dressing.

Fried Green Tomatoes.

The tomatoes may be just to the white stage before ripening or have partly turned red. Remove the hard portion at the stem ends. Cut into slices one-quarter inch or a little less in thickness. Season with salt and pepper if desired. Roll each slice in flour or cornmeal and fry in enough hot fat to cover the bottom of a skillet. When brown on one side turn and let brown on the other. Lard, lard substitute or meat "drippings" may be used as the fat. If the tomatoes are in the "turning ripe" stage they will hold their shape better during cooking if they are dipped in egg which has been beaten and diluted with water (2 tablespoons of water to 1 egg) before coating with the flour or meal.

Dressy Nightgowns.

New York (AP).—Nightgowns have borrowed style suggestions from evening dresses. Some of them are made of chiffon. Others have peplum jackets, bordered with velvet.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Anticipating Correspondence With Youth She Met in Father's Store, Girl Asks What to Write.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My father has a store in which I worked last summer. There I met a nice young man who was driving a delivery truck. He came to the store several times, and each time only a few words were exchanged between us, and these of a business nature. Finally he introduced himself one day and asked my name. He told me about his home in the South and about his work in a city some miles from where I live.

• • • •

He belongs to a family of means and good standing, as I have learned from a friend. And although he comes from such a background, he started at the bottom of a business and is working his way to success. After we introduced ourselves, each time he came he would ask for me if he didn't see me around and would stay for a friendly conversation.

• • • •

One day when he came he told me he had been given a promotion, which meant he would have to work inside. He said he would come by to see me when he could and that I would hear from him. Now he often sends best regards by the driver who took his place. I have learned to care for him as I have cared for no other friend. He is different from most young men; likes to talk about the country which he loves and other things in which I, too, am interested.

Would it be correct for me to write to him and what kind of letter should it be? I would like to know some of the things such a letter should contain.

SMALL TOWN GIRL.

The Right Approach.

DEAR S. T. G.: If the young man writes you a friendly letter there is no reason why you should not reply in kind. But it might be indiscreet and presumptuous of you to make the first move toward launching the promised correspondence. After all, a young man's passing notice of a pretty girl is not to be taken too seriously, and when this boy is away from your side it may be, for him, a case of "out of sight, out of mind."

• • • •

If acceptable opportunity for writing him presents itself, compose such a letter as you would write to any good friend. Leave sentiment out of it and discuss in conversational language the life of the store, the charms of your countryside at this season and any other of those things in which you and he are mutually interested. Don't write overly long letters; don't be in too great haste to reply to letters received, and avoid exaggerated intimacy in beginning and ending your letters.

A Case of Jealousy.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What should one do when one finds one's self jealous of one's sweetheart to the extent of asking her not to dance with certain men whom one knows are trying to win her away? Yours truly, H. J.

• • • •

DEAR H. J.: Whoever is jealousy attempts to circumscribe the social contacts of the beloved is making a serious mistake calculated to bring about the very thing he dreads and seeks to avoid. Love which is placed under quarantine seldom survives.

When a person is so jealous that his concern cannot be concealed, I think it wise to confess its existence ruefully, as a personal fault and failure.

• • • •

Rather than ask your sweetheart not to dance with avowed rivals, why not ask her if she has any helpful suggestions for overcoming this wretched jealousy? It would be even better if you could keep your fear of rivals so completely under control that none would ever know about it. The cause and cure of jealousy having been discussed here at some length recently it seems unnecessary to cover the same ground again. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Tomorrow's Mail.

Married four blissfully happy years "to a man who comes, literally, from the other side of the tracks, socially and environmentally," woman writes to label as bosh this department's alleged statement that two persons of entirely different backgrounds are not likely to achieve a successful life together.

Senator, Mrs. Tydings Are Hosts at Oakington

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Finkelstaedt and Baroness von Schoen to Visit There This Week-End; Summer Parties Planned.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Visiting Oakington, the estate of Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings near Havre de Grace, Md., is a treat at any time, but never more so than in early summer when its formal garden is in full bloom, and its quaint flower-fringed paths draw threads through carpets of cool green grass toward the Chesapeake Bay.

Through the spring Oakington was the scene of a number of parties, including the Sunday luncheon for Senators and their wives that the guests still remember with pleasure. Since Senator and Mrs. Tydings plan to keep Oakington open until Congress adjourns, there will probably be a number of formal gatherings there throughout the summer.

Among the guests to be there this week-end are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, of Washington, and the latter's sister, Baroness von Schoen, wife of the German Ambassador to Chile. The baroness flew into Washington a few days ago and will sail for Germany on the Bremen soon.

Located on a tract of land surveyed in 1659, it originally belonged to Col. Nathaniel Utie, but eventually became the property of Mr. James L. Breese. A number of years ago, extensive additions to the original Colonial house were made under direction of the noted architect Stanford White. But although the rambling mansion has attracted much favorable attention since then, it takes second honors, in the opinion of most visitors, who dote on Oakington's formal gardens surrounded by 200-year-old boxwood.

Among those who will visit Oakington this summer are Mrs. Tydings' two sisters, Mrs. Aldace Walker and Miss Emlen Knight Davies, who will land in New York June 16. (Mrs. Walker was the former Miss Rahel Davies. Her husband is the son of Mrs. Harold Walker, who is the sister of Mrs. Finkenstaedt.)

In London during the coronation season Mrs. Walker and Miss Davies stayed with their father, Joseph E. Davies, United States Ambassador to Russia. Their London home was Mrs. James F. Field's home in Regent's Park, with its own little lake and park in the very heart of London. This house has many claims to distinction. For instance, it boasts a spacious ballroom and a drawing room done entirely in white, from chandelier to rug.

Miss Emlen Davies has been serving as her father's secretary in Russia, but she expects to spend most of her summer in Washington. Mrs. Walker, whose home is in New York, will be here and at Oakington part of the time. Mrs. Knight Davies, her mother, is now in New York, but expects to return to Washington the end of the week.

Marquis James In Washington.

Marquis James, of Pleasantville, N. Y., the Pulitzer prize winning author who refuses to attend literary teas or to be lionized, is spending a few days in Washington, and is staying at the Dodge. He recently completed his second volume on the career of Andrew Jackson. His first was a best-seller, as was "The Raven," his biography of Sam Houston. Both Mr. James and his wife, Bessie Rowlands James, also a writer, have a number of friends in Washington.

Mrs. Taft to Leave Tomorrow for Canada.

Mrs. Willam Howard Taft, former First Lady, will close her elm-shaded house at 2215 Wyoming avenue tomorrow and will leave for her summer home in Murray Bay, Canada, to spend the remainder of this month. She recently returned from a Mediterranean cruise, which seems to have inaugurated a full season of travel.

She plans to leave her Canadian home the end of June and on July 2 will sail with Mrs. St. John Greble for England, where she will spend about six weeks. Upon her return, she will go again to Murray Bay, where she will be visited by her children.

• • • •

The Minister of Canada and Lady Marler will remain in Washington until the end of July. They will go away for August and September, probably to Canada.

Miss Willa Magee, who makes her home at the legation, will leave the end of this month for her home in Montreal, returning to the Capital in the fall.

• • • •

Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard will leave the end of next week or the first of the following week for her home on Cape Cod.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Block will sail July 23 from Baltimore for England, where they will visit Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Miller, of the United States Foreign Service, who are stationed in London. Later Mr. and Mrs. Block will go to Ireland to visit Mr. Reginald C. Daly, of Dublin. After a brief trip on the continent, they will return to Washington in the fall.

Martin-Hughes Party Selected

Mrs. Hay to Be Matron of Honor as Senator's Daughter Is Wed.

Wilmington, Del., June 2.—Miss Caroline Hughes, daughter of United States Senator and Mrs. James H. Hughes, whose marriage to Dr. John P. The ushers will be Mr. Franklyn Allen, of Washington and Seaford, son of Congressman and Mrs. Allen; Mr. Lewis Shull, of Broadwater, Ind., and Washington; Mr. John Clark, of Washington; Mr. W. Oakman Hay, jr., of Ridgewood, N. J.; Mr. Willard D. Boyce, Mr. John McDonald, Mr. Stites McDaniel and Mr. Max Terry, of this city.

Mrs. Frederick A. Bowdle, of Wilmington, will sing before the ceremony, which will take place at 8 o'clock in Christ Episcopal Church, with a reception following at the Mapledale Country Club.

• • • •

Mrs. Pierre Light Wilson has issued invitations to the marriage of her daughter, Louise Pelk, to Mr. Sidney Albert Mullikin. The ceremony will take place Saturday at 4:30 o'clock at the Bethlehem Chapel of the Washington Cathedral.

• • • •

Judge and Mrs. William Strother Smith have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Helen Elizabeth, to Mr. Daniel Currie Batttie, on Saturday, June 26, at St. Matthew's Church. A reception at the apartment of the bride's parents, at Wardman Park, will follow the ceremony.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. James F. Callery, of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, are visiting friends in Washington and are occupying a suite at the Wardman Park Hotel.

• • • •

Pincess A. K. Mandi, of San Diego, Calif., has arrived in the East for a six months' stay. While in Washington, she is staying at the Carlton Hotel. With her is Mrs. H. R. Hermesch, also of San Diego. They will be in Washington about a week.

• • • •

Mrs. Thomas Edmiston Drake and her daughter, Miss Alice Hutchins Drake, left yesterday for Atlantic City, where they will be guests at the Hotel Dennis for a week.

• • • •

Miss Ann D. Lockwood and Miss Lois Wragg, of Sheffield, England, are occupying a suite at the Wardman Park Hotel while in Washington for a visit.

• • • •

Capt. Carter W. Clarke, officer in the War Department Message Center, has returned to his desk after an extended illness in Walter Reed Hospital.

• • • •

Graduate Will Sail for Europe Soon

Underwood & Underwood.

MISS ADELE BUNKER,

daughter of Mme. Rosso, wife of the Italian Ambassador to Russia, who was among those to graduate from Holton Arms School Tuesday evening, when she was awarded the literary prize for her contributions to the Scribe, the school's annual. Miss Bunker will sail for Europe the latter part of this month with her brother, George Bunker, who is attending St. Alban's, and Mrs. Genevieve Taylor to join her parents in Russia.

Patrice Rice Will Wed Soon

Engaged to W. D. Howell, Her Parents Announce.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Rice have announced the engagament of their daughter, Patrice, to Wilfred D. Howell, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Howell, of Augusta, Me.

Miss Rice graduated from Sacred Heart Academy and received her LL. B., LL. M. and M. P. L. from Columbus University School of Law. She is a member of the District of Columbia bar, the American Bar Association, the Portia Club and the Venture Club, chairman of the junior section of the Women's Bar Association. Through her paternal grandmother she is a cousin of the late Pope Leo XIII.

Mr. Howell attended Catholic University, graduating in the class of 1928 with a bachelor of arts degree and is now associated with the administrative office of that university.

The wedding will take place in the late summer.

Remeys Attend Navy Exercises

Miss Angelica Gear Remey, Mr. Charles Mason Remey and Mr. and Mrs. John Terry Remey, of New York, are with their sister, Mrs. John Winthrop Wadleigh, in Annapolis for the exercises of the graduating class of the Naval Academy, of which Mrs. Wadleigh' son, Midshipman John Remey Wadleigh, is a member.

Midshipman Wadleigh comes from a military line. His father was the late Lieut. Col. John Winthrop Wadleigh, U. S. M. C. Both of his grandfathers were rear admirals of the Navy.

Mrs. Wadleigh has had a house for the winter in Annapolis. She will soon open her home in Jamestown, R. I., where she will spend part of the summer before sailing for Europe with her younger son, George Remey Wadleigh, who graduates shortly from St. George's School, Newport, R. I.

Miss Mary Clark To Be Married

Mrs. Edgar E. Clark, wife of the former Interstate Commerce Commissioner, announces the engagement of her daughter, Mary Barns, to Cornelius Carnwright Chavelle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Chavelle, of Seattle. The wedding will take place September 8 at Pasadena, Calif.

Miss Clark is the sister of Mrs. Layson Atkins, wife of Col Atkins, of this city, and attended the National Cathedral and Gunston Hall Schools here. She also attended the University of Arizona.

Mr. Chevelle is a graduate of Stanford University and is now completing his law course at the University of Washington.

Louise Allen Is Wed Here To Mr. Davis

Ceremony Performed at St. Thomas, and Rev. Smith Officiates.

Couple to Live at Mount Holly After Trip to Old Point Comfort.

St. Thomas' Episcopal Church was the scene of the wedding at 3 o'clock yesterday of Miss K. Louise Allen, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Walker Allen, of White Hall, Mount Holly, Va., to Mr. William Bland Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sale Davis, of Fredericksburg, Va. The Rev. C. Ernest Smith performed the ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the Colonial Dames Club. The church was decorated with white peonies and ferns.

Dr. Allen gave his daughter in marriage. She wore her mother's wedding gown of old hand-made lace, and carried white roses and lilies. Her only attendant was her sister, Misses Alicia G. Allen, who wore a mousseline frock in a pastel pink shade and carried talisman roses. Dr. John Davis Welch was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Spotswood Allen, of Amherst, Va., and Mr. John W. Cleaton, of Washington.

Assisting the bridal couple in receiving after the ceremony were the bride's mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Wall, and Mrs. Lawrence L. Gourley. Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest J. Clark and Mrs. William D. Ligon, of Baltimore; Mrs. Joseph Gozzam and Miss Janet Snyder, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. William K. Allen, of Amherst; Mr. and Mrs. Laird Conrad, of Harrisonburg, Va., and Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Davis, of Mount Holly.

The bride attended the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va., and is a member of the National Society of Colonial Dames. Mr. Davis is a descendant of Capt. William Chowning.

Gov. and Mrs. George Earle Guests of Honor For Southern Society's Banquet at the Willard

Asserts Machines and Monopolies Must Be Curbed.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

GOV. GEORGE H. EARLE and Mrs. Earle of Pennsylvania last night were guests of honor at a banquet given by the Southern Society of Washington in the ballroom of the Willard Hotel and attended by 800 guests. The Pennsylvania Governor, whose wife is a native of Kentucky, was introduced by Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, and made an address on "The South in Our National Problem," which was broadcast.

With frequent references to the power of the "Solid South," to which he gave credit for putting in office "our humanitarian President, Franklin Delano Roosevelt," and referring amid applause to "Jeffersonian democracy," he discussed its part in solving the economic problems which face the Nation. He termed the machine—made to be an assistance to man—the greatest menace of modern civilization unless it is wisely used. It is responsible both for unemployment and the concentration of wealth, he asserted. It is essential, he said, that "predatory monopoly, which keeps down the little fellow, be curbed. We must have many little capitalists rather than a few big ones."

There was the friendly spirit at the dinner which marks all gatherings of Southern people. Senator Reynolds, introducing Gov. Earle, described him as "a man who understands fully the conditions with which we are today confronted." He also made allusion to the fact that Mrs. Earle is a Southerner, indicating her husband's warm regard for the South although he is chief executive of a Northern State.

Mr. Robert H. McNeill, president of the Southern Society, presided. One of the features of the evening was the music provided by two other guests from Pennsylvania, Marie Zara, soprano of concert and opera, and Elizabeth Westmoreland, pianist, who accompanied her, both from Philadelphia. Miss Zara included "One Fine Day" from "Madame Butterfly" and several lighter numbers in her program: "How dy do, Miss Springtime;" "Kiss Me Again" and other songs, all of which delighted her audience.

Representative J. Buell Snyder presented a group of young buglers from his district, who had won the high school State contest, and came to the Capital especially to play on last night's program. A large delegation of others from the area came with them.

Among the guests at the speaker's table were Senator Joseph E. Guffey, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the Mint; Lieut. Comdr. Ovid C. Foote, chairman of arrangements for the banquet; Senator Claud Pepper, Mr. and Mrs. William Jennings Price, Senator and Mrs. Alben B. Barkely, Miss Dorothy Ashby Moncure, secretary of the society; Rear Admiral Percy W. Foote, Miss Marie Mulligan, Capt. and Mrs. C. C. Calhoun, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Roberts, Mrs. Carroll Miller, Senator Charles O. Andrews and Senator Clyde Herring.

Mrs. J. Craig Peacock was chairman of the reception committee with Miss Mae Helm, vice chairman; Mr. Clyde F. Baggarly, chairman of the floor committee and of the program; Mr. Grosvenor Dawe, of publicity.

Madame Chairman . . .

By Suzanne.

THE WOMAN'S ARMY AND NAVY LEAGUE is regarding its spring work at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club with special appreciation to Mrs. Wallace Lind, wife of Commander Lind, who is chairman of the house committee.

If you know Mrs. Lind, you are aware she does nothing by halves. When there is a job to be done she maps out a plan, organizes her assistants and then goes to work herself. She instituted a spring housecleaning, repairing and redecorating program such as she would carry on if the club were her own home. The result has been such an interest on the part of 15 or 20 permanent residents that they have hurried home on many afternoons and volunteered to help, making small repairs and doing odd jobs which accelerated the progress of the "fix-up" project.

Mrs. Lind made 100 yards or so—maybe more—of new curtains, crisp and fresh, for various rooms; a new floor is being laid in the room used for dancing and for meetings of patriotic organizations which have their sessions there; there is new weather-proofing on the outside of the building and several of the downstairs rooms are being redecorated.

Mrs. Joseph Wright, wife of Lieut. Wright, U. S. N., has completed the mural in the recreation room which is one of the chief features of the redecoration. It is a colorful series of pictures, including sailors, soldiers and marines, in a merry-go-round of fun. Every day she worked at the club Mrs. Lind was there with her, and she often had an interested group of spectators.

The club is becoming increasingly popular with transient guests, men from nearby posts, who stay there when they are in Washington.

Mrs. Walter Grant, wife of the commandant of the Army War College, is now president of the Woman's Army and Navy League, but at the close of the present session of the War College, July 1, Gen. Grant will be transferred to New York and the league will face the necessity of finding some one to replace its present head. Previous to Mrs. Grant's election a Navy wife was president. It is the custom to alternate, Army Navy and Marine Corps, so the successor to Mrs. Grant will be from either the Army or the Marine Corps group.

• • • •

SPEAKING OF DOINGS in the Service set, there's to be an innovation this year—a change of date—in the Navy Relief Ball. Mrs. William D. Leahy, wife of the Chief of Naval Operations, who is chairman, with members of her committee, has decided to upset a tradition of 30 years and have the party on the Tuesday before Lent instead of Thanksgiving night. So many people who would otherwise attend are away at Thanksgiving that the new plan was worked out.

JOINING HANDS across the Falls, the Canadian Zonta Club and the Zontians of Niagara Falls will be hostesses at the National Zonta convention at Niagara, June 24 to 26. Washington members are planning to go, seven strong. Miss Winifred Burwell, new president, will represent the local club as delegate; Miss Mary Sigman as alternate, and others in the party will include Miss Mabel Strider, past president; Mrs. May Moyers McElroy, Miss Emma T. Hahm, Miss Clara McGrath, Dr. Edith Saville Coale.

The club had its regular luncheon yesterday with Chester Leasure, chairman of resolutions and referenda for the United States Chamber of Commerce, as the speaker—and one of the best on their season's program, say the members.

Visitation Convent Graduation Today

Commencement week at the Georgetown Visitation Convent starts off at 4 o'clock this afternoon with the graduating exercises, and this evening, at Sulgrave Club, the alumnae banquet will be held, with Mrs. Joseph Leiter, president of the association, presiding.

Tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, the forty-third annual meeting of the alumnae association will be held at the convent, Mrs. Leiter again presiding. The present officers will carry on for another two years, but five members of the executive committee are to be elected. Following this meeting the Sisters of the Visitation will give their customary luncheon for visiting alumnae members and the class of 1937. At this function Miss Nancy Ordway will be the toastmistress.

800 Attend Spring Luncheon Of District Hadassah Chapter

More than 800 were present yesterday at the annual spring luncheon of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah, Women's Zionist organization, in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel. Mrs. Epstein, first vice president of the national society, was speaker at the affair which was for the benefit of Youth Aliyah, the transportation of refugee children from Germany and Poland to Palestine.

Mrs. Raphael Turover, president of the Washington Chapter, presided, and presented her annula report, reviewing accomplishments of the organization. Mrs Epstein discussed the work being carried on by Hadassah in Palestine, especially with relation to caring for the European refugees to whom it offers a homeland.

After her address there was a musical fantasy, "The Sandman," written and directed by Mrs. David Kushner, in which members took part. Mrs. Kushner had the title role as the Sandman. The singers included Mrs. Herman Hertzberg, Mrs. Nathan Wallack and Miss Patricia Levin, and the dancers, Mrs. Herman Becker, Mrs. Samuel Becker, Mrs. Sylvan Belchman, Mrs. Alfred Bennett, Mrs. Louis Demko, Mrs. Maxwell Heirston, Mrs. Gus Merriman and Mrs. Frank Paley. Accompanists were Mrs. Maurice Bisgyer and Miss Henrietta Hallan. Costumes were in charge of Mrs. Harry Schwartz, stage management, Mrs. Zal Diamond, and lighting, Mrs. Lawrence Koenigsberger and Mrs. Albert Platt.

Guests of honor, in addition to Mrs. Epstein, were past presidents of the chapter and representatives of other Jewish women's organizations in the Capital. Among the latter was Mrs. Abram Simon, founder of the Jewish Sisterhood and wife of Rabbi Simon, of Eighth Street Temple. The past presidents included Mrs. Harry Sheiky, Mrs. David Alpher, Mrs. William Ogus, Mrs. Henry Oxenberg, Mrs. Leopold Freudberg and Mrs. John Saber.

Mrs. Hermann Koppleman, wife of Representative Koppleman, and Mrs. Henry Ellenbogen, wife of Representative Ellenbogen, also were honored guests. Officers of the organization seated at the president's table wre Mrs. Eydney Wiseman, Mrs. Paul Pearlman and Mrs. Fred Gechner, vice presidents; Mrs. Benjamin Madden, treasurer, and Mrs. Julius Wolpe, financial secretary; Mrs. Morris Bernstein, recording secretary, and Mrs. Charles Pilzer and Mrs. Edward Ostrow, auditors.

The committee in charge was headed by Mrs. I. E. Levinson,

Nippon Cabinet Reorganization Work Delayed

Former Banker Declines Finance Portfolio; 8 Places Filled.

Tokyo, June 2 (AP).—Prince Fumimaro Konoye struck a snag tonight in his efforts to form a cabinet, but observers predicted the difficulty would be overcome.

After the prince had chosen eight ministers, Kenji Kodama, former president of the Yokohama Specie Bank, declined the finance portfolio. It was expected the premier-designate would offer the post to Okinobu Kaya, vice minister of finance.

Three other ministries, foreign affairs, overseas affairs and commerce and industry, had not been filled.

Those who agreed to enter the cabinet were Count Rainei Arima, as minister of agriculture and forestry; Gen. Gen Sugiyama, war; Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai, marine; Chikuhei Nakashima, railways; Ryutaro Nagai, communications; Eiichi Baba, home; Yeiji Yasu, education, and Suehiko Shiono, justice.

The selection of Nakashima and Nagai was a shift from the policy of former Premier Senjuro Hayashi. They are members of the major political parties, Seiyukai and Minseito, respectively. The parties were not represented in Hayashi's cabinet and forced the resignation of his ministry Monday

It was generally forecast Prince Konoye tomorrow would ask Koki Hiroya, premier of the cabinet which resigned in January, to serve as foreign minister.

English Expert Tells League of Illicit Marketing.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, June 2.—T. W. Russell, an Englishman who is head of Egypt's Narcotics Intelligence Bureau, told the League of Nations opium committee today that 90 per cent of all illegally marketed narcotics in the world are of Japanese origin.

He asserted that of 500 kilograms (about 1,100 pounds) of one narcotic preparation shipped each week from Tientsin, China, 90 per cent goes to the United States.

Russell asserted narcotics for the illicit trade are manufactured in the Japanese concession in Tientsin! in Dairen, in Japan's Kwantung leased territory; in cities of Manchukuo, under Japan's protection, and other cities in China, but always under Japanese supervision.

From Dairen, he declared, thousands of letters containing narcotics are posted to the United States, Egypt and other countries.

In the Japanese concession in Tientsin, Russell said, 200 narcotics factories employ 1,500 Japanese experts and 10,000 Chinese workmen.

Describing conditions in Harbin, largest city of Manchukuo, Russell declared that during the last two years Japanese there have become addicts, especially officers and soldiers of the Japanese army dominating the country.

Masayuki Yokoyama, Japanese member of the committee, announced his government intends to do its best "to clear up this situation." He said the Japanese authorities are alive to the danger of increasing narcotics addiction among their own people.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, lumbago, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Fifteen grandmothers will engage 15 grandfathers . . . in an old-fashioned spelling bee come 9 o'clock tonight. You've had bees with barbers and beauticians, policemen and firemen, radio announcers and newspapermen, school boys and school girls, sororities and fraternities . . . but never, never has there been a grandmother-grandfather battle of words.

It all started when a group of Boston grandmas challenged the patriarchs of New York and promised to put away their knitting if grandpa would stop chewing his tobacco. The grandpas agreed and so now Paul King, conductor of the match, has his hands full.

Excess of Imports Higher Than in '36

The Commerce Department reported yesterday the United States bought $132,062,000 more of goods from foreign countries than it sold during the first four months of this year.

In the corresponding period of 1936 the excess of imports was only $13,241,000.

For the four months of this year, exports aggregated $980,897,000, an increase of $212,402,000 over the 1936 period. Imports, at $1,112,949,000, increased by $331,213,000.

Child Labor Goods Ban Now Law in New York

Albany, N. Y., June 2 (AP).—The sale of goods produced by the labor of children under 16 was banned in New York today by action of Gov. Lehman, who once termed such a proposal "impracticable" without Federal legislation.

He signed the Moffatt-Nunan bill barring child labor-made goods with the expressed hope that the present Congress will enact a method of Federal control of child labor "most susceptible of easy and rigorous enforcement."

Greatest Wheat Crop In 6 Years Forecast

Chicago, June 2 (U.P.).—Five crop experts and analysts tonight agreed that the American farmer will set a 6-year record with his 1937 harvest of winter wheat.

According to estimates, the winter wheat yield will be 649,000,000 bushels, more grain than has been reaped since 1931, and 130,000,000 bushels more than the 1936 harvest of 519,000,000 bushels.

Capital Boy Stops Pena in Seventh; 'Gate' Is $16,705

New York Boxer Victim of Left to Body; Alexandrian Impresses as McDonald Is Flattened in Third Round With Right to Chin.

By Bill McCormick.

Five smashing knockout punches sent the faces of five boxers into the rasin dust as the fourth annual police benefit fight card passed into history at Griffith Stadium last night before a crowd of 12,622 of the good burghers of Washington.

Four out of five scheduled ten-round encounters terminated in spectacular knockouts and even a four-rounder was ended by a soporific punch in the third round.

Lou Gevinson, former District amateur featherweight champion making his fifth professional start, stopped Johnny Pena, who won the decision in a previous engagement, in the seventh round.

Bob Tow, the Alexandria Adonis, knocked out Sandy McDonald, the Tall Texan, in the third round.

Ossie Stewart, a colored middleweight from Pittsburgh, applied the snore to Tom Chester, of New York, in the third round.

Abrams in Victory.

The gate receipts totaled $16,705, the smallest amount ever paid into the coffers for the Capital's yearly fistic fiesta dedicated to the coppers.

The card and operating expenses ran to approximately $8,000, so the Police Relief Association, for whose benefit Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn arranged the show, profited about the same amount on the card.

Lou Gevinson scored his knockout just in time to keep from ruining his prestige, which waned considerably when he was outpointed by Pena the first time they met. To all appearances, the trouncing handed Lou in their first fight had left the little Jewish southpaw very gunshy. Not only that, but Gevinson gave no indication of having learned anything at all about infighting—or how to block blows aimed at his brisket.

For six rounds and part of the seventh Pena handled Lou with comparative ease, setting the pace and digging both hands into the Gevison midriff. During this period Gevinson was able to land just enough jarring blows to the head to keep matters fairly even, but at this point his punches seemed to lack the steam and sting that has made Lou one of the most feared wallopers in the featherweight ranks.

There was no lack of steam or sting in the left hook that finally laid Pena low, however. Traveling not more than 6 inches, it sunk into Johnny's body clear up to the hilt.

Pena Goes to Floor.

Pena dropped like a wounded goose. Once on the canvas he flopped around like a fish on the shore, drawing his legs up in agony as he gasped for breath. For a moment those close to the ringside and familiar with the fight game thought a foul was to be claimed as Pena gave every outward indication of having been fouled.

Pena had not been fouled and made no such claim. Referee Charley Reynolds tolled off the ten count, which was completed after 1 minute and 14 seconds of the seventh round.

The crowd, which had given Gevinson a tremendous ovation when he entered the ring, sent it's idol back to his dressing room in a salvo of boos. Just why, nobody has been able to figure out, unless the spectators were disappointed in his rather poor showing up to the time that one degisive punch was flung.

Bob Tow, the unpredictable Alexandrian, continued his knockout winning streak by applying the snore in spectacular manner to Sandy McDonald, the Texas heavyweight who only a few weeks ago held Marty Gallagher to a draw. The knockout came after 1 minute and 50 seconds of the third round.

As early as the first round Tow opened a cut over McDonald's left optic and from then on he shoved poor Sandy about unmercifully. The second round was clearly Tow's as he belted McDonald with both hands and Sandy was able to land only one effective blow—a right to the head which shook Robert.

Tow paved the way for his knockout victory in the third round with a jarring right and left to the head, which spread a glaze over Sandy's eyes. While the eyes were glazing, Tow was ramming home a terrific right to the chin which sent McDonald to the floor so out that Referee Denny Hughes could have counted to 100 instead of the usual 10 without altering the official result.

Sandy was hauled to his corner by a cordon of hulk removers and his seconds worked over him for many minutes before he again opened his eyes.

Quarles Gets Decision.

Cowboy Howard Scott, District lightweight champion, was on the wrong end of what the crowd thought was a decidedly wrong decision, in another of the featured bouts. Referee Robert (Muggsy) Morris cast his ballot in favor of Scott, but Judge Frank Schuyler and O. U. Singer saw Quarles the victor.

The two fast and furious lightweights started slowly enough, but warmed up to streamlined speed by the fourth round. Quarles repeatedly staggered Scott with a snaky left hook and played an almost continuous tattoo on the ribs of the transplanted Oklahoman.

Scott, however, had Quarles reeling time after time with terrific right hands to the head, which Jack Dempsey's protege seemed unable to duck. In the last round, with both boys doing their best to end things by a knockout to preclude postfight arguments, Quarles smacked Howard so hard with a left hook that the cowboy's mouthpiece went sailing out of the ring. Scott retaliated with a right to the head, to even matters, but leave himself the winner, in the opinion of the assemblage.

Stewart K. O. Winner.

Ossie Stewart, Washington's favorite colored fighter at the moment, scored a third-round knockout over Tom Chester, another colored middleweight from New York City, in the first of five scheduled 10 rounders.

Chester was not a threat at any time. He entered the ring apparently filled with awe, but little else. He managed to stay erect for a couple of rounds, but was sent to the canvas in the third by a jarring right uppercut, followed by two other hard punches.

If the blows did not settle the matter decisively, the way he hit the floor did, and he was unable to pull himself up and Referee Eddie LaFond finished the necessary ten count after 1 minute 45 seconds.

Archibald Is Winner.

From almost the outset Archibald forced Ingram to fight just the way he decided. Instead of leading to Ray, who is at his best when counter-punching, Archibald lay in wait and nailed Ray with both hands as he came in.

Even in the opening rounds Archibald seemed to have opportunities for applying the knockout punch, but he bided his time and finally put on the finishing touches when Ingram had been completely softened up.

The doom of Ingram was sealed in the sixth round when Archibald drew blood from Ingraham's nose by rocking him back and forth was really in no shape to answer the bell for the eighth, but he did.

In the final round, Archibald tore in with both hands, sending Ray reeling about the ring and finally forcing him to drop half out of the ring. Ingram was up, but once again he was battered to the ground. This time Referee Charley Reynolds called a merciful halt and Archibald became the winner by a technical knockout after 1 minute 50 seconds of the seventh round.

Newsom, Hogan Swing Fists After Words in Nats' Dugout

By a Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, June 2.—Hot words were exchanged and fists were swung on the Washington club's bench this afternoon in a brief but torrid scuffle involving big Buck Newsom and burley Shanty Hogan.

Cooler heads among the Nats separated the pair of giants who a few minutes before had been battery mates in the game against the Detroit Tigers.

Newsom, batted out of the box in the seventh inning, took exception to a remark made by Hogan when the Nats went off the field at the end of the inning.

"You didn't have your fast one out there today, Buck," Hogan is reported to have said to Newsom.

The big pitcher, infuriated by his failure on the mound, resented Hogan's words. "That's my business," he said.

"Yes, and it's the team's business, too," came back Hogan. "When you haven't got it, it hurts us."

With the entire bench in an uproar, the two big fellows fell into a clinch and were pummeling each other furiously when their colleagues by dint of great effort pulled them apart.

The affair occurred while the Nats were at bat and Manager Bucky Harris, on the first-base coaching lines, witnessed the brawl only from a distance.

Noting the scuffling and quickly assuming that it concerned the hot-headed Newsom, Harris motioned Coach Earl McNeely to send the pitcher out of the dugout into the dressing room.

Tonight, neither Newsom nor Hogan would comment on their battle. But Manager Harris dismissed it lightly.

"Things like that are bound to happen on a ball club," said Harris. "They're he-men and they can't be sweet-dispositioned all the time.

"I've talked to both of them and I'm not taking any disciplinary action. I'm satisfied that it wouldn't have happened if they both hadn't wanted to win the game so keenly. It couldn't have happened if we had been doing well out there on the field. They lost their heads for a minute—that's all. They're both good fellows."

Home Run in Eleventh Gives Tigers 11-8 Win

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, June 2.—Into the misty nothingness beyond the confines of Navin Field sailed two home runs off the Tigers' an 11-inning ball game played in a blue haze and a continual threat of rain.

The generous thing to do would be simply to skip the painful details and relate merely that Washington's three-game winning streak came to an end by the figures of 11 to 8, but that would not be giving the Tigers their dues.

Because the Tigers came up fighting from beneath a seven-run deluge in the early innings that established the Nats in a 7-0 lead and tied the ball game as early as the seventh inning.

Tebbetts Cracks One.

The blow that crushed the Nats was delivered by young George Tebbetts, on whom has developed the Tigers catching duties since Manager Mike Cochrane's skull was fractured a week ago. The kid catcher came to bat with the score tied at 8-8, two out and two runners on base in the eleventh inning, with Joe Cascarella pitching for the Nats.

Cascarella had two strikes on Tebbetts when the young Tiger caught his next pitch on the business end of his yellow bat and walloped it over the leftfield wall as Outfielder Al Simmons, with his shoulder blades rubbing against the fence, dejectedly watched the ball disappear into the haze beyond.

Linke's Face Redder.

Back there in the seventh inning, the Tigers tied the ball game the storybook way. The venerable Goose Goslin, who, for 10 years, drew his pay from the Washington Club, came to bat with the bases full of Tigers and went away from there on a slow jog around the path after socking a line-drive homer beyond the right field barrier.

Four Detroit runs came cascading across the plate as red-faced Ed Linke's face turned even redder, and it was 7-7 and a new ball game.

It was a startling comeback for the Tigers, who had apparently tossed the game away with six errors behind Roxie Lawson in the early innings. Taking advantage of the Tigers' sandlot stuff in the field, the Nats gave Buck Newsom a 7-0 lead to work with, only to see that worthy begin to dissipate it in the fifth inning and finally retire in favor of Linke in the seventh.

But whereas the Nats had only the ineffective Linke and Cascarella to relieve Newsom during the late-inning stress, the Tigers had a talented young kid named George Coffman, brother of Dick Coffman, former Washington pitcher, to relieve Lawson. And one run off Coffman was the Nats' portion in the last six innings.

Nats Lead in Eleventh.

The fact is that Washington actually went to the front again in the eleventh inning, 8 to 7, when Ben Chapman and Buddy Myer drew walks and the run eventually scored on Johnny Stone's fourth hit of the day, a single to center. But old Jack Russell, another of the former Washington employes who apparently were ganging up on the Nats today, came in to stop that rally cold.

Then Cascarella, who had taken over the pitching in the tenth after Sid Cohen had gotten the Nats out of embarrassing situations in the eighth and ninth, proceeded to pitch the ball game away.

He pitched a fourth consecutive single to Gerald Walker—a line drive to leftfield—and then he pitched the same type of hit to Hank Greenberg, putting Walker on second. Then Goslin beat out a perfect bunt to Buddy Myer that filled the bases with one out, and matters looked sad indeed for the Nats.

But Buddy Myer grabbed up Marvin Owen's hot smash and turned it into a double play, relieving the situation a bit, although Walker scored from third with the tying run. Manager Harris ordered Pinchhitter Charley Gehringer walked, which left Cascarella with only Tebbetts to be disposed of for the third out.

You know how Cascarella disposed of Tebbetts.

Those six errors behind Lawson in the early innings were a horrible display by the Tigers. But Lawson was plenty guilty, himself. He pitched seven hits to the Nats during the three innings he lasted. A home run by Buddy Lewis marked Coffman's debut in the fourth, and Shanty Hogan boosted the Nats' lead to 7-0 in the fifth when his two-bagger to deep left scored Cecil Travis, who had been hit on the leg by Coffman.

And then the Tigers started to work on Newsom. They picked up a pair of runs in the fifth after Newsom walked two men, and they got another in the sixth when Owen doubled and Tebbetts singled. When Newsom began the seventh by walking Rogell and pitching a two-bagger to Walker, Harris got him out of there.

Linke's pitching debut was marked by a base on balls he issued to Greenberg, and Goslin arrived at the plate with a home run needed to tie the score. And that's what happened, as we said somewhere up above.

Adams School Trackmen Win Division Title

The last of the divisional meets in the annual track competition for elementary schools sponsored by the Department of Playgrounds was held yesterday at Western High stadium, when the schools of the Georgetown division met to compete for places in the city school meet to be held Saturday morning at Central stadium. It was the largest, as well as the final, of these sectional contests, over 700 boys taking part, representing 15 schools.

Diz Hurled Epithet in Club Speech

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 2—Jerome Herman ("Dizzy") Dean, suspended indefinitely today by President Ford C. Frick, of the National League, "for conduct detrimental to the best interests of baseball"—specifically "too much popping off"—must sign an apology on the dotted line before being restored to good standing.

"It's now strictly up to Dean as to whether his suspension lasts for 24 hours of three months," declared Frick after disclosing that an accumulation of statements, attributed to the ace pitcher of the St. Louis Cardinals, reflected too pointedly upon league officials and umpires.

The showdown will come tomorrow at 10 a. m. when Dean, accompanied by Frank Frisch, manager of the Cardinals, is scheduled for a conference with Frick in the National League offices.

"It's got down to a question of whether Dean is bigger than the National League," said Frick. "I don't think he is. This can all be settled quickly if Dean sees the error of his ways, frankly apologizes to the league for the things he has said or implied, and puts it in writing."

Dean Denies Remarks.

Dean suddenly became a man of few words after being notified of his suspension personally by Frick, who reached the pitcher in the clubhouse at Ebbets Field, shortly before the Cardinals engaged the Brooklyn Dodgers.

"If I had anything to apologize for I'd do it, but I didn't say any of the things Frick wants me to apologize for."

Frick explained that his summary action, climaxing a turbulent spring for the celebrated moundsman, was the direct result of statements attributed to Dean since the memorable "battle of Sportsman's Park" May 19 at St. Louis, where Carl Hubbell and the New York Giants gained a 4-1 decision over Dean in a game that ended in a ninth-inning riot.

Assails Frick.

Subsequently, Frick charges, Dean "popped off" about the alleged shortcomings of the National League in general and its president and umpires in particular. Dizzy was quoted as saying he would give $1,000 to the newspaperman who would print exactly what he (Dean) thought of Frick. He was quoted as saying he would not play for the league in this year's all-star game, if selected.

The climax, Frick revealed, came upon his receipt of a copy of the Belleville (Ill.) Daily Advocate of May 26, front-paging a story quoting Dean as saying "George Barr and Ford Frick are the 'two biggest crooks' in baseball today" in a talk before the father and sons dinner given by the Presbyterian Men's Club. The paper further quoted Dean as referring to Frick in these words: "Our great little president—and a pain in the neck to me."

"Dean absolutely denies he made these statements," said Frick, "and so far as they are concerned, I am willing to give him the benefit of the doubt. I am not so much concerned, however, with what he has to say about me, personally, as the fact that he has repeatedly talked too much out of turn."

"Time for Showdown."

"My action has not been based upon any single incident. Whether or not Dean has been altogether misquoted, the fact is he has been popping off and reflecting upon the honesty of baseball in general as well as the character of league officials. It's time we had a showdown.

"Personally, I have always liked Diz. He's a wonderful pitcher. I don't think he means a lot of the things he says, but the attitude he has taken, or implied, compels me to take disciplinary action."

Frick disclosed he suspended Dean only after fully acquainting

This Morning

POVICH.

He doesn't know what the odds are and he's never seen Jimmy Braddock throw a fist, but when Braddock crawls through the ropes at Chicago on the evening of June 22 to expose his title to the assault of Joe Louis, Al Simmons would like to risk a small sum that the champ will beat the Negro.

It's a dumb sort of faith in the guy that finds Simmons confident Braddock will emerge with his crown after the evening's hostilities with Louis. The Washington outfielder says he got to know Braddock as a swell fellow and is willing to take Jim's word for it that he can beat Louis.

"I was down there vacationing in Hot Springs early this year when Braddock was being treated for arthritis in his right hand," said Simmons, "and there's a great fellow for you. A real nice guy who gets right down to earth with you. No hokum.

* * * *

"He broke right down and told me he was lucky to be champion and knew it. But he said he was aiming to keep that title, and Joe Louis was one guy who wasn't going to take it away from him. He was dead serious about that, too—wasn't talking just to make an impression, or for publicity. Jimmy and I were out on the golf course, playing alone when he made those cracks."

* * * *

Braddock wasn't beating around the bush, either, when he told Simmons why he ran out on his fight with Max Schmeling and accepted the bout with Joe Louis instead.

* * * *

"Those long days on those Jersey City docks aren't too far behind me," said Braddock. "I don't ever want to make a living that way again. I want that big dough. Those kids at home need it. That Louis fight means twice as much at the gate as Schmeling could get me, especially with that Nazi boycott on in New York. I may have taken the toughest fight, but I'm looking out for those little Braddocks this time. And one more tough fight ain't gonna hurt me. I've had plenty of those."

* * * *

Simmons apparently was quite taken with Braddock. "You've got to be for a guy like that," said Al. "When he gets in there against Louis I'll be remembering one thing he told me. That's when he said, 'Here's one guy who won't be scared when that gong rings.' And I'll bet my life that Jimmy won't be scared.

* * * *

"Joe Gould, his manager, was telling me what a tough time Jimmy had of it when he started his come-back. He hadn't been doing well in his fights, and Gould couldn't get enough bouts to make it worth Jim's while to keep fighting. So Jimmy went to work over there on the Jersey docks, stevedoring.

* * * *

"And then Gould heard that they needed a substitute for one of the preliminary fights on the Max Baer-Primo Carnera card. Some heavyweight who was supposed to fight Corn Griffin got hurt a week before in a fight in a small club in New York and had to withdraw.

* * * *

"Gould hustled around and got the fight for Braddock. It wasn't much—only a couple hundred bucks—but it represented more

Track Mark Equaled by Timber Lady

Wins Feature Race at Charles Town; Daily Double Pays $135.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 2.—Equaling the track record for 4½ furlongs, Timber Lady, a trim little filly owned by W. A. Jones, scampered to victory today in the Jefferson Handicap, outstanding event on the midweek program here in the mountains. Pumped along by Jockey G. Terhune, Timber Lady defeated Small Change by a length and a half, with the favored Stool Pigeon third in the field of six.

Timber Lady ran the abbreviated route in 49 3-5 to match the record held by Energetic Lady, Titan Kiddie and Adriatic. The winner drew a steady backing and rewarded the faithful with a $5.80 mutuel.

Those in the crowd of 4,000 who bet the "three-eight" combination, representing Skeaboy and Miss Trycom, cashed a $135 daily double.

The feature race was a well-played event and most of the backing went to Timber Lady and Stool Pigeon, the latter a winner over Wise Sister here last Saturday. At the break, Timber Lady was away winging, but Stool Pigeon broke in a tangle. Small Change offered Timber Lady the most early contention and Stool Pigeon, once in the clear, gained sharply. However, in the drive neither Small Change nor Stool Pigeon could seriously menace the flying leader.

Sea Dove, owned by T. Presgrave, came within two-fifths of a second of matching the track record for the Charles Town course in the first race, while leading five others to the wire in the Purcellville Golf Club Purse. Ridden by Jockey Machado, Sea Dove was sent to the front soon after the break and saved ground all the way. Mahogany was second and Justa Jimmie third. Trostar, well played, lost all chance by stumbling at the break. The winner paid a $9.60 mutuel.

Skeaboy bounded out of the maiden ranks in the second race to the tune of a $19 mutuel. Piloted by M. Berg, Skeaboy took command with a rush and defeated, among others, Miss Wrack and Little Whisk. Canter Belle, heavily played favorite, was tangled with an assistant starter at the break and was away poorly.

Miss Trycom ran a "catch me if you can" race in the third event to bring her backers a $7.20 mutuel. Jockey M. Verbus did the riding and he led the mare home in front of Whiskora and Mabel Beyond. Tarheel, the favorite, was pulled up when shut off ta the break.

After small army of tips had bounced around the paddock, Miss Patches won the Jimmy Corcoran purse, the fourth race, just as she should have won. Halloo and Black Brigade chased the mare to the wire. Jockey R. Root rode the winner, a $9 betting proposition.

J. B. Belk's Way Out, under the guidance of Sammy Palumbo, led from start to finish in the fifth race. The filly tried to run out entering the final straightaway, but Palumbo straightened her and she pounded to the finish line a length and a quarter in advance of Royal Business, a $46 place bet. Frank Brooke, well backed, could do no better than third.

Claude Feltner's Jobakheta, a $4.60 favorite, won the Dorie Gruver Purse, better known as the seventh race. Bringing Jockey Machado his second winner of the day, the gelding led Crowded Hours and James Boy to the wire.

Charts of Yesterday's Charles Town Races—By Walter Haight

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 2, 1937.
WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, FAST.

FIRST RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:31½. Off at 2:32. Winner, T. Presgrave's br. g. (3), by Sea Rock—Sweeter Than. Trained by Claude Feltner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:17.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SEA DOVE, $9.60, $4.40, $3.00; MAHOGANY, $3.20, $2.60; JUSTA JIMMIE, $3.40.

SEA DOVE, sent to the front at once under hustling tactics, saved ground throughout and drew clear of MAHOGANY under intermittent punishment. MAHOGANY, slow to strike best stride, gained gradually to the stretch turn, but could not menace the winner in closing test. JUSTA JIMMIE showed a good effort. SUN BELLE dropped back after showing early speed. TROSTAR stumbled badly at the break.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:00½. Off at 3:02. Winner, Mrs. J. K. Keyser's b. g. (3), by Skeaboy—Prevalence. Trained by J. E. Keyser. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:51 3-5.

GOODWORTH	(Polk)	110	8	1	4½	5h	7h	83.60
TODY LAND	(Obert)	110	7	2	8	8	8	27.20

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SKEABOY, $19.00, $10.40, $7.00; MISS WRACK, $8.60, $4.40; LITTLE WHISK, $3.20.

SKEABOY, sent into contention on the inside approaching the turn, gained sharply when placed to a hard drive entering the stretch and drew out smartly in closing sixteenth. MISS WRACK, hard ridden throughout, set the pace and held on gamely. LITTLE WHISK, forwardly placed from the start, failed to threaten seriously after early stages. DUN LUCKY raced on outside. CANTER BELLE had no chance with the start. GOODWORTH had early speed. TODY LAND raced very wide into turns.

THIRD RACE—About 5 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:29½. Off at 3:32½. Winner, H. Scheel's br. m. (6), by Tryster—Comical II. Trained by H. R. Jenkins. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:00 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS TRYCOM, $7.20, $4.40, $3.60; WHISKORA, $6.60, $4.60; MABEL BEYOND, $13.20.

MISS TRYCOM outbroke her field, opened a good lead while swinging to save ground and easily drew far out in closing stages. WHISKORA chased the pacemaker throughout. MABEL BEYOND went forwardly and showed a good effort. BRIGHT GIRL could not threaten under strong handling. TAR HEEL was taken up when slightly blocked by GAKE leaving the gate and rallied mildly. The others were not prominent.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $135.00.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:48½. Off at 3:58½. Winner, Mrs. I. C. Mourar's b. m. (6), by Advocate—Rags. Trained by I. K. Mourar. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:21 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS PATCHES, $9.00, $3.60, $3.40; HALLOO, $3.20, $3.20; BLACK BRIGADE, $8.00.

MISS PATCHES shook off BLACK BRIGADE and BY SURPRISE to take command swinging for the stretch and drew clear under a drive. HALLOO, in close quarters to the backstretch, gained steadily when clear and closed gamely, but could not menace the winner. BLACK BRIGADE tired after setting the pace for a half. BALMACAN had early speed. NYACK showed flash of early speed.

FIFTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400. For 2-year-olds. Start poor from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:32½. Off at 4:34. Winner, J. B. Belk's b. f. (2), by Sir Walter—Bonie Way. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:50 4-5.

MARY ALLEN	(Polk)	109½	1	7	7	6h	6h	44.90
MERIDIAN TIME	(Root)	108	3	5	6h	7	7	14.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WAY OUT, $4.80, $4.40, $3.00; ROYAL BUSINESS, $46.00, $7.80; FRANK BROOKE, $2.60.

WAY OUT, in motion at the break, opened a good lead in the first furlong, attempted to run out entering the stretch, but was checked in time to hold ROYAL BUSINESS safe. The latter was hard ridden and staved off FRANK BROOKE when kept to punishment through the stretch. FRANK BROOKE lacked early speed and rallied mildly to driving tactics. TWO ACES tired badly after pressing the early pace SCHLEY BUCK and MERIDIAN TIME broke poorly.

SIXTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $800. The Jefferson Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:59½. Off at 5:01. Winner, W. A. Jones' br. f. (3), by Tall Timber—Upsetter. Trained by J. T. Harris. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:49 3-5. (Equals track record.)

JOHNNY BANE	(Welch)	106	5	6	5h	5½	5½	15.30
PRINCE TURLEY	(Berg)	116	1	3	6	6	6	4.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIMBER LADY, $5.80, $3.40, $2.20; SMALL CHANGE, $5.00, $2.60; STOOL PIGEON, $2.20.

TIMBER LADY, sent to the front under hustling tactics in the opening sixteenth, showed high speed while setting the pace and held away to the end. SMALL CHANGE, first out of the gates, was kept to hard drive and closed gamely. STOOL PIGEON, off poorly, was rushed into contention, but hung in the final drive. BROOKE HEROD had good speed to the stretch. The others had no excuses.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:33. Off at 5:36. Winner, Claude Feltner's ch. g. (5), by Sedgefield—Charlotte O. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:49.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JOBAKHETA, $4.60, $3.00, $2.80; CROWDED HOURS, $5.40, $3.60; JAMES BOY, $3.40.

JOBAKHETA, steadied along with the pace of EXAGGERATION, took command after a half and was kept to punishment to the end. CROWDED HOURS, shut off repeatedly while kept on the inside of the leaders, hung in the final drive. JAMES BOY, poorly handled, can go much better. DUNRITA ran out at the first turn while prominent. EXAGGERATION stopped.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:03. Off at 6:03½. Winner, S. B. Berry's b. m. (5), by Rustic—Fallacy. Trained by J. T. Harris. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:49 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY CIREK, $12.60, $6.20, $2.40; PORPHYRY, $3.40, $2.20; FIFE, $2.20.

LADY CIREK, off in front, saved ground throughout and was not seriously menaced. PORPHYRY saved much ground and rallied courageously when placed to a drive approaching the stretch. FIFE, poorly handled, taken up at the break, was steadied along while close to the leaders, was taken wide entering the stretch and closed fastest of all. COUNTER PASS closed some ground in the late stages.

Dean Suspended By League Head

Sam Breadon and Frank Frisch, president and manager of the Cardinals, with all the facts.

"I appreciate what such a step means to a pennant-contending club," admitted Frick. "Therefore I gave the situation fullest consideration before action so that there would be no misunderstanding at long range, or anything precipitate. I purposely waited until Dean came to town with the Cardinals before announcing my decision."

Dean had been quoted as saying one of the first things he would do, upon reaching New York, would be to call up Frick and "tell him just what I think of him."

Denies Florida Cause.

Frick, a New York sports writer before succeeding John A. Heydler as president of the National League in 1934, denied Dean's suspension had anything to do with the pitcher's troubles with sports writers during the training season in Florida.

Dean precipitated the "battle of Tampa," late in March, as an outgrowth of stories written by Jack Miley, columnist of the New York Daily News. Miley and Irving Kupcinet, of the Chicago Times, became embroiled with Dean and his mates in a Tampa hotel lobby.

Attending strictly to business, Dean won his first five starts this season, pitching sensationally, but has been beaten four times in his last five games. The Pirates knocked him out of the box and beat him twice. The Cubs and Giants each have one verdict over the lanky right-hander.

Dean a Storm Center.

Highest paid pitcher in the majors, at an estimated salary of $25,000, Dean has been a storm center ever since he became a Cardinal regular in 1932. The club has fined him three times for missing train connections and consequently failing to appear for exhibition games. One of these A. W. O. L. episodes cost Dizzy $486, including loss of seven days' pay and $36 for torn uniforms.

He was fined $100 by Commissioner Landis for failure to participate in a charity ball game at Chattanooga, Tenn., in October, 1935. He once went on a brief strike to force the Cardinals to increase Brother Paul's salary. That was in 1934. For a row on the bench with Joe Medwick at Pittsburgh in 1935, climaxing a series of incidents, Manager Frisch threatened Dean with suspension and a $5,000 fine.

New York, June 2.—The Pittsburgh Pirates increased their National League lead to two full games by beating the Boston Bees, 2 to 0, today. Cy Blanton pitched six-hit ball to score his sixth victory of the year.

The brothers Waner figured in both the Pirate tallies. Paul singled in the first and went around on one-base blows by Caughan and Suhr. Lloyd's long single in the second brought home Young, who had doubled.

The second-place Giants were halted by the Chicago Cubs, who registered their seventh straight win, 2 to 1. Singles by Herman and Collins, a two-bagger by Demaree and an infield out gave the Cubs both their runs in the fourth off Harry Gumbert.

The Brooklyn Dodgers moved within a half game of the first division when they defeated St. Louis' Cardinals, 6-2. Van Mungo turned back the Redbirds with seven hits. Heinie Manush led the ten-hit Brooklyn attack on two Card hurlers.

In the cellar series between Cincinnati and Philadelphia, the Reds came out on top, 8-4. Four Philly pitchers were solved for a dozen hits, including a home run by Ernie Lombardi.

The leading New York Yankees increased their American League margin to four games by walloping the second-place Cleveland Indians, 8-4. Red Ruffing scattered seven hits for his fourth straight victory. One of them was a home run by Hal Trosky.

Local Women Golfers Beat Southerners

Richmond Team Scores Only 2½ Points in Rout; Miss Kincaid Has 86.

Scoring a clean sweep in five of the eight matches played, Washington linkswomen defeated an invading team from Richmond, 20½ to 2½, yesterday at Congressional. It was the local women's second intercity victory of the year.

Mrs. Phillips and Mrs. Rutledge, of the Southerners, halved the match with Mrs. Legg and Mrs. Sutton for the visitors' only even break of the day. Miss Ellen Kincaid, with an 86; Mrs. R. C. Welton, of Richmond, with an 88, and Mrs. Y. E. Booker, with an 89, paced the scorers. The winners will pay a return visit in September.

Maury Nee to Captain Georgetown Golf Team

Maurice Nee was elected captain of Georgetown University's 1038 golf team. Nee, a junior, will lead one of the most promising teams in the school's history, including Billy Dettweiler, Harvey Johnson, Billy Shea, and others. The Hoyas were runners-up to Yale in the Eastern League this year and were undefeated outside the league.

Nee also starred at end on the Georgetown football team, blocking the kick that defeated Maryland University in the last quarter. He holds numerous local golf titles and formerly starred for Georgetown Prep.

New York Ring Commission Blow-Up Expected Today

By Jack Cuddy.
Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

New York, June 2 (U.P.).—A battle royal among the three members of New York State's Boxing Commission will be substituted tomorrow for the world heavyweight title fight between Champion James J. Braddock and Max Schmeling—slated for tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden Bowl.

This commissioners' conflict will occur immediately after the weighing-in of Schmeling at 1 p. m., it was learned authoritatively tonight. And the encounter threatens to be so torrid that it may result in the disruption of the commission—in the resignation of one or two of the fistic fathers.

Braddock and Schmeling are contracted to fight 15 rounds at the bowl tomorrow night, with the heavyweight crown at stake. But Champion Braddock will not keep the engagement. He is training for his bout with Joe Louis, in Chicago, on June 22.

What action shall be taken against Braddock tomorrow? That is the major question about which the commission battle will revolve. And what action shall be taken against Promoter Mike Jacobs, who has both Louis and Schmeling under contract, and is understood to be interested in the Chicago fight promotion.

The three commissioners are in violent disagreement as to what should be done. It is understood that one insists that Braddock's title should be vacated and that Promoter Jacobs' New York license should be revoked. At least one of the others is determined that only Braddock be suspended.

Meanwhile, other developments on the eve of the phantom fight were:

(1) Jack Doyle, Broadway betting commissioner, announced that Schmeling was the 1,000-to-1 favorite;

(2) A small band of workmen were hammering away at the Garden's Long Island Bowl erecting the ring for the fight;

(3) Garden officials announced that they were confident of a ruling in Philadelphia's U. S. Court of Appeals tomorrow which would stymie the Chicago fight;

(4) Schmeling took a mental workout by watching the fight movie "Kid Galahad" and then broadcast in German to Germany;

(5) The Garden continued to offer tickets for sale, but were selling virtually none.

Freddie Steele Is Sought for Williams Bout Here July 20 Under Variety Club's Promotion

Commission Authorizes Card; Champion Is Interested.

By Bill McCormick.

Sponsored by The Washington Post, the Variety Club will promote a massive benefit boxing show at Griffith Stadium July 20, which, it is hoped, will bring to Washington World Middleweight Champion Freddie Steele, or some other great champion.

The boxing card, which has been authorized by the District Boxing Commission, will be conducted on a nonprofit-making basis, with all receipts except actual operating expenses going into the Variety Club's welfare fund. The Variety Club is a theatrical organization embracing all show people in Washington, Maryland and Virginia. The welfare fund is recognized by the Government as being strictly for charity and, for that reason, it is exempt from Federal taxes.

The particular moneys raised by this promotion will be used to establish a summer camp to which under-privileged children and their mothers will be sent.

Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Baseball Club, has donated his Griffith Stadium in keeping with the general policy of saving all the proceeds for the charity involved.

Promoter Joe Turner, head of the fistic firm of Turner and Goldie Ahearn, whose equipment will be used, will co-operate in handling seating and other arrangements at the stadium. The combined Turner-Ahearn forces will assist in the sale of tickets. They will have no part in making the matches or the fight's promotion.

Steele, generally considered the best fighter in any weight division today, has evinced interest in the show. Through his manager, Dave Miller, he has let it be known that there is a possibility of securing his services. It is probable that a representative of The Washington Post will fly to Tacoma, Wash., within a few days to attempt to settle the matter with the champion.

Steele's opponent, if the middleweight titleholder agrees to fight here, will be Charles (Hobo) Williams, who is without peer in local middleweight ranks. In some 25 fights, Williams has defeated every fighter he has met in the 160-pound division, most of them by knockouts.

Because suitable middleweight opponents could not always be secured, Williams frequently has been forced to step as much as two divisions out of his weight class.

As a lightweight, Williams fought three times against Russell (Buddy) Scott, generally considered the best 175-pounder in these parts. Twice the result was a draw and once Scott won the official decision. Williams' last fight here was against Scott and although the official deciders voted the result a draw, most of those present conceded Williams a clear edge.

Williams, at present, is camping out in New England. He has indicated that he is ready to accept any terms for the privilege of swapping swats with the champion.

"Charley has been knocking over all the fairly good middleweights they tossed at him," said his manager, Harry Groves, yesterday, when the matter of the bout with Steele was broached. "He has been begging for some real outstanding middleweight opposition, which no one has seen fit to bring in. He'll take Steele on ten minutes' notice, and name your own price. If he gets the shot at Steele, Washington will have the uncrowned middleweight champion."

Eastern promoters have been successful in bringing Steele East only once in the past. Last winter Promoter Mike Jacobs, of New York, the impresario who arranges all of Joe Louis' bouts, after much bargaining succeeded in luring Freddie into New York, where he enjoyed a highly successful season. His last fight in the East was against Paul Pirrone, whom he stopped in one round in Philadelphia.

After the Pirrone fight, Steele returned to Washington, where he was matched to fight Ken Overlin, who was born in Decatur, Ill. Overlin was forced out of the match by an attack of yellow jaundice and Frankie Battaglia, of New York, was substituted. Steele stopped Battaglia in the fifth round. Overlin, unable to get in shape to carry out his contract to fight Steele, has returned to Decatur, where he is now.

Welsh, Mitchell in Semifinals; Former Is Pressed to Advance

By John R. Vosburgh

Barney Welsh and Dooley Mitchell sailed into the semifinals of the City of Washington men's tennis championships yesterday, but Barney struck a slight squall in the first set of his 7—5, 6—1 victory over Ray Stocklinski.

Dooley had clear going in his 6—2, 6—3, workout with Allen Blade, the Edgemoor Club, scene of the tournament. The other two semifinal berths will be decided today, when Tony Latona, seeded No. 3, encounters Allie Ritzenberg, unseeded, at 10:30 a. m., and Tom Moorhead, of the Chevy Chase Club, also unseeded, meets Frank Shore, seeded No. 5, at 3:30.

Stocklinski, finalist in last year's Public Parks tournament, had two set points in the first set before Welsh, defending champion, fought him off. At 5—3 on Barney's service, Ray led 40—15. On the next point he hit outside behind a forcing shot by Welsh and then Banrey cracked over a stinging placement.

From this point, Barney was never in serious danger, reeling off the next 2 points for the game, breaking Ray's delivery to deuce the match and running out the next two games for the set. Faced with set point, Barney finally recovered from a streak of wildness and in the next set was finding his shots force Stocklinski all over the court.

Blade kept pace with Mitchell for 1—1 in the first set and then dropped to 5—1 before taking another game. Dooley ran up a 5—0 lead in the second set and then lost the next three as Blade lifted able lobs and volleys which broke up Dooley's runaway.

Two semifinal matches in the doubles will be played today. Through a misunderstanding, Harry Heffner and Davie Johnsen, young doubles stars, were yesterday reported beaten by Fred Doyle and Joe Baker, whereas, in reality, they won over the seeded team in straight sets. Today Heffner and Johnsen face Mitchell and Howard at 5:15 p. m.

In the other semifinal, Welsh and Latona face Stan McCaskey and Capt. Stanley Robinson at 5:30 p. m. Welsh won the event last year, paired with Ralph McElvenny, now abroad.

Mrs. Miller's Mid-Day Sun Wins in Derby

100-7 Shot First Victor in Historic Race With Woman Owner.

By the Associated Press.

Epsom Downs, England, June 2.—Midday Sun, a tough wiry outsider, pounded out turf history on the sun-baked Downs today as he came from behind to win the 158th Derby in the claret silks of the little-known Mrs. G. B. Miller.

As the bay son of Solario, lightly regarded at 100 to 7, turned back the bid of 20 other 3-year-olds, including William Woodward's favored American-bred Perifox, the name of a woman was written in the Derby history book for the first time since England's most famous flat race was inaugurated in 1780.

Filly Won in 1918.

Lady James Douglas' Gainsborough, sire of Gainsborough Lass, the only filly in today's race, won in 1918 but the stake was run over the easier Newmarket course that year and British turf experts declined to regard it as a "real" Derby.

Further Derby history was supplied when Sandsprite, a 100-to-1 shot, finished second, a length and a half back, for another woman, Mrs. F. Nagle. Still another length and a half back in third place came the Aga Khan's Le Grand Duc, seeking the wealthy Indian potentate's fourth Derby victory at odds of 100 to 9.

The Aga Khan's standard bearer just managed to save third money by a neck from Perifox, the son of America's famous Gallant Fox, which went postward as cofavorite with Lord Astor's Cash Book at 7 to 1.

Wins $350,000.

In addition to gaining recognition as the first woman to win the mile and a half classic, Mrs. Miller, whose modest stable contains only one other horse, also saw her personal fortune leap by close to $250,000. The victory was worth approximately $50,000, while the value of Midday Sun, purchased for $15,000 as a 2-year-old, was figured to have jumped to four times that amount.

Mrs. Miller will divide the spoils with her mother, the widow of Maj. John A. Talbot. They purchased the modest stable together. Mrs. Miller scarcely needs the prize money, as she recently inherited a fortune of $2,500,000 from her great-uncle.

Boxer Is Suspended.

Chicago, June 2.—Varias Milling, Los Angeles Filipino featherweight boxer, was suspended for one year by the Illinois State Athletic Commission today for failure to prove charges that he was instructed to "throw" his fight with Billy Marquart, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, at the Marigold Gardens May 3.

Riggs Advances In Net Event

Hartford, Conn., June 1 (AP).—Robert Riggs, young Los Angeles ace, advanced to the third round of the New England tennis championships today by a default and a straight set victory over Sam Shore, of New York, whom he defeated 6—1, 6—4.

The sure-stroking Walter Senior of San Francisco, gained the quarter-finals with a 6—0, 6—3 victory over John Massena, of Pelham, N. Y., and a 6—2, 6—1 triumph over

Wheat Slumps On Forecasts Of Large Crops

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 2.—Forecasts suggesting 40 per cent increase of North America's 1937 wheat crop compared with last year smashed wheat values wildly downward today hereand at Winnipeg.

The maximum overnight loss on wheat in Chicago was 3¾ cents a bushel, and at Winnipeg 4½ cents, but from today's top price level the extreme fall was 4½ cents here and 5⅞ at Winnipeg. Relatively greater drop of prices in the Canadian market did much to accelerate the tumble of prices here, but something of a rally ensued just at the last, a full cent in Winnipeg and about ½ cent her.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 2¾ to 3½ cents under yesterday's finish, July 1.10½@1.10⅝, September 1.09⅝@1.09¾, December 1.10¾@1.10⅞, corn ⅝ off to 1⅛ up, July 1.22¾@1.22⅞, September 1.09⅜@1.09⅝, December 79⅞, oats showing 1 cent to 1¼ decline, July 43⅜, and rye down 2⅜ to 2¾ cents. Provisions results varied from 5 cents setback to 10 cents advance.

Armco Declares 50 Cents on Common

New York, June 2 (AP).—American Rolling Mill Co. declared a dividend today of 50 cents on the common stock payable July 15 to stock of record June 15. In the previous quarter a dividend of 30 cents was paid.

G. M. Verity, chairman of the board, stated the increased dividend was the result of higher earnings in the first quarter and good future prospects. American Rolling Mill Co. is a leading manufacturer of steel and iron sheets with principal plants located at Ashland, Ky., Middletown and Zanesville, Ohio, Butler, Pa., and Kansas City, Mo.

The Market

Stocks Improve Slightly in Exceptionally Dull Trading; Wheat Breaks on Forecasts.

New York, June 2.—Stocks improved a shade in the smallest dealings since April 3, 1935, at around 550,000 shares. Prices were at the best in the early business with the steel, metal, rail and oil groups leading. Commodities were mixed. September wheat closed 3 cents down at 109⅝ cents a bushel.

Even a day's time was enough to calm to a certain extent the fears of a general war as a result of the recent Spanish episodes. Information from the other side received in Wall Street indicated that apprehension in London and on the Continent is less than here. The situation is summed up as being a case of two dictators with inferiority complexes beating their chests.

While the unpredictable maneuvers of dictatorship in Europe are serving to keep the world in more or less suspense, the position over here, on other grounds, is not much more certain. The more President Roosevelt's latest blast at tax "dodgers" is studied the more foggy the whole business outlook becomes. What most people in this part of the country wish to see is sincere work toward reduction of useless Government expenditures. Were that done there would be no need for an outcry against rich men who do not pay as much taxes as the Government thinks they are morally bound to do.

The Government seems disinclined to cut its spending, and probably is afraid of the political effect of putting taxation into the low enough incomes to affect the body of voters. It has the undistributed profits tax law, which is unsound to begin with, and which yields a return much below the estimates of the Administration, based on the supposition that only rich men owned dividend-paying stocks. What the markets are most concerned with is the plain indication of the President's message that the old animosity is still there, and that if we are having a breathing spell it is of the cat and mouse variety.

Gold.

On another count Wall Street's anxiety was less marked. Few believe the stories that an agreement to stabilize the price of gold was about to be made by the parties to the three nation exchange stabilization contract, but at the same time fewer thought that any reduction in the gold price was an early possibility. Foreign money is coming over here now in large quantity, or at least much of it is money formerly held abroad in the form of hoarded gold. It is fear money, getting out of gold because of the rumors of a price cut and taking refuge in dollars because, were the price of gold to be reduced, dollars would appreciate. At the same time a mild revival of British buying of American securities was noticed in some quarters. The amount was not large, but it was considered significant that a rainbow had been sighted.

On the trade side, the foreign trade figures for April finally appeared and, as usually, showed an excess of imports. That in itself must be expected for a creditor country, but the fact continues unfavorable that we are buying largely of that which we can produce the most efficiently, namely, wheat, corn and meat, and are handicapped by our high production costs in our exports of manufactured goods. Railroad traffic, according to car loadings figures for principal roads covering last week, seems to have increased.

Banking Position.

Expansion in deposits and in reserves, particularly in the New York and Chicago district, was the feature of the condition report of member banks in 101 cities. There was also a rise of $44,000,000 in "commercial, industrial and agricultural loans," of which $25,000,000 was the New York City banks' share. Moderate decreases were reported in Government securities, which were down $6,000,000, guaranteed obligations, which were off $3,000,000, and other securities, which were $15,000,000 lower. The increase in demand deposits adjusted was $103,000,000. The gain in New York was $98,000,000 and the rise in Chicago was $35,000,000, while Philadelphia banks reported a deposit loss of $43,000,000. Time deposits rose $17,000,000, all the increase being in this city. Balances of domestic banks went down $83,000,000, but there was an interesting rise of $26,000,000 in foreign bank deposits to $553,000,000 a new high record.

Russian Funds.

Foreign bank deposits have been rising steadily in recent weeks, the increase having coincided with heavy sales of Russian gold in the London market. Some commentators have assumed that one object of the Russian gold exports was to build up a large dollar balance in New York and the figures on expanding foreign bank deposits here give color to that view. In so far as that money were held here for possible purchase of war supplies, it scarcely would be considered "hot" in the Rooseveltian sense.

Brokers' Loans Drop $35,066,396 in May

New York, June 2 (AP).—Borrowings on collateral by members of the New York Stock Exchange declined $35,066,396 last month, a report made public by the exchange today showed.

Total borrowings at the close of business May 29 were $1,152,212,988 compared with $1,187,279,384 on April 30. Money borrowed on United States Government securities, included in the latest figures, was $31,336,550 against $34,256,450 a month before.

8,433,000 More at Work Than in 1933

New York, June 2.—The number of persons employed in the United States rose from 41,193,000 in February to 41,698,000 in March, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. With the exception of last December when the employment figure was 41,916,000 as the result of the temporary seasonal expansion of retail trade, the March figure was the highest for the recovery movemnt.

There were 2,634,000 more people employed in March than in the same month last year and 8,433,000 more people employed than at the low for the depression in March, 1933, when the number employed was only 33,265,000. As compared with the employment of 44,162,000 persons in March of the pre-depression year 1929, the March, 1937, figure was smaller by only 2,464,000 persons.

Despite this relatively small decrease from the pre-depression employment figure, there were still 9,621,000 persons unemployed in the United States in March of the present year. This comparatively large unemployment figure is accounted for by the fact that a considerable number of people were unemployed in 1929 and that there has been a substantial increase in the supply of workers since 1929 as the result of the gain in population.

In March, 1929, there were 3,951,000 persons unemployed. Since then the supply of workers has been increase by 3,206,000 persons, making a total of 7,157,000 persons available for employment in excess of the number employed in March, 1929.

Since, in March, 1937, there were 2,464,000 fewer persons employed than in March, 1929, the total number of unemployed persons this year was 9,621,000.

Midwest Piping Offered Today

Francis, Bros. & Co., of St. Louis, and Mackubin, Legg & Co., of Baltimore, are offering at $11 a share 60,000 shares of no par value common stock of Midwest Piping & Supply Co., Inc. The underwriters have an option for one year to purchase at $11 a share an additional 20,000 shares from the company. Proceeds of the financing will be used to repay a $280,000 collateral and mortgage note and bank and other loans to redeem the 780 shares of preferred stock now outstanding and to provide additional working capital.

Upon completion of the financing, outstanding capitalization of the company will consist exclusively of 193,140 shares of common stock out of 500,000 shares authorized. Consolidated net income of the company for the 12 months ended February 28, 1937, after all charges and provision for income taxes, was reported as $225,273.

Retail Advertising 3.9% Over Year Ago

Chicago, June 2.—For the week ended May 22 retail display advertising in newspapers in 77 important cities was 848,391 lines or 3.9 per cent greater than in the corresponding week of last year, Advertising Age, national advertising newspaper, reported today.

During the reported period newspapers in the measured cities carried a total of 22,216,470 lines against 21,368,079 lines in the compared 1936 week.

Federal Home Loans At New High Record

A new high in outstanding net advances by the 12 Federal Home Loan Banks, as of May 22, was reported here yesterday by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. A total of $151,722,243 compares with $150,641,531 on May 15.

During the week ended May 22, advances to the System's member savings and loan associations were $2,321,537, and repayments were $1,240,826.

85 Combat Planes Ordered by Army

Railroad Net Rises to 2.89% In 1st Quarter

Compares With 2.18% in Same Period of Last Year.

Class I railroads of the United States in the first four months of 1937 had a net railway operating income of $193,982,091 which was at the annual rate of return of 2.89 per cent on their property investment, according to reports filed by the carriers with the Bureau of Railway Economics of the Association of American Railroads and made public yesterday.

In the first four months of 1936, their net railway operating income was $145,936,803 or 2.18 per cent on their property investment, and in the first four months of 1930, their net railway operating income was $233,942,444 or 3.51 per cent on property investment.

Property investment is the value of road and equipment as shown by the books of the railways including materials, supplies and cash. The net railway operating income is what is left after the payment of operating expenses, taxes and equipment rentals but before interest and other fixed charges are paid.

This compilation as to earnings for the first four months of 1937 is based on reports from 138 Class I railroads representing a total of 235,770 miles.

Gross operating revenues for the first four months of 1937 totaled $1,382,997,566 compared with $1,221,113,269 for the same period in 1936, and $1,761,623,106 for the same period in 1930, an increase of 13.3 per cent in 1937 above 1936, but 21.5 per cent below 1930.

Operating expenses for the first four months of 1937 amounted to $1,026,101,346 compared with $939,203,524 for the same period in 1936, and $1,370,341,285 for the same period of 1930. Operating expenses for the first four months of 1937 were 9.3 per cent greater than in the same period of 1936, but 25.1 per cent below 1930.

Twenty Class I railroads failed to earn expenses and taxes in the first four months of 1937, of which six were in the Eastern District, one in the Southern District, and 13 in the Western District.

Hooker, president of the Hooker Electrochemical Co., was elected chairman of the National Industrial Conference Board for the ensuing year at its twenty-first annual meeting, held in the Waldorf-Astoria. John Henry Hammand, of Hines, Rearick, Dorr & Hammond was elected honorary chairman of the board.

Dr. Virgil Jordan continues as president and chief executive of the conference board. The following vice chairmen were elected:

Irenee duPont, director, E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co., Wilmington, Del.; E. Kent Hubbard, president of the Manufacturers Association of Connecticut, Hartford, Conn.; Walter J. Kohler, chairman, Kohler Co., Kohler, Wis.; W. Gibson Carey, jr., president, Yale & Towne Manufacturing Co., New York City.

Fred I. Kent, director of the Bankers Trust Co., was re-elected as treasurer of the board.

Cuban Sugar Exports At Peak for 6 Years

New York, June 2.—The heaviest export movement of Cuban sugars since the week of August 1, 1931, is reported in a cable to Lamborn & Co., which states that the shipments for the week ending May 29, 1937, aggregated 110,119 long tons of raw sugar.

Of this quantity 78,686 tons went to the United States, 25,934 tons to the United Kingdom, 3,000 tons to Belgium and 2,499 tons to Switzerland.

Air Travel Rises 5.5% Over Year Ago

New York, June 2.—The Indicator for revenue passenger miles in air transport for April, 1937, stands at 105.5, or 5.5 per cent improved over the corresponding period in 1936, according to the June issue of Aviation.

For March the Indicator stood at 107.

Colorado Fuel & Iron Buys Two Companies

Oakland, Calif., June 2 (AP).—The Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. has purchased the Pacific Steel & Wire Co. and the California Wire Cloth Co.

The Rockefeller-held Denver company was reported to have paid more than $1,400,000 for the properties.

Small Curb Gains In Light Trading

New York, June 2 (AP).—Fractional gains predominated in brisk trading on the curb exchange today. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. commanded some interest closing up 3 points at 89. The management of this company recently announced it would repurchase from employes their stock at $90 a share. Following the Supreme Court's decision on the Louisiana chain store tax bill, A. & P. shares took a sudden dip.

Wayne Pump closed at 46½, up 1⅜, and trading was fairly active in Sherwin Williams which registered a ½-point gain, closing at 126. Oils were generally inactive with the exception of Creole Petroleum which gained a point, closing at 34¾, and Pantepec Oil, which climbed to 8⅜, up ¾. Gulf Oil and International Petroleum slumped fractionally.

Small interest was discernible in utility and mining shares in line with the general dullness that prevailed during the day. Volume was smaller than Tuesday's transfers, dropping to 157,000 shares, compared with 210,000 on the preceding day.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

burdened music room was to come the duke, tanned, smiling and boyish looking at 43. With him were to be his best man and equerry, Maj. Edward Dudley Metcalfe, both in cutaways and striped trousers.

Then was to come the bride, a prayer book clasped in her hand instead of the usual bride's bouquet, dressed in an ensemble of white crepe dress with flowers printed in black and very full sleeves of elbow length.

The rotund, bespectacled Doctor-Mayor Charles Mercier, of Monts, was to step forward and begin the civil service, requiring 20 minutes.

Then, according to the tradition of France, Mayor Mercier was to give his lecture on marriage, previously submitted to the duke for approval.

The religious ceremony was to follow, complete, and including the bride's promise to obey.

The couple had given up hope of obtaining an Anglican pastor until the Rev. Mr. Jardine announced his impending arrival by telephone last night.

A wedding breakfast was to be served on the terrace if the weather permits. Edward and his duchess; her aunt, Mrs. D. B. Merryman; Maj. Metcalfe and his wife, Lady Alexandra Metcalf; Herman L. Rogers, spokesman-friend of the newlyweds; and Mayor Mercier and the Rev. Mr. Jardine were to be at the table of honor.

The wedding breakfast will be at 12:45, immediately after which the duke and duchess will depart by automobile to board a special car on an Austrian-bound train—to a three-month honeymoon at Wasser-Leonburg, the "fairy castle" they have rented.

Chairs were placed for 35 guests in the library off the music room, and guests will include servants and former employes of Edward.

Only two representatives of the British government, which withheld official recognition of the marriage, were invited and they will come unofficially.

They are Hugh Lloyd Thomas, first secretary of the British Embassy at Paris, and William Cumming, British consul at Nantes.

No member of Edward's family was to be present. His brothers, his sister and mother are in England, prevented from attending, it was believed, by the British government's desire to concentrate empire attention upon King George VI and to withdraw it from the abdicated Edward.

Only 8 at Civil Rites.

Only eight persons were to be in the salon during the civil ceremony besides Mayor Mercier and the bride and bridegroom, Rogers said. They were to be Rogers as witness for Mrs. Warfield, Maj. Metcalfe for the Duke, Mrs. Bedaux, hostess of the chateau, and five newspapermen.

Mrs. Warfield's wedding ring was to be used twice—once for the civil and again for the religious rite. The altar, Rogers said, was fashioned from an oak chest, covered with white linen.

Edward broke tradition today by furnishing a beige velvet cloth for a table before which the civil service was to be read—French custom calls for a green cloth. The one used tomorrow will be presented to Mayor Mercier for the Monts Town Hall.

The whole chateau bustled today with last-minute preparation for the historic wedding—a wedding which the British empire would not permit while Edward remained its king.

Flowers were strewn about in abundance. There were tea roses from the chateau grounds, hyacinths specially brought from the Riviera.

Edward Happy.

Edward dashed about today, helping to move furniture to make way for the wedding party, whistling, and apparently supremely happy. However, he would not permit the chef to top off the wedding cake with a crown. Frosted roses will be provided instead.

The duke was said to be especially cheered because the Rev. Mr. Jardine had volunteered at the last minute to give the religious blessing.

The English pastor telephoned Edward last night, briefly: "I am coming down to marry you."

True to his word, he stepped on to the railway platform at Tours this morning, taxied out to the chateau, lunched with the duke and Mrs. Warfield, and then returned to Tours for the night.

"I knew both the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Warfield strongly desired a religious ceremony. When I made my offer, it was accepted by the duke," he explained. "It was voluntary on my part."

Church Calls Rites "Sham."

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

London (Thursday), June 3.—The Church of England, defied by an obscure vicar in its attempts to "outlaw" the wedding of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield, warned angrily today that religious ceremony will be a mere sham.

There was talk among Anglican bishops of excommunication of the duke, who less than six months ago was titular head of their church.

The church's warning came after the Rev. Robert Anderson Jardine, middle-aged "poor man's parson" from Yorkshire, arrived at the Chateau de Cande at Monts, France, and announced he would marry the duke and the twice-divorced Mrs. Warfield in ceremony of the church.

This eleventh-hour surprise astonished dignitaries of the Church of England, from the venerable Archbishop of Canterbury, in Lambeth Palace, down to vicars of the smallest parishes.

The Bishop of Fulham, the Right Rev. Basil Staunton Batty, who has jurisdiction over the Anglican church in France, conferred with his superiors and the archbishop and sent a telegram to Monts, informing Jardine that he was "without Episcopal license or consent" to perform the marriage.

Ecclesiastical experts said the telegram was a blunt warning that the Church of England would never recognize the wedding of the "world's most famous lovers" as a Church marriage.

Pardine, they said, was a "presbyter vagans" or "wandering priest" who carried no authority from the Church.

The telegram was designed to provide warning that Jardine at today's ceremony is entitled to say prayers but has no power to convey the Church's blessing or pronounce the duke and his American-born fiancee man and wife.

Church leaders admitted that the Archbishop of Canterbury, bitter critic of the "unchristian" romance of the man who was king, had no power to ban the participation of Jardine in the ceremony.

Church Lacks Authority.

The Church has no authority over ceremonies in private homes.

The Bishop of Fulham disclosed that the Church, which was largely responsible for forcing Edward's abdication last December 10 when he insisted on making Mrs. Warfield his wife, had warned all its clergymen on the continent they might be asked to officiate.

All of them were said to have promised they would "loyally refuse" if approached.

Church of England authorities said today that, in the case of marriages involving divorced persons, the only change in the religious ritual is the usual omission of the phrase "until death do us part."

A clergyman may, however, if he is "impressed with the character of the parties" and is convinced the marriage will last, include the phrase in the service.

Church of England clergymen at the British Embassy in Paris and in Paris' Anglican churches all were warned against marrying the duke and Mrs. Warfield.

Castle in Readiness.

Wasserleonburg, Austria, June 2 (U.P.).—Quaint, old Wasserleonburg Castle, turned into a honeymoon retreat, was ready tonight to receive the Duke of Windsor and the woman who tomorrow will become his wife.

The Duke of Windsor and his bride will come here immediately following their wedding tomorrow morning at Monts, France.

Here in the beautiful Gail Valley, dotted with peaceful villages embedded in green, the King who never was crowned and the American divorcee will spend their honeymoon.

The honeymoon retreat dates back to the thirteenth century but workmen in recent weeks have equipped it with modern fixtures. The royal suite has been done in "Wallis blue," according to Edward's personal instructions.

Faces Julian Alps.

Wasserleonburg Castle is located 5 miles from the Italian border, and faces the rough, bare peaks of the Julian Alps.

Villagers tonight told stories about the ghosts that haunt the castle. They live in fear of "the lady in black," a female Bluebeard, who had six husbands in the course of 88 years.

On her daily walk through the castle hall the bride will pass the life-size picture of this beautiful woman who was Anna, daughter of Wilhelm Neumann.

Neuman was a commoner who acquired great wealth from the local lead and mercury mines. He bought the castle from impoverished barons in 1522 and restored the manor house, which then was in ruins.

Eleven years later Anna was born to Neumann and his wife. She was a beautiful child and grew into a beautiful, but mean woman.

London Couples Seek To Weed at Same Hour

London, June 2 (U.P.).—Romantic London couples determined to marry on the same day, at the same hour as the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield stormed London's marriage registry offices today.

"I've tried my best to squeeze in three couples at the same hour, besides about a dozen others later in the day," a West End marrying registrar said.

By the United Press.

Monts, Frane, June 2.—Wallis Warfield will be married tomorrow in a gown of "Wallis blue" crepe, a shade between pastel and hyacinth blue which exactly matches her eyes.

This new shade, Edward's favorite blue, was dyed especially for her by Mainbocher, and is the keynote of her trousseau of 80 dresses and 40 hats.

The floor-length wedding gown is made with a high, draped neckline and is worn with a fitted, long-sleeved jacket of the same "Wallis blue." The jacket is shirred slightly at the shoulders to give fullness and is shirred in a band at the high neck and again at the waist to give fullness at the bodice. It fastens with a series of small, crepe-covered buttons.

Mrs. Warfield has chosen a lame creation for her wedding night. The garment is a sophisticated model in sapphire blue and shining silver crepe, and is made along close-fitting lines, with a long swirling skirt. It is equipped with a zipper, decorated with sapphires in the back.

Naturally there were no price tags attached to any of Mrs. Warfield's gowns, but the honeymoon collection was estimated by style experts familiar with Parisian prices to have cost $10,000.

The Duke of Windsor will wear a cutaway, or morning suit, with gray striped trousers, a black coat, black waistcoat with small reveres, white shirt, wing collar and a gray ascot tie with a pearl stick pin. He will wear a small boutonniere of white flowers.

The best man, Maj. Edward D. Metcalf, known as "Fruity" to his friends, will be similarly dressed. Metcalf for many years was an equerry to the Duke of Windsor, but at present holds no official court position.

Mrs. Warfield will be given in marriage by her friend, Herman Livingston Rogers, of New York. He and his wife, the former Katherine Moore, were hosts of Mrs. Warfield in Cannes at their home, Villa Lou Viei, and later accompanied her to the Chateau de Cande. Rogers also will wear morning clothes.

Bank Stocks Rally From Low of May

New York, June 2.—New York City bank stocks yielded little ground during May, according to Hoit, Rose & Troster. The 17 leading issues in the weighted average declined 4 2-3 points from the month's high of 67.66, on May 5, to the month's low of 62.99 on May 18.

A rally, however, carried the average back to 67.21 on May 24 and at the month's close of 65.12 on May 28, half of the early month's decline had been regained.

W.C.T.U. Victor In Fight to Ban Tap Room Sign

Hotel Agrees to Remove Label During Session, Opening Today.

A sign bearing the legend, "Tap Room," still swung prominently last night in the lobby of the Hotel Washington, headquarters of the World's Women Christian Temperance Union conventions, as final plans for the opening session this morning were made by the executive committee.

As a result of vigorous protests from the anti-tap room women, the hotel has promised to remove the sign before the convention actually begins. The tap room still will be there, however. The delegates have been able to find only two dry hotels in the city.

More than 1,000 women arrived in Washington yesterday to attend the convention. About 200 of the 350 official delegates from the United States and 36 other countries were registered.

The convention will be opened at 9:30 a. m. at Constitution Hall by the world president, Dr. Ella A. Boole, of Brooklyn. Reports will be read, amendments to the constitution considered and the activities of the past three years reviewed.

At the afternoon session, which begins at 2, speakers will be Miss Mary B. Ervin, secretary of the Loyal Temperance Legion, and Mrs. Mary B. Egbert, world W. C. T. U. representative in Central America. Following the meeting, delegates and visitors will proceed to Statuary Hall in the Capitol, where tribute will be paid to Frances E. Willard.

A "welcome night" program at 8 o'clock will feature a message from President Roosevelt to be read by Secretary of State Cordell Hull. Greetings will be given by Dr. John W. Studebaker, federal director of education; Dr. Edwin Holt Hughes, senior bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mrs. E. V. Pugh, of the Federation of Church Women.

Closing pre-convention activities yesterday included a young people's rally at the First Congregational Church and a worship service at Calvary Baptist Church followed by tea.

'Sunshine' Browning Gets $1,500 Monthly

New York, June 2 (A).—Surrogate James A. Delehanty today granted the petition of Mrs. Dorothy Browning Hood, of Dunn, N. C., adopted daughter of the late Edward W. (Daddy) Browning, for a special allowance of $1,500 of her distributive share of the wealthy real estate operator's portune.

Mrs. Hood, who was known as "Sunshine" Browning, disclosed in her application she has been receiving $1,000 monthly from the executors of the estate, the Title Guarantee & Trust Co., since October, 1936.

Services Are Held For Dr. Richards

Funeral services for Dr. William H. Richards, 83, widely known Knoxville, Tenn., dentist and for years president of the Dental Association of the South, were held yesterday in Knoxville.

Dr. Richards, who was a frequent visitor in Washington, died Monday in Nashville, Tenn. He was well known as a poet and a contributor to newspapers.

Surviving Dr. Richards are a son, Merrill Edwards, of Texas, and a daughter, Mrs. Alexandria Andreas, of New Mexico. He also leaves two nieces, Mrs. S. McDowell Meek, of 1735 Lanier place northwest, and Mrs. Frank Hansborough, of Arlington, Va.

Handy Installed Lions Club Head

Other officers installed included H. M. Brundage, first vice president; R. I. Pollio, second vice president; Randy Myers, secretary; Vergne W. Potter, treasurer; F. William Loetsch, lion tamer, and Ernest W. Allwine, tail twister.

Woman Indicted On Forgery Count

The District Grand Jury yesterday indicted Catherine Bausman, 23, said to be serving a jail term in Maryland for forgery, on five charges of forging and uttering checks in the District several years ago. The statute of limitations would expire to prevent prosecution of the charges within two months, it was explained, the charges having originated in 1934.

Alfred Mabes and Lew Kekenes, larceny after trust; Darnell Kinard, Ethel Brown, Jesse M. Bivins, Elmira Helen Holbert and Robert Lindsey, robbery; James Henderson and James Conton, attempted robbery; Mike Katsaras, assault with a dangerous weapon and assault with intent to kill; Michael J. Sullivan, incest; Andrew R. Myers, Samuel Pones, violation of the liquor taxing act of 1934; Sam Bradley, Ramon Montanez, Thomas Newman and Coleridge Williams, gaming charges; Bernard Dent, violation of section 338-a, Title 18, U. S. Code, and Philip Ebert, non-support.

Tourists to Spend 4½ Billion in '37, A. A. A. Estimates

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

American tourists will spend $4,500,000,000 for their vacations this year, the American Automobile Association estimated last night on the basis of preseason predictions from State and other travel agencies. This will be an all-time high.

Indications, the association said, are that the tourist business is booming more vigorously this year than stock quotations and that 45,000,000 citizens have or will take to the highways to spend an average of $100 each.

The association estimates $500,000,000 more will be spent this year than last as vacationists take to the highways in automobiles, trailers, motorcycles, and even bicycles. The depression low point on tourist expenditures was in 1932, when only $2,000,000,000 was paid out by financially hard-pressed citizens. The 1929 boom period figure was $3,800,000,000.

Queen in Confinement, Noisy Crows Are Slain

Sofia, Bulgaria, June 2 (U.P.).—Thousands of crows in a park across the street from the royal palace are being killed and poisoned as a prelude to the second confinement of Queen Giovanna. The constant cawing finally became a nuisance.
